"Why!" Walker demanded, as the Queen of Crime clawed at her eyes, making every mistake in the book as she tried desperately to do something about the tear gas blinding her.

"I THOUGHT YOU WERE FRIENDS... YOU WERE ONE OF US!" WALKER CURSED, REALISING HOW WEAK HIS POSITION WAS. SHE TOWERED OVER HIM, AND THE STREAMING EYES AND IRRITATION OF HER THROAT AND NOSE WOULD ONLY LAST SO LONG.

"Big mistake, walker!" The queen said, suddenly standing at her full size. All she'd have to do was move, and even by accident she could make a pancake of him.

The time for conversation could wait until she wasn't quite so gigantic Walker decided, and so like his men he got off his marks. As if on cue, one of the queen gigantic boots lifted off the floor...

"That you walker, did I get you?" the queen roared, her voice rasping and coughing as the powerful gas made it's mark on even her gigantic biology.

"Watch out for her boot!" Walker warned his men, as the shadow of the queens massive footwear swept over the other men in the street.

But too late, as her foot smashed down, two of his men vanishing under her huge heels.

"Gah!" The queen coughed, stumbling suddenly. The gas was strangling her, making it hard for her to breathe, impossible for her to see. Walker took the opportunity to escape. He was going to need something bigger to hurt the queen. A lot bigger.

"Fucks sake..." The queen coughed, then turned. Walker had no clue where she was going, but he felt a great pity for anyone on the way there.

The queen stumbled right, turning onto a busy street. Her eyes streamed with tears and every breath was laboured. She couldn't see much, save for a steady swarm of multi coloured blobs far below.

Her next step caught something far below, and the queen wondered what new carnage she was causing simply by walking along the street. She cursed walker one last time, because of him she was missing out on all the deliscious fun.

"Gah... you fuckers are lucky I can't see, or I would have squashed twice as many of you by now!" the queen roared, still sweeping her hand along the rooftops. It had to be here somewhere...

Suddenly and entirely by chance, her hand landed on the thing she was looking for.
"Finally!" She groaned, closing her gigantic fingers around the rooftop water bowser.

"Perfect!" she almost cheered, giving a gentle pull to the tiny object to release it's hold on the rooftop.

But after only a few seconds, her pain and impatience got the better of her. She wrenched and ripped, pulling the little container clear of the roof...

The pilot swung himself around in his seat, getting a closer look.

"Fuck me!" He exclaimed. "Is that who I think it is?" He added.

"Come on Sophie... talk to me here!" Todd insisted, helping the frail and weak form of the mighty rampage along an alleyway.

"Who was that back there? Just what was that weird rock? What did she do to you?" Todd asked every question that sprung to mind.

"Why... do you want to know?"
She managed, even her voice seemed weakened.
"So I can help, so I can try and do something about this mess!"
Todd persisted.

"You mean the mess that YOU caused? Because you couldn't keep it in your pants? Because you just had to get your own back, and lure me out for the queen of fucking crime?" Sophie snapped.
"Oh, shrink down Sophie, lets talk" She mocked his voice. "Great idea, you retard. If I was giant, I would have stomped her flat in a heartbeat!" She snarled at him.

"Alright, I fucked up. But you did throw a great white at me, Sophie. Then you squashed my buddies, and ate my work crew." Todd said, weakly.

"I gave you everything Todd. I trusted you." Sophie squeaked. She was fighting back tears, Todd could tell.
"I..." Todd prepared to explain to the now weakened Sophie that she'd hurt him way more than he'd hurt her. But maybe that wasn't true. She'd trusted him with her true identity... and he'd thrown it in her face.
"Know. Let me earn it back, Sophie. Let me make it right." He asked.

"Fine. Just... don't fuck it up, Todd." Sophie said.
"Okay, what do I do?" Todd asked, suddenly full of gusto and energy.
"See if the keys are in that car. Then help me steal it." Sophie asked him.

"Okay, okay... jeez." Todd mumbled. The keys were in the ignition, the taxi had clearly been abandoned in favour of running from the queen on foot. "Where are we going?" Todd asked, as he closed the door on them both.

For a moment, Sophie didn't reply. She seemed to be in pain, and incredibly weak and tired. For a second, Todd thought she might have passed out, but eventually she croaked. "Back to where it all started."

"Head east. There's a secluded trail, out into the woods. Just past the truck stop... there's a crater." She said, as Todd started the engine, and pulled out into the chaos of the city streets.

"A crater? Like a bomb crater or something?" Todd asked.
"No. A meteorite." Sophie replied, short and abrupt, as though she was in no mood to elaborate.

"I was angry... of course I was. I was always angry back then. My boyfriend at the time had said something... stupid. Or maybe I did. I can't remember, really. I was calling for a ride home when I saw it."

"A shooting star. Or so I thought, at first. It streaked across the sky, getting closer and closer. It shot right over my head, so close I could feel the heat coming off it."

"I WAS SO EXCITED, A REASON TO DO SOMETHING OTHER THAN DEAL WITH MY BOYFRIEND... I CRAWLED THOUGH THE FOREST, LOOKING FOR THE PLACE WHERE IT'D COME DOWN."

"There was a huge crater, blasted right into the forest just outside town."

"...AND SITTING RIGHT THERE INSIDE... A METEORITE. I WAS THE FIRST ONE THERE, I WAS SO AFRAID... BUT SOMETHING INSIDE ME MADE ME WALK CLOSER."

"I CLIMBED DOWN TO GET A CLOSER LOOK... IT WAS HOT, STILL GLOWING FROM RE-ENTRY I GUESS. BUT THERE WAS THIS URGE, THIS DESIRE. IT MADE ME WANT NOTHING MORE THAN TO TOUCH IT."

"But about a split second before I did, I heard a voice... half a dozen voices. There were a group of soldiers up on the lip of the crater, and every one of them ha d a gun pointed at me. Back then I was a just a bony girl, I wasn't invulnerable. I... panicked."

"They were shouting. I was screaming. I was rooted to the spot with terror, Todd."

"Then, suddenly there was a woman. Not in military uniform, no body armour... and I didn't see a gun. But the way she held her flashlight, in the low light it obscured her face. I squinted when she shined it on me, and I was terrified. Until now, I didn't know who she was."

""Get her out of there, she'll contaminate my sample." She said, gruffly. Next thing I know..."

"Two of the soldier guys are scrambling down the crater and running right at me. I was young then Todd, I was afraid. I did what any dumb twentysomething would do."

"I PANICKED. I BACKED UP. I FELL."

"Right onto the damned meteor."

"I was expecting to die, honestly. But instead... a rush. A high... I'd never felt anything like it. To this day, the scientific explanation is lost on me. From that day on I was changed... I didn't care why it happened... only that it did, and it'd never go away. The power, the energy, the fuckin... source... whatever it is, it flowed into me like a river."

"I WAS SO POWERFUL, I COULD FEEL MYSELF JUST... GETTING STRONGER..."

"AND STRONGER."

"But it didn't stop. It was like I had a sixth sense. Taste, Smell, Sight, Touch, Hearing..."

"And size."

"I can't explain it, Todd. That's the best I could do. It was like having a new muscle."

"Only when I flexed it..."

"I GOT BIGGER."

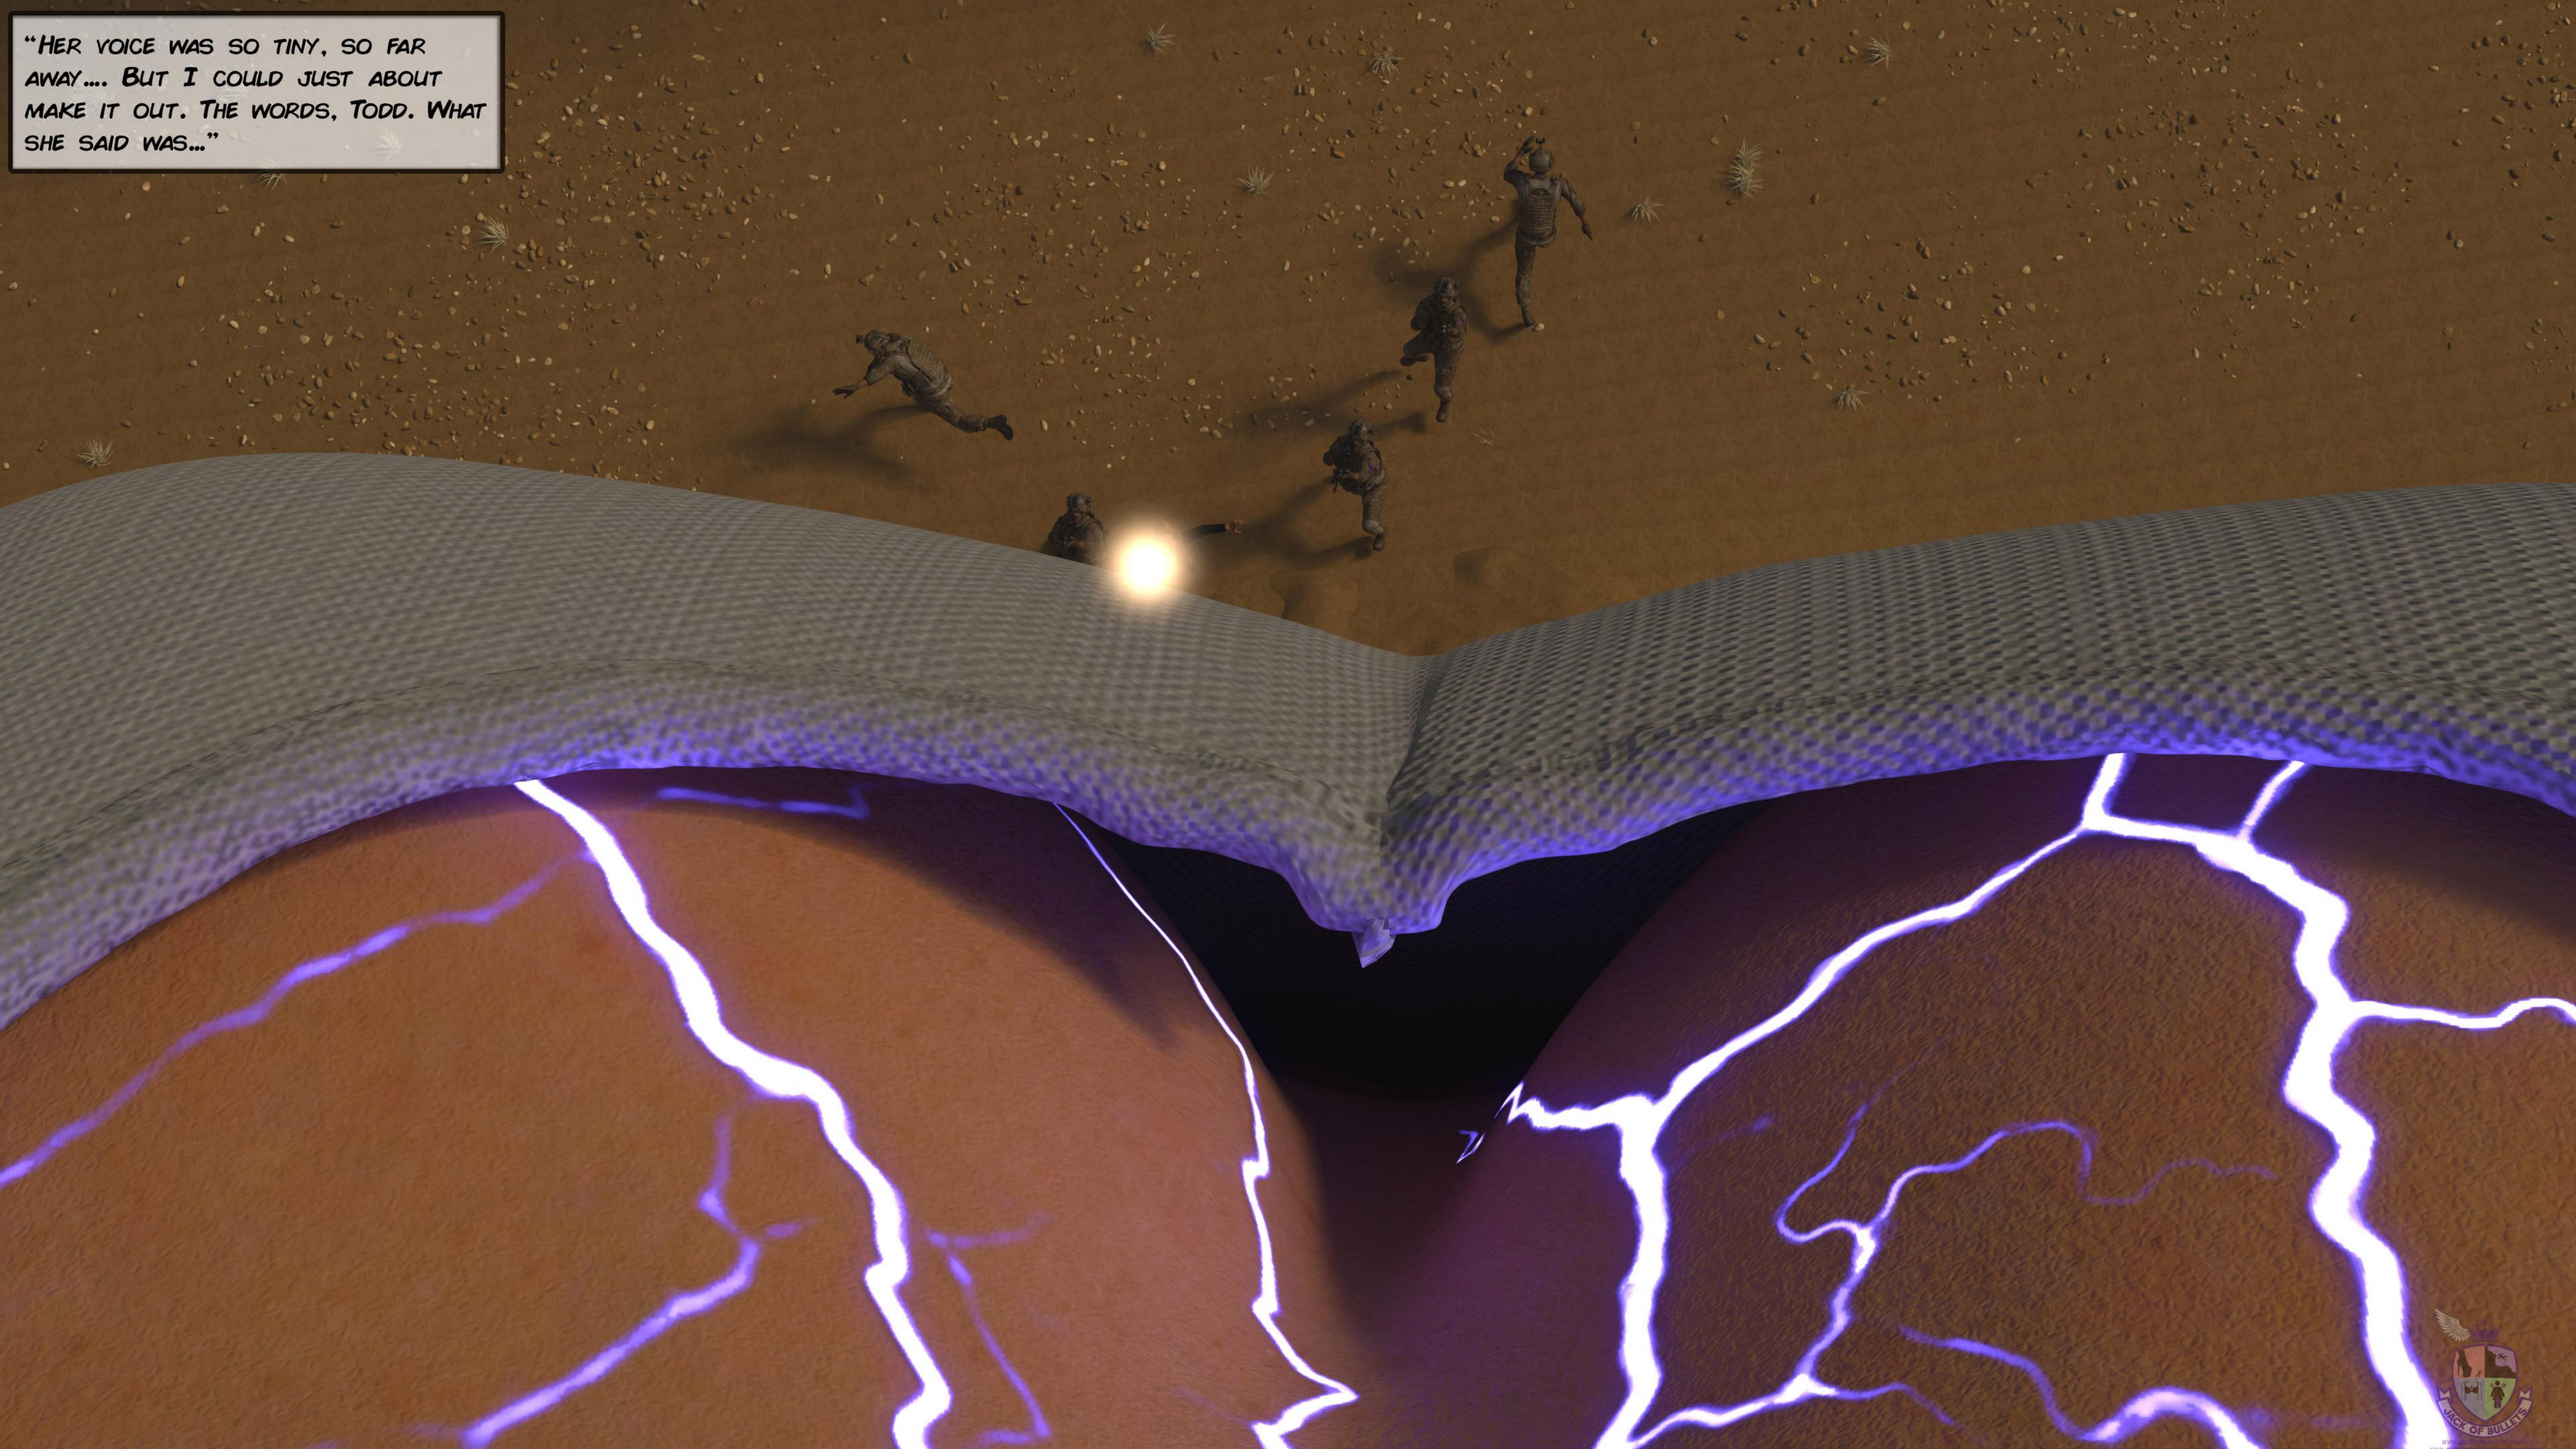
"A LOT BIGGER."

"I'D GONE FROM BONY NOBODY TO GIANT, MUSCULAR SUPERWOMAN IN ABOUT FIFTEEN SECONDS. I BET YOU CANT EVEN IMAGINE WHAT THAT FEELS LIKE... BUT IT WAS INTOXICATING."

"Suddenly, all the scary soldiers and their guns were toys. And they were running away from me. Well, a few of them were."

"There was a moment, when I stood up to my full height, where I was completely disoriented. For a few seconds, I was so dizzy I could hardly see. I don't know if it was my blood rushing up so high, the lack of gravity, the thin air... or maybe just having absolutely no visual frame of reference for size, given I was the biggest thing in the world and all."

"I was two hundred feet tall, in a matter of seconds. I was on top of the world... or so I thought. I couldn't see their tiny little faces, including the woman in the suit. They were so small and so far away... but that's when she said it."



"Her voice was so tiny, so far away.... But I could just about make it out. The words, Todd. What she said was..."

"Hold your fire, she's too valuable! But if she takes one step towards us... she's all yours!"

"ALL YOURS!"

"Rampage... I'm all yours..."

"Todd... the woman who was there on that night at the crash site... the woman who's been 'interviewing' me all these years... the queen of crime...."

"It's Kelly Clarke."

"Oh... you little bastards are in trouble now!" Kelly roared.

"My god... Channel 6 Kelly Clarke? Channel 6 eyewitness news Kelly Clarke?" Todd erupted, as they passed the city limits, doing 90 in the stolen cab.

"The same." Sophie breathed.
"Damn... so she figured out what the space rock did... and used my dumb ass to lower your guard..." Todd breathed, realising how his foolishness had unleashed a power hungry mad-woman on the city.
"Wait... so what happened next?" Todd asked.
"I thought I was invincible. Hell, I was invincible... but I didn't know that yet."

"I WASN'T GOING TO STEP ON THEM. I PROMISE. DON'T LOOK AT ME LIKE THAT."

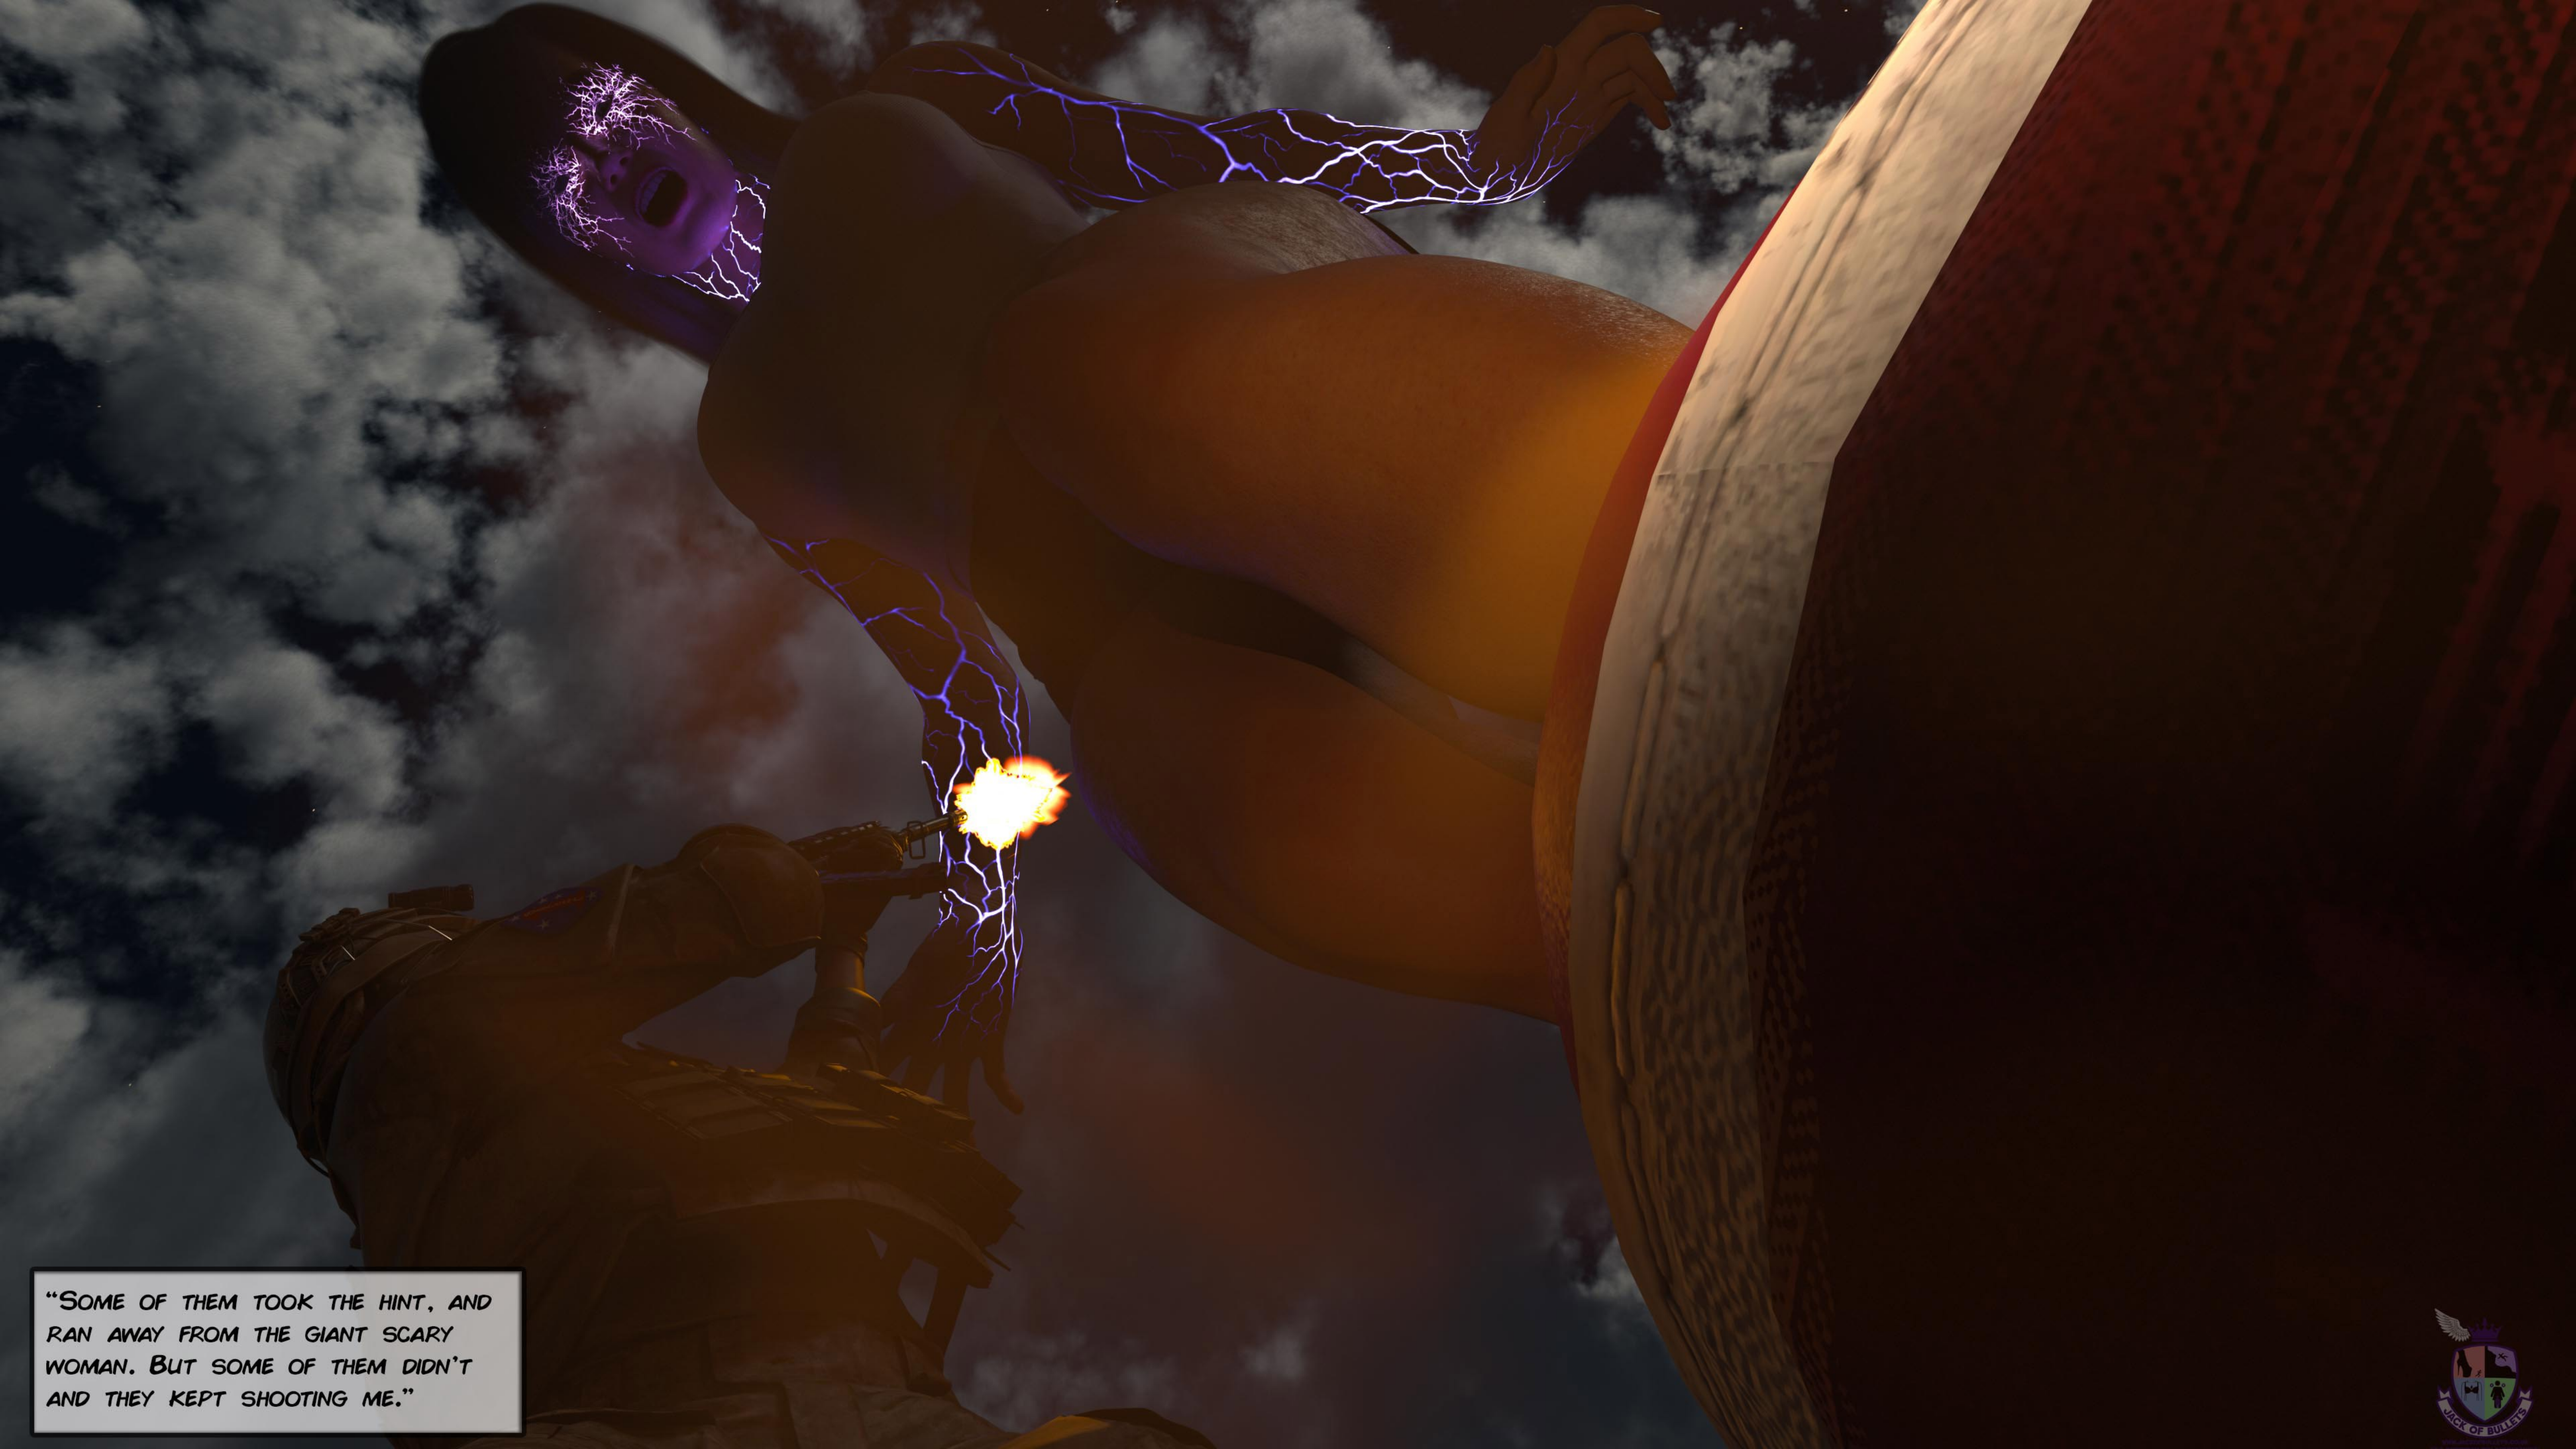
"I WAS GOING TO STEP OVER THEM."

"But they started shooting at me. When they opened up on me, I panicked. In my head I was still five-five, and 70 pounds soaking wet."

"You know me Todd. I have a tendency to kind of..."

"LASH OUT."

"In my defence... well, I suppose it was self defense. Which seems ludicrous, but yeah... I stepped on one of them."



"Some of them took the hint, and ran away from the giant scary woman. But some of them didn't and they kept shooting me."

"I won't say I was panicking the second time. In find, you could say I was starting to get the hang of being a goddess."

"So I carefully, very precisely made sure my foot was only on the one still shooting..."

"Then I slowly, very carefully, very definetly..."

"Stepped on him as well."

"The rest of them bolted. They ran for the treeline, hoping to break my line of sight."

"While I was thinking very deep thoughts about what I'd done. The little woman and her two cronies made the treeline. I lost sight of them mostly, except the occasional twinkle of light that cut through the canopy, coming from her flashlight."

"I DIDN'T SEE WHAT WAS HAPPENING. NOT REALLY."
POLICE

"But another shot rang out from the trees, so I.... well. You know."

"They did shoot me, Todd."

"I SAW THE FLASHLIGHT GLIMPSE AGAIN, MOVING THROUGH THE TREES, AND I SORT OF... PANICKED. I KNEW SHE WAS IN CHARGE, SHE GAVE THE ORDER TO SHOOT ME. IN THE MOMENT, I FELT LIKE I SHOULD... WELL, CRUSH HER."

"Honestly... I thought I got her." Sophie shrugged. "I thought I got all of them."
"I guess not huh..." Todd whimpered.
"So... what happens now?"
"We go back to the crater. If there's any of that... I don't know, cosmic power left, then it'll be there. If Kelly's been studying the space rock this whole time, maybe she missed it." Sophie said, hopefully. Todd knew this was a longshot... but what choice did they have, when faced with the alternative.

"Wait a second... we're going back to where the meteorite hit? You think these guys... these G-men would just leave a magic space rock there for years? Without caring if anyone else found it?" Todd asked, confused.

"Of course not Todd, don't be an idiot. In fact, I'm counting on it." Sophie smiled, for the first time since Todd had tricked her into shrinking.

"Why? How?" he asked.

"Because the power isn't in the rock, Todd. That's where the G-men screwed up." Sophie said, adding "The rock absorbed it. The rock carried it here, to the earth. That's what the rock does. It stores the cosmic energy, or whatever it is. The power... or whatever is left of it is in the crater... I'm sure of it." She concluded.

"Oh, look at the big, brave copper!" Kelly snarled down, striding easily through the city streets now that she could see.

"Really?" She smirked, as the cop opened fire, throwing a magazine of nine-millimetre into her colossal, indestructible body.

"You must really want my attention, pig." She sniffed, reaching down quickly to seize the guy with tree-trunk fingers.

She picked him up with thumb and forefinger, still marvelling at how her titanic size made everything around her look like toys. She hoisted her toy cop into the air above her model city...

"You're going to need something bigger than that little popgun, little pig." Kelly said, disinterested.

Then pausing. She considered chewing the little copper, as she had the other people she'd eaten up to this point. But something told her to try something new...

Perhaps it was all this new attention, the people running and screaming, the brave men dying under her boots, or trying to get out of her mouth. Perhaps it was the news helicopter following her every move. With a smile, Kelly swallowed hard, allowing the cop to slide down her throat and vanish into her stomach. She smiled at the news chopper, wondering how much of the wicked act they'd caught.

So Kelly plucked him from the wreckage...

"Yum yum..." She mumbled as once again, she began to close her giant hand around the pathetic can.

"Out you come..." Kelly cooed, adding more pressure slowly but surely, hoping for the same result as when she'd pulverised the little red car.

And Kelly got what she wanted, two tiny men exploded out of the vans back door, clawing for free air.

"Boss! Wait!" Ramon cried out, his attention split between his colossal employers sick smile, and her gigantic fingers closing the steel of the van around his legs.
"It's Ramon! And Carlos!" He added, in a scream a few octaves higher than he'd initially planned.

"Hmmm. Kelly rumbled, a thoughtful sound that was almost a roll of thunder.
"So?" She asked.

"Boss there's stuff you need to know! And we can't get your attention for shit when you're... you know!" Carlos added, peeking over the door of the van as though it might protect him in some way.

"Go on." Kelly groaned, bored by this interruption. Her time was much better spent now, given her final plan was finally in fruition.
"Boss! The guys you put on Rampage and that doofus? They're saying she's headed out of town!" Carlos added.

"Everyone's headed out of town, you imbecile. A fucking giant woman is smashing the place up." Kelly told them, feeling a rising sense of irritation. Her impatience for her sycophantic lackeys was high, but not this high. Kelly spent a scant second or two wondering why that was, before the tiny man interrupted her train of thought again.
"Yeah, but boss, you don't get it. She aint going with the crowd, they stole a cab and theyre headed..." Ramon began, but the giantess cut him off.

"Let me guess. North. To an old disused lab complex?" Kelly said, smug and grinning. She thought she had it all figured out. Thought she knew everything. Thought that rampage would be headed to the space rock, to try and steal her powers back. "That place was mothballed a long time ago. My research is complete, the rock is useless." She concluded the thought for him.

"No boss. She stole a taxi, She's headed east. To some old crater in the forest or some shit. Aurelio's had to recall his drone cos of the battery but -" Carlos began, but a sound like an explosion cut him off.

"WHAT!" KELLY ROARED, THE SLIGHTEST DEVIATION IN HER MASTER PLAN AT THIS STAGE ENOUGH TO DRIVE HER ANGER SKY HIGH. SOME PART OF KELLY KNEW IT SHOULDN'T, KNEW THAT SHE WAS IN CONTROL. BUT THIS BODY, THIS STATE... IT WAS AFFECTING HER SOMEHOW.
APARTMENTS

Kelly closed her eyes, shutting out the anger and the desire to crush, kill and destroy. There was something she was missing, and she needed her mind clear to figure it out. She'd spent ten years studying the space rock. There was no power left within it, if there was she'd have found it. The space rock absorbs the power, that's why she was a hundred feet tall right now.
But wait...
What if...

KELLY'S GIANT BLOOD FROZE IN HER GIANT VEINS.
SHE'D BEEN LOOKING IN THE WRONG PLACE. FOR YEARS. SHE'D BEEN OBSESSED WITH THE ROCK ITSELF, WITH WHAT COSMIC ENERGY HAD BEEN ABSORBED BY SOPHIE STRONG.
THAT LITTLE BITCH KNEW SOMETHING SHE DIDN'T.

"Your services are no longer required." She told the two men clinging to the van crumpled in her hand.
"Ri...right." Carlos began. Any other time, if he got fired, he might've stuck up for himself. But when a two hundred foot woman fires you, you just take it.
"Can you uh... put us down please?" Ramon asked.

"No." Kelly said, reaching with her free hand, fingers poised to snatch them both up...

LIFT THEM HIGH...

AND EAT THEM BOTH.

Kelly thought hard as she savoured the delights of her two former henchmen.
It would have taken her around half an hour to drive to the crash site, just outside town. But now she was hundreds of feet tall... she could probably be there in minutes.
She was already burning time.

Kelly cursed her own hubris. She'd enjoyed herself too much, taken her eye off the ball by crushing and killing, she'd let her gigantic size go to her head. She set off at a fast walk, as fast as this massive body could manage. Sophie strong could not be allowed to become rampage again. She would allow no resistance to her absolute rule over the city.

"Sophie..." Todd began.
"Shut up, I'm concentrating."
Sophie snapped back.

"How long do you think..." Todd started again.
"Todd seriously, just... give me some time here." Sophie shut him down again.

Todd opened his mouth to speak to her again, but caught himself, hating how useless he felt. He placed himself right in the middle of two giant super-women, in between evil and... well, a little less evil.

"Oh mother of god..." Todd said, what little he could see of Kelly in the distance was no longer vanishing in between buildings as she casually walked around. She was walking with a purpose now... and if Todd had to put his money on it, he'd say she was headed right for them.

"Uhm... Sophie?" Todd said, shakily.

"I know. I've done this before, remember? The longer she stays big, the less she'll care about silly little things like... humans. It takes years of training to keep your cool when you're big, and even then, its sketchy at best. Unless you forgot, Loverboy?" Sophie said calmly, without opening her eyes or moving an inch.

"Please... if you're there... I know I've abused my gift... I know I'm a fool. But if you're there... Give me a second chance. I can make it all right, I swear." Sophie said to herself as much as the old dirt beneath her. The admission made her feel a little lighter, a little different, especially since that numbskull wasn't here to listen to it.

Todd looked back. There she was, focusing in a big hole in the ground, trying to undo his mistake. If he'd just loved her back, if he'd just kept his stupid mouth shut... the two of them would not be less than a minute from being eaten by a giant newscaster.
"you... you got this... right?" Todd asked.

"I said shut up Todd, this isn't an exact science." Sophie shot back. He remembered their date, their night of passion. All of that good will, all of those feelings were gone now. She hated him. And before long, the whole city would know what he'd done, one way or the other.
Todd turned back to the city in the distance, the one he'd doomed to be smashed by a giant psycho. She was getting closer, he could hear the booming foot steps, and the feel the little telltale vibrations in the floor that told him his doom was coming.

Todd bolted to the taxi. He couldn't help Sophie extract cosmic power that might not even be there anymore. But there was something he could do.

Todd swung the taxi out, back onto the winding road that'd brought them to the crater. If Sophie was right, the Kelly would riding high now, convinced of her own superiority. If Todd played his hand correctly, he might be able to buy Sophie a few extra precious seconds.

Kelly had been told about Sophie and That moron stealing a taxi. She smiled at her own magnificence, she'd gotten here soi quickly that she'd beaten them. Now all that remained was to open the tin can containing them, and let them slip down her throat.

She bent down with practiced ease. The red car, the van full of ex-employees, all that was simply a rehearsal.

She grabbed the taxi, scarcely able to contain her excitement. The metal buckled and bent and the glass shattered as she hefted the taxi up high.

She giggled as she played with her new toy car, swooping it through the air like an airplane, laughing and smirking as she did so. Finally, she brought the captured car to a rest, and peered inside...

"Oh.. it's just you, the pathetic runt who sold out the cities only hope for peace." Kelly grunted, snarling into the pathetic toy car in her hand.
"Oh wow, Kelly Clarke! I hardly recognised you without the reassuring graphics underneath. Say you look different than you do on TV. Taller, mainly. What's your thing, Heels?" Todd replied, scrambling as gravity shifted and shunted all around him. Finally alighting sideways in the taxi.

"Funny little jackass, aren't you?" Kelly started with a smirk. She turned the taxi in her hand, enjoying every second of Todds frantic scrambling, before adding "Where's Sophie?"
"Oh, we're going right to that? Don't journalists normally start with easier questions?" Todd countered, anything to antagonise her, anything to buy a few more seconds.

"Easy questions? Okay, how would you like to die, Todd? In my belly, or under my shoe?" Kelly asked, a sick and twisted smile splitting her face as she giggled at Todd's pathetic attempts to stay upright.
"Can I see the shoe before committing? I saw a guy go into one of Rampage's shoes once, didn't look all that appealing." Todd shot back.

"Talk, you little rodent! Where is Sophie strong!" Kelly snarled, her fist closing just a little tighter around the body of the taxi.
"You know, I don't know. I lost sight of her. It's easier now that she... you know... fits behind things." Todd went on. It was working, she was getting distracted, annoyed. Focussed on him, and his torment.

"Tell me what she's planning, worm!" Sophie spat, losing her patience.
"You're kidding right? If I knew how Sophie thought I'd still have a home, a car, a favourite hooker and a squash partner. Oh, and there wouldn't be a great white rotting on my tiled floor." Todd fired back. In his mind, hept repeating the phrase "this will be the last thing I say in my life." But it wasn't, not yet.

Unexpectedly, Kelly changed her approach.
"Come on Todd... we don't have to argue. Sophie's hurt you more than anyone. I can make it all better. Then you and I can become the best of friends." Sophie breathed, gently sliding him into her palm.
"That doesn't mean I want you to kill her, Kelly." Todd said back.
If he played the game, then maybe Sophie would have an extra few more seconds to do... whatever it was she was doing.

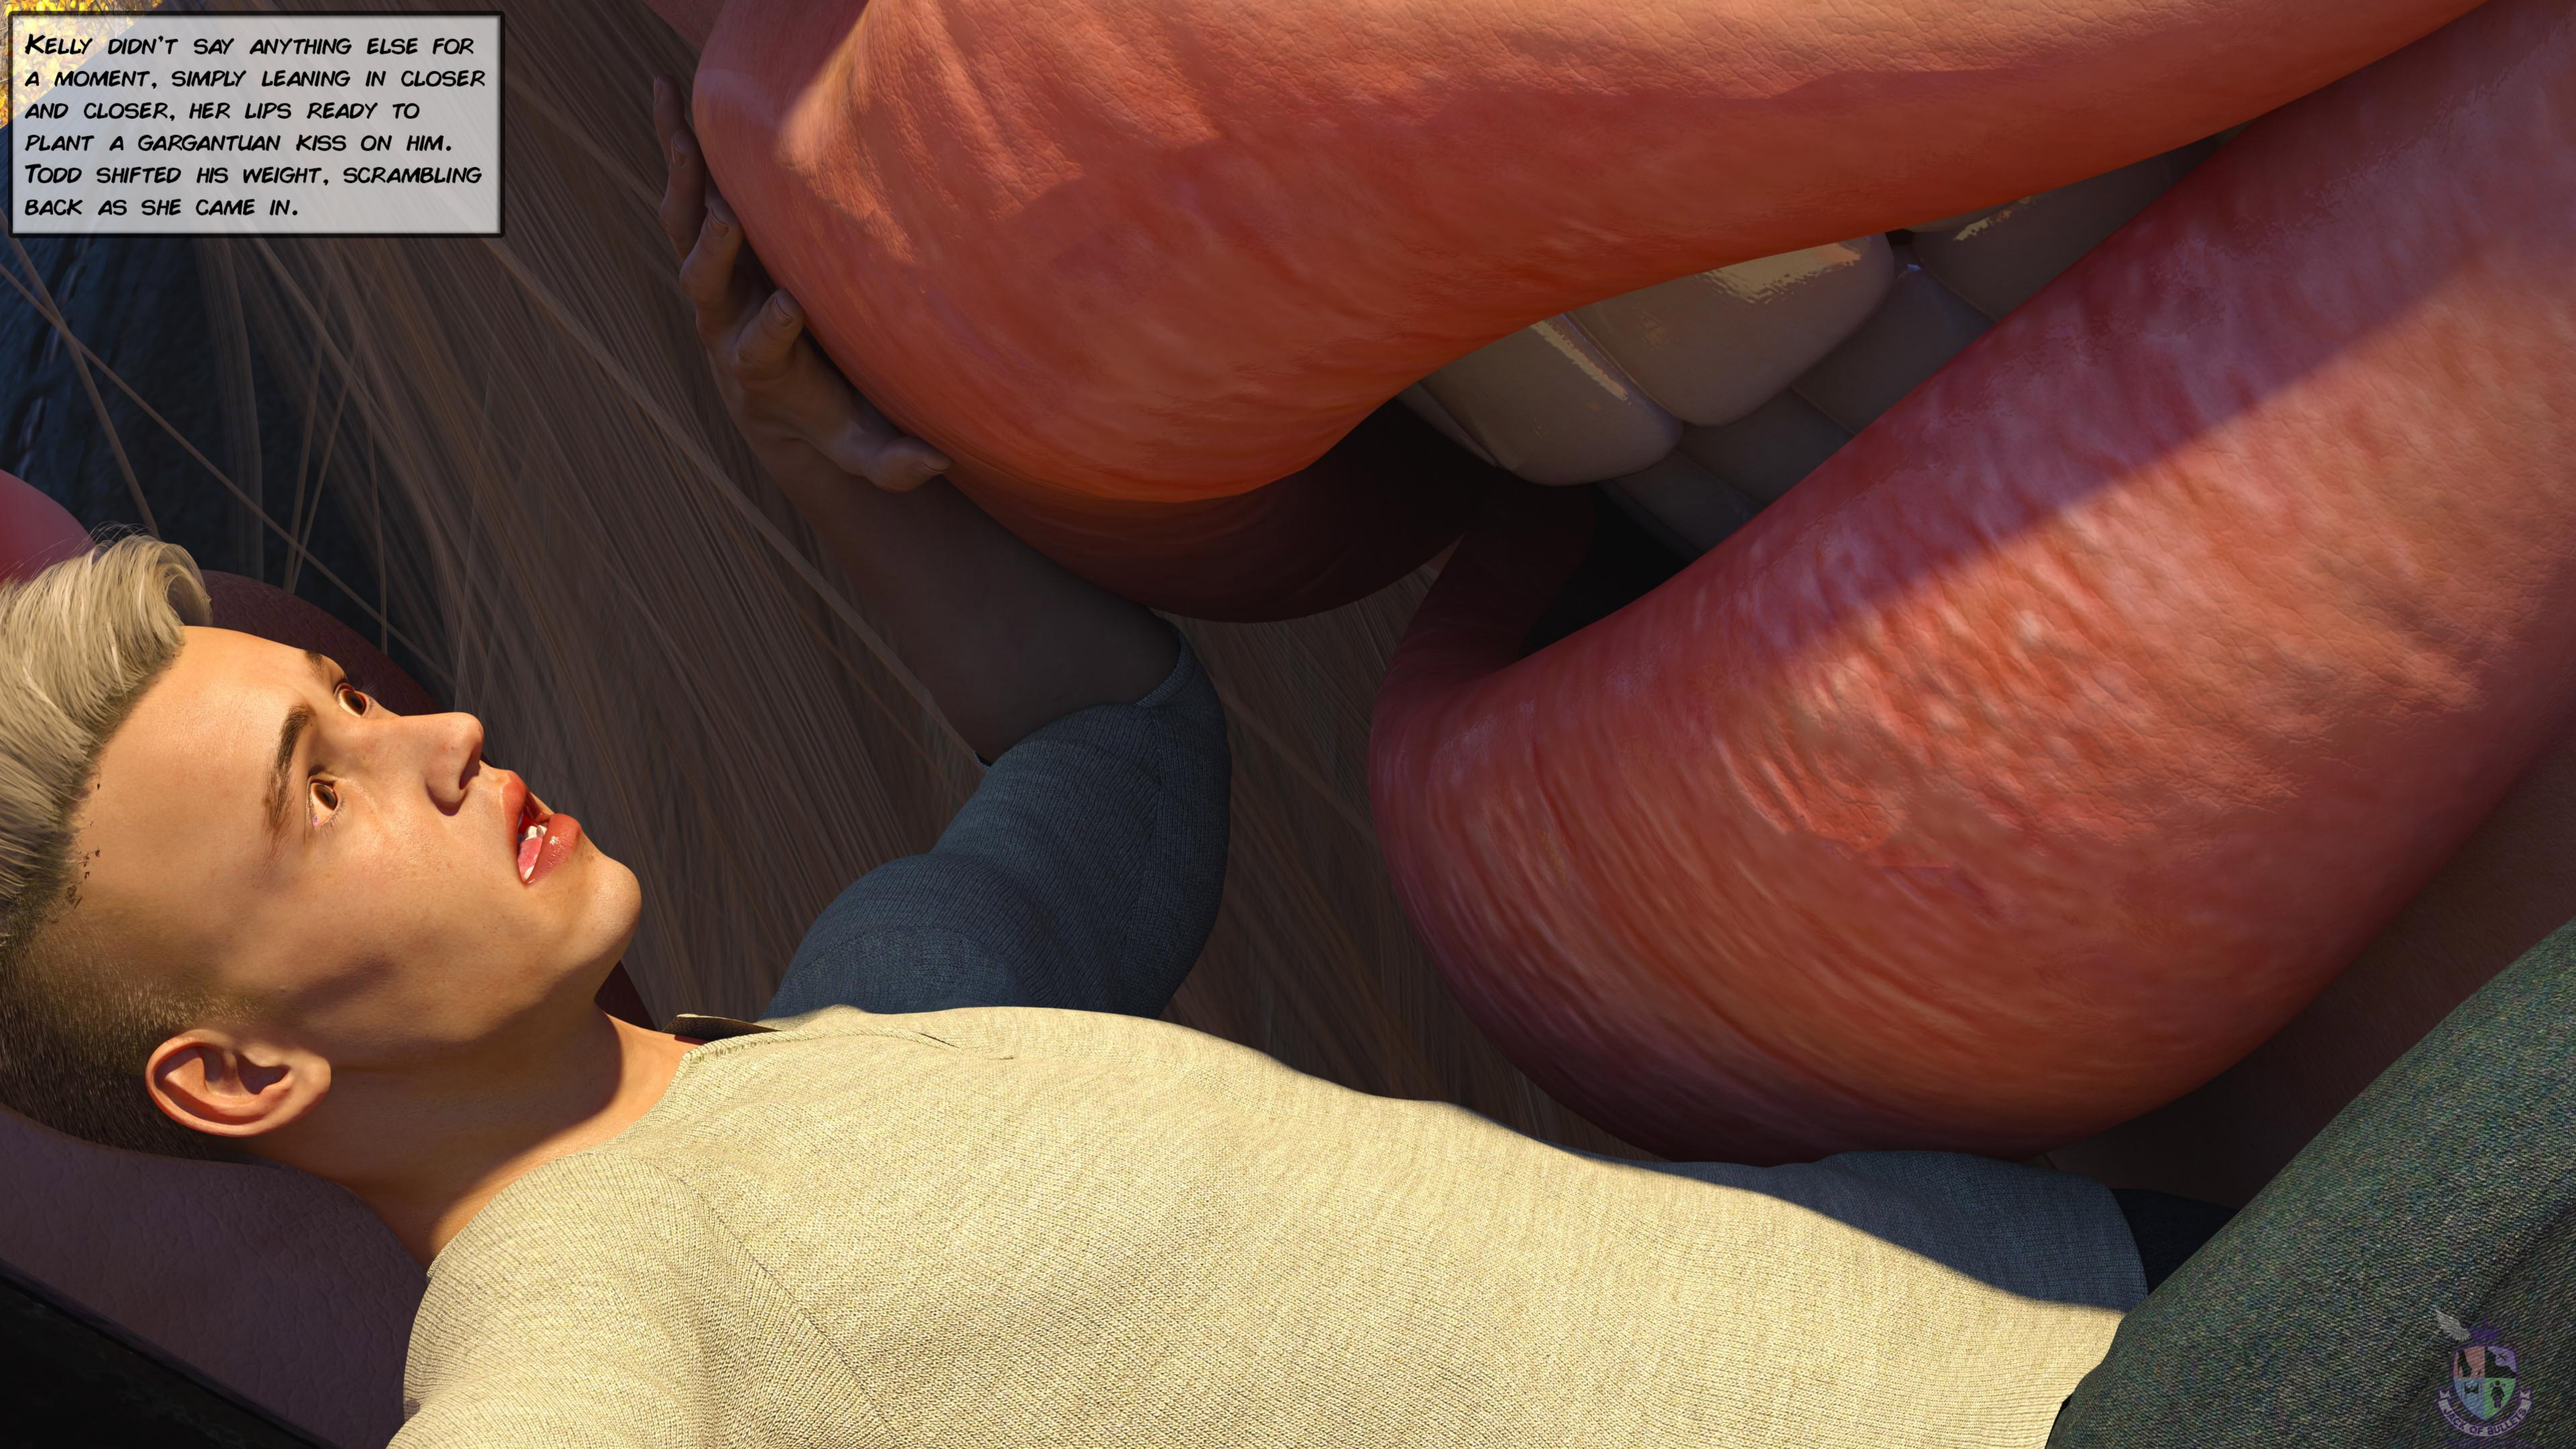
"Todd... be reasonable. A giant woman can offer you a lot. I can make you feel like no other woman could." Sophie cooed, her voice suddenly warm and welcoming.
"I don't doubt it. But I've dated a giant woman before. The brochure leaves out quite a lot." Todd said, trying to charm the colossal monster.

"Sophie never appreciated you."
Kelly spoke softly.
"You threatened to eat me twice, remember?" Todd said, as she bit her lip, leaning in closer and closer.

"Some men would find that exciting." Sophie said, husky and sweet.
"Some men haven't seen it happening." Todd countered quickly.



Kelly didn't say anything else for a moment, simply leaning in closer and closer, her lips ready to plant a gargantuan kiss on him. Todd shifted his weight, scrambling back as she came in.

Sophie couldn't hear every part of their conversation, but she could hear enough. Hear Kelly torturing poor Todd. Hear her change tracks and try to seduce that helpess numbskull.
"Once... you gave me the power to move mountains." Kelly said to the ground, beginning to feel the fear that there was nothing left here for her to take.

"I don't need that now. I just need a little bit. Just a fraction..."
Sophie breathed, clawing the ground, begging with every fibre of her being.
"Just a little. Just enough to save one more helpless person."
She said and closed her eyes.
Somewhere, deep beneath the soggy earth she was kneeling in... something stirred.

"Come on Todd... one kiss, then tell me if Sophie ever made you feel like I can." Kelly said, her voice smoky and alluring, she carried him easily back toward her lips. Todd crawled uselessly back across her massive hand, slowly shuffling towards a two hundred foot drop.

Todd slipped, scrambling for anything to hold onto, he found himself dangling from Kelly's finger like a lecherous flag. "Look, this is all very flattering, from your perspective." Todd began. "But I'm not sure if I'm ready to be with someone again. Maybe we can discuss it over coffee. At normal size."
Kelly couldn't help but supress a laugh at the plight of the pathetic fool. How could he not have seen the... drop.
What was he looking at?

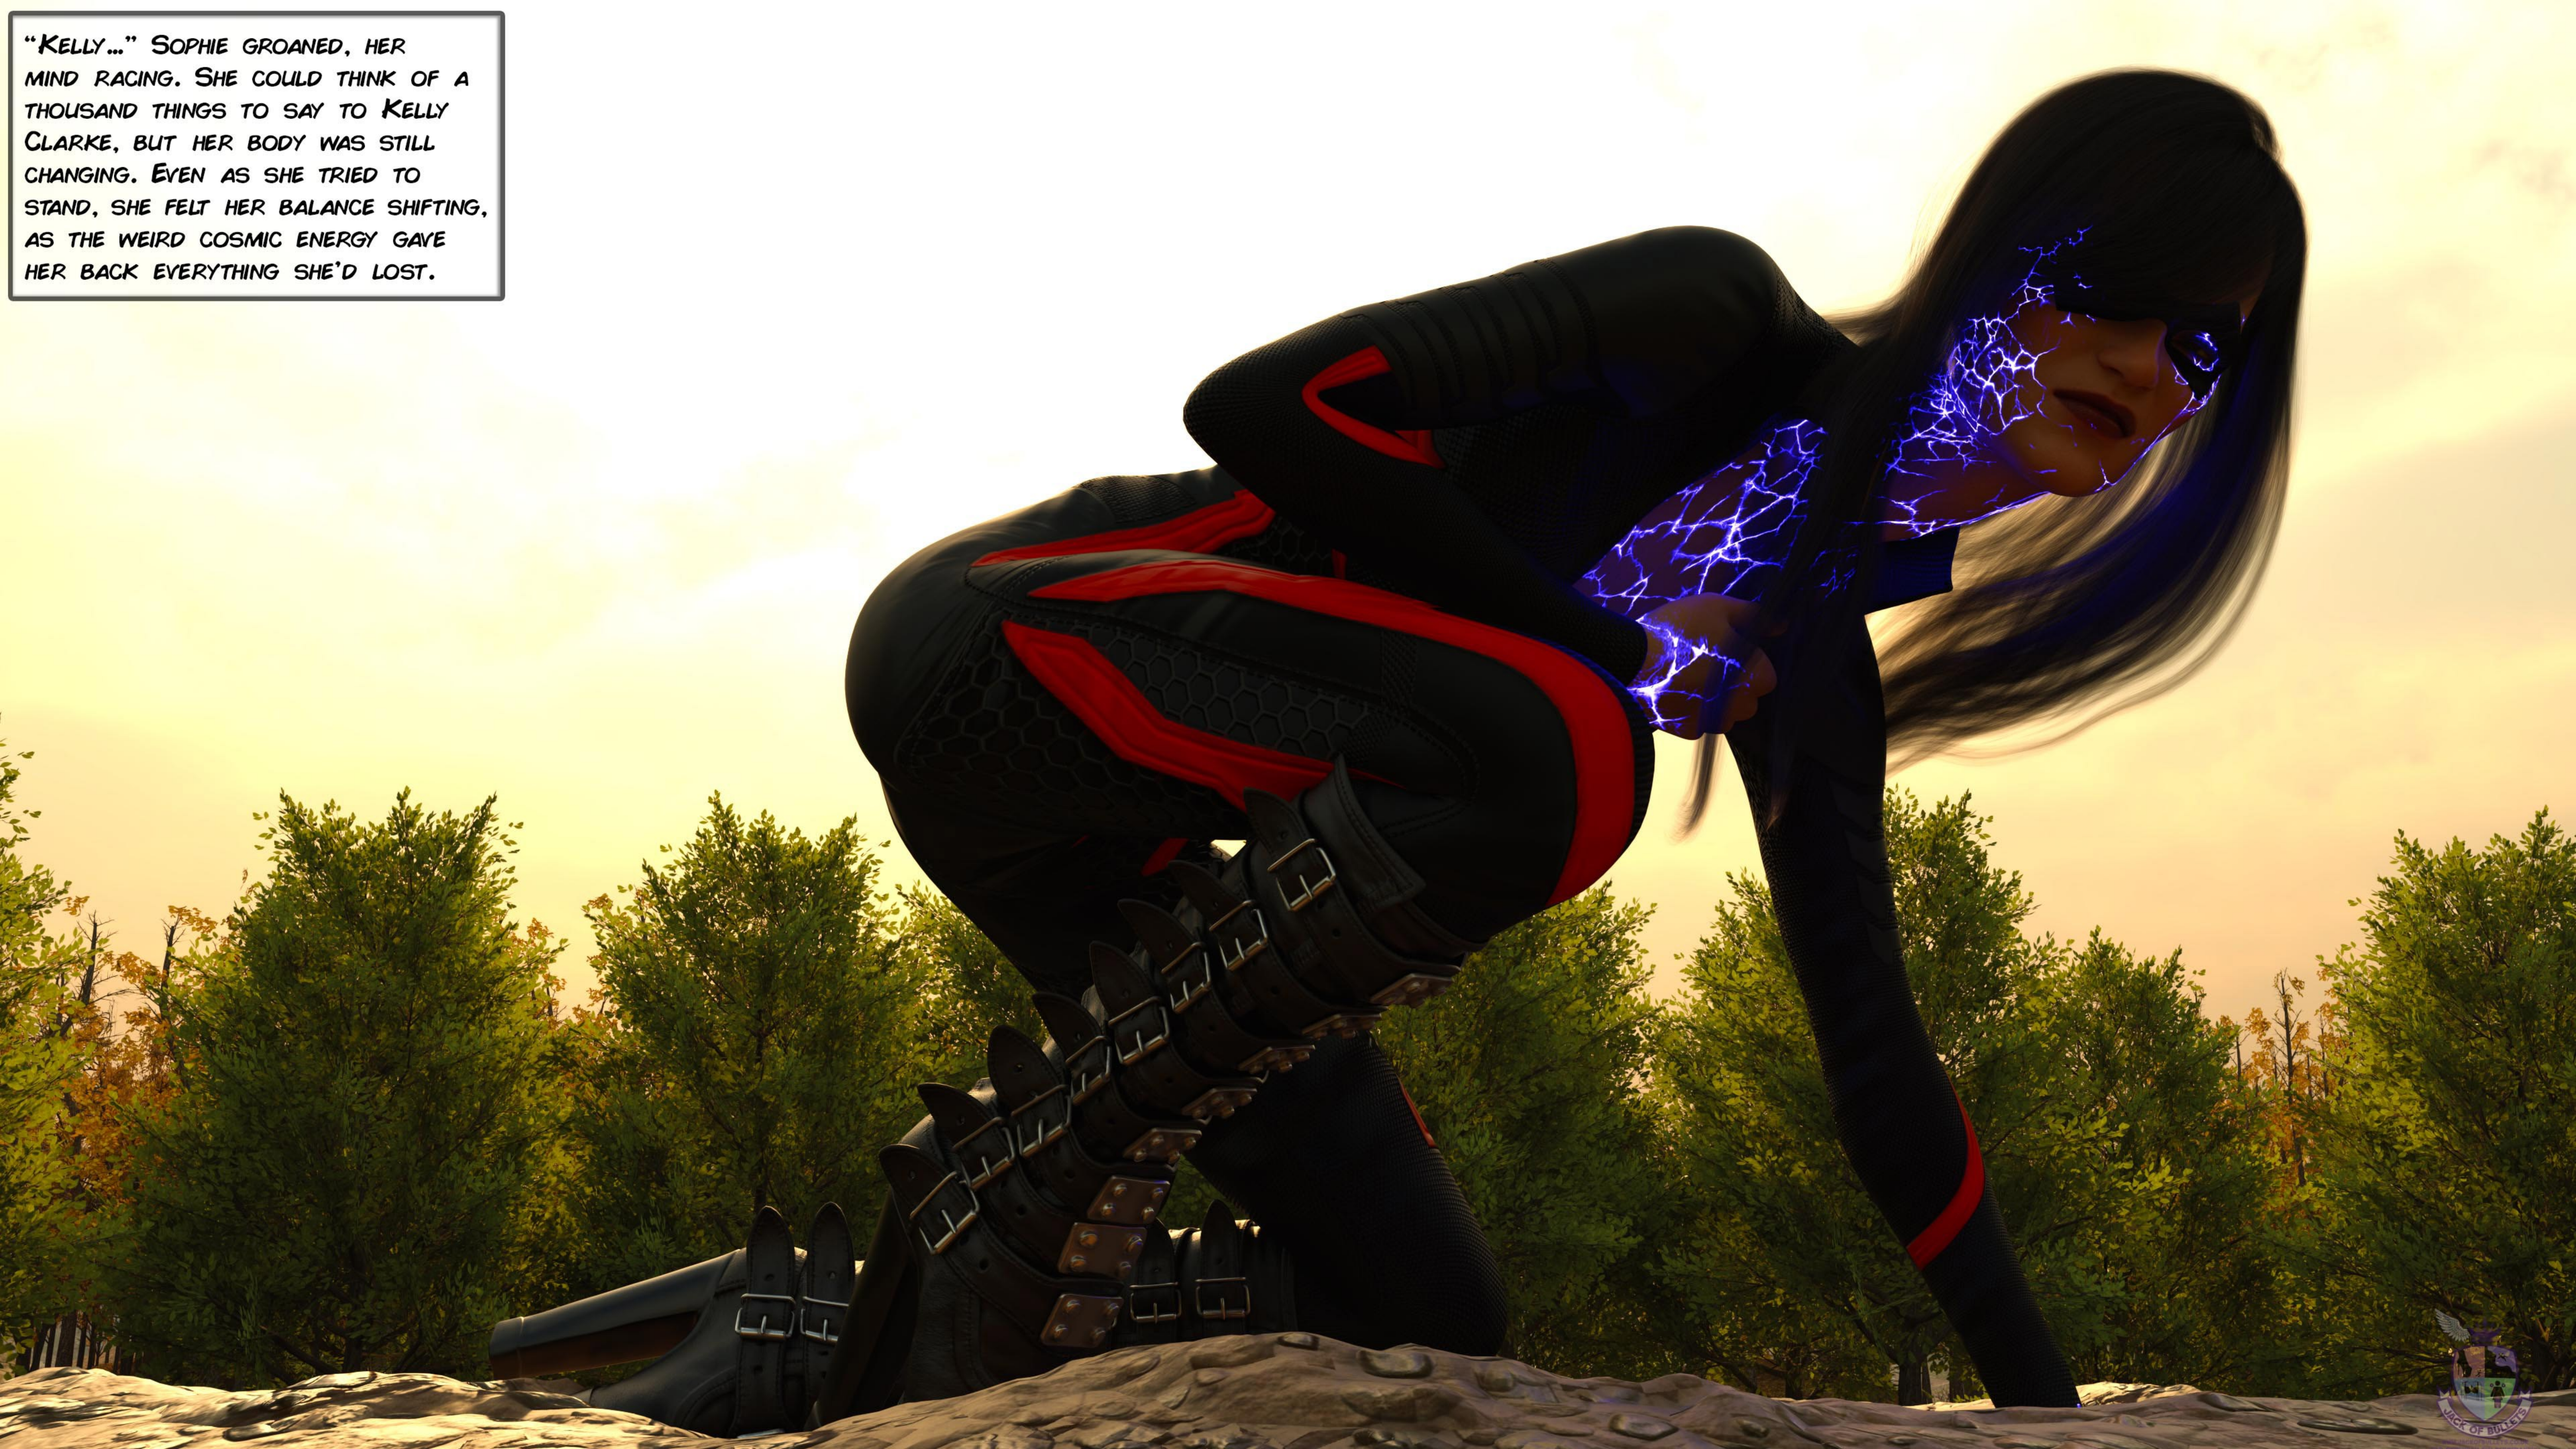
How could he possibly have thought he could persuade her to... What was he thinking?
"Oh fuck, I've done it again!" Kelly snarled. "You've been stalling you little freak!" Kelly added, flinging Todd aside so hard he almost lost his grip on her finger. Kelly frantically searched the woods around her ankles, spreading around her in all directions.
"Where are you!" She roared.

"WHERE ARE YOU!" SHE CRIED OUT, ANGRY AND VENGEFUL. SHE LOST ALL TRACK OF TODD, AND ALL GRIP ON HER SENSES.

A long metallic whining sound announced it before it happened. A deafening crack rustled the trees for a mile in all directions a bolt of red lighting erupted from the crater. Then another, and another until the crater itself seemed alive with power.
Kelly would have been impressed... but she'd seen this before, one fateful night before she thought the world was hers.

"No..." Kelly whispered, falling back a step as history repeated itself before her very eyes.

"Not again..." She mumbled as Sophie arced her back, groaning as the cosmic power changed her body, returning the weak and pathetic form of Sophie strong its former majesty.



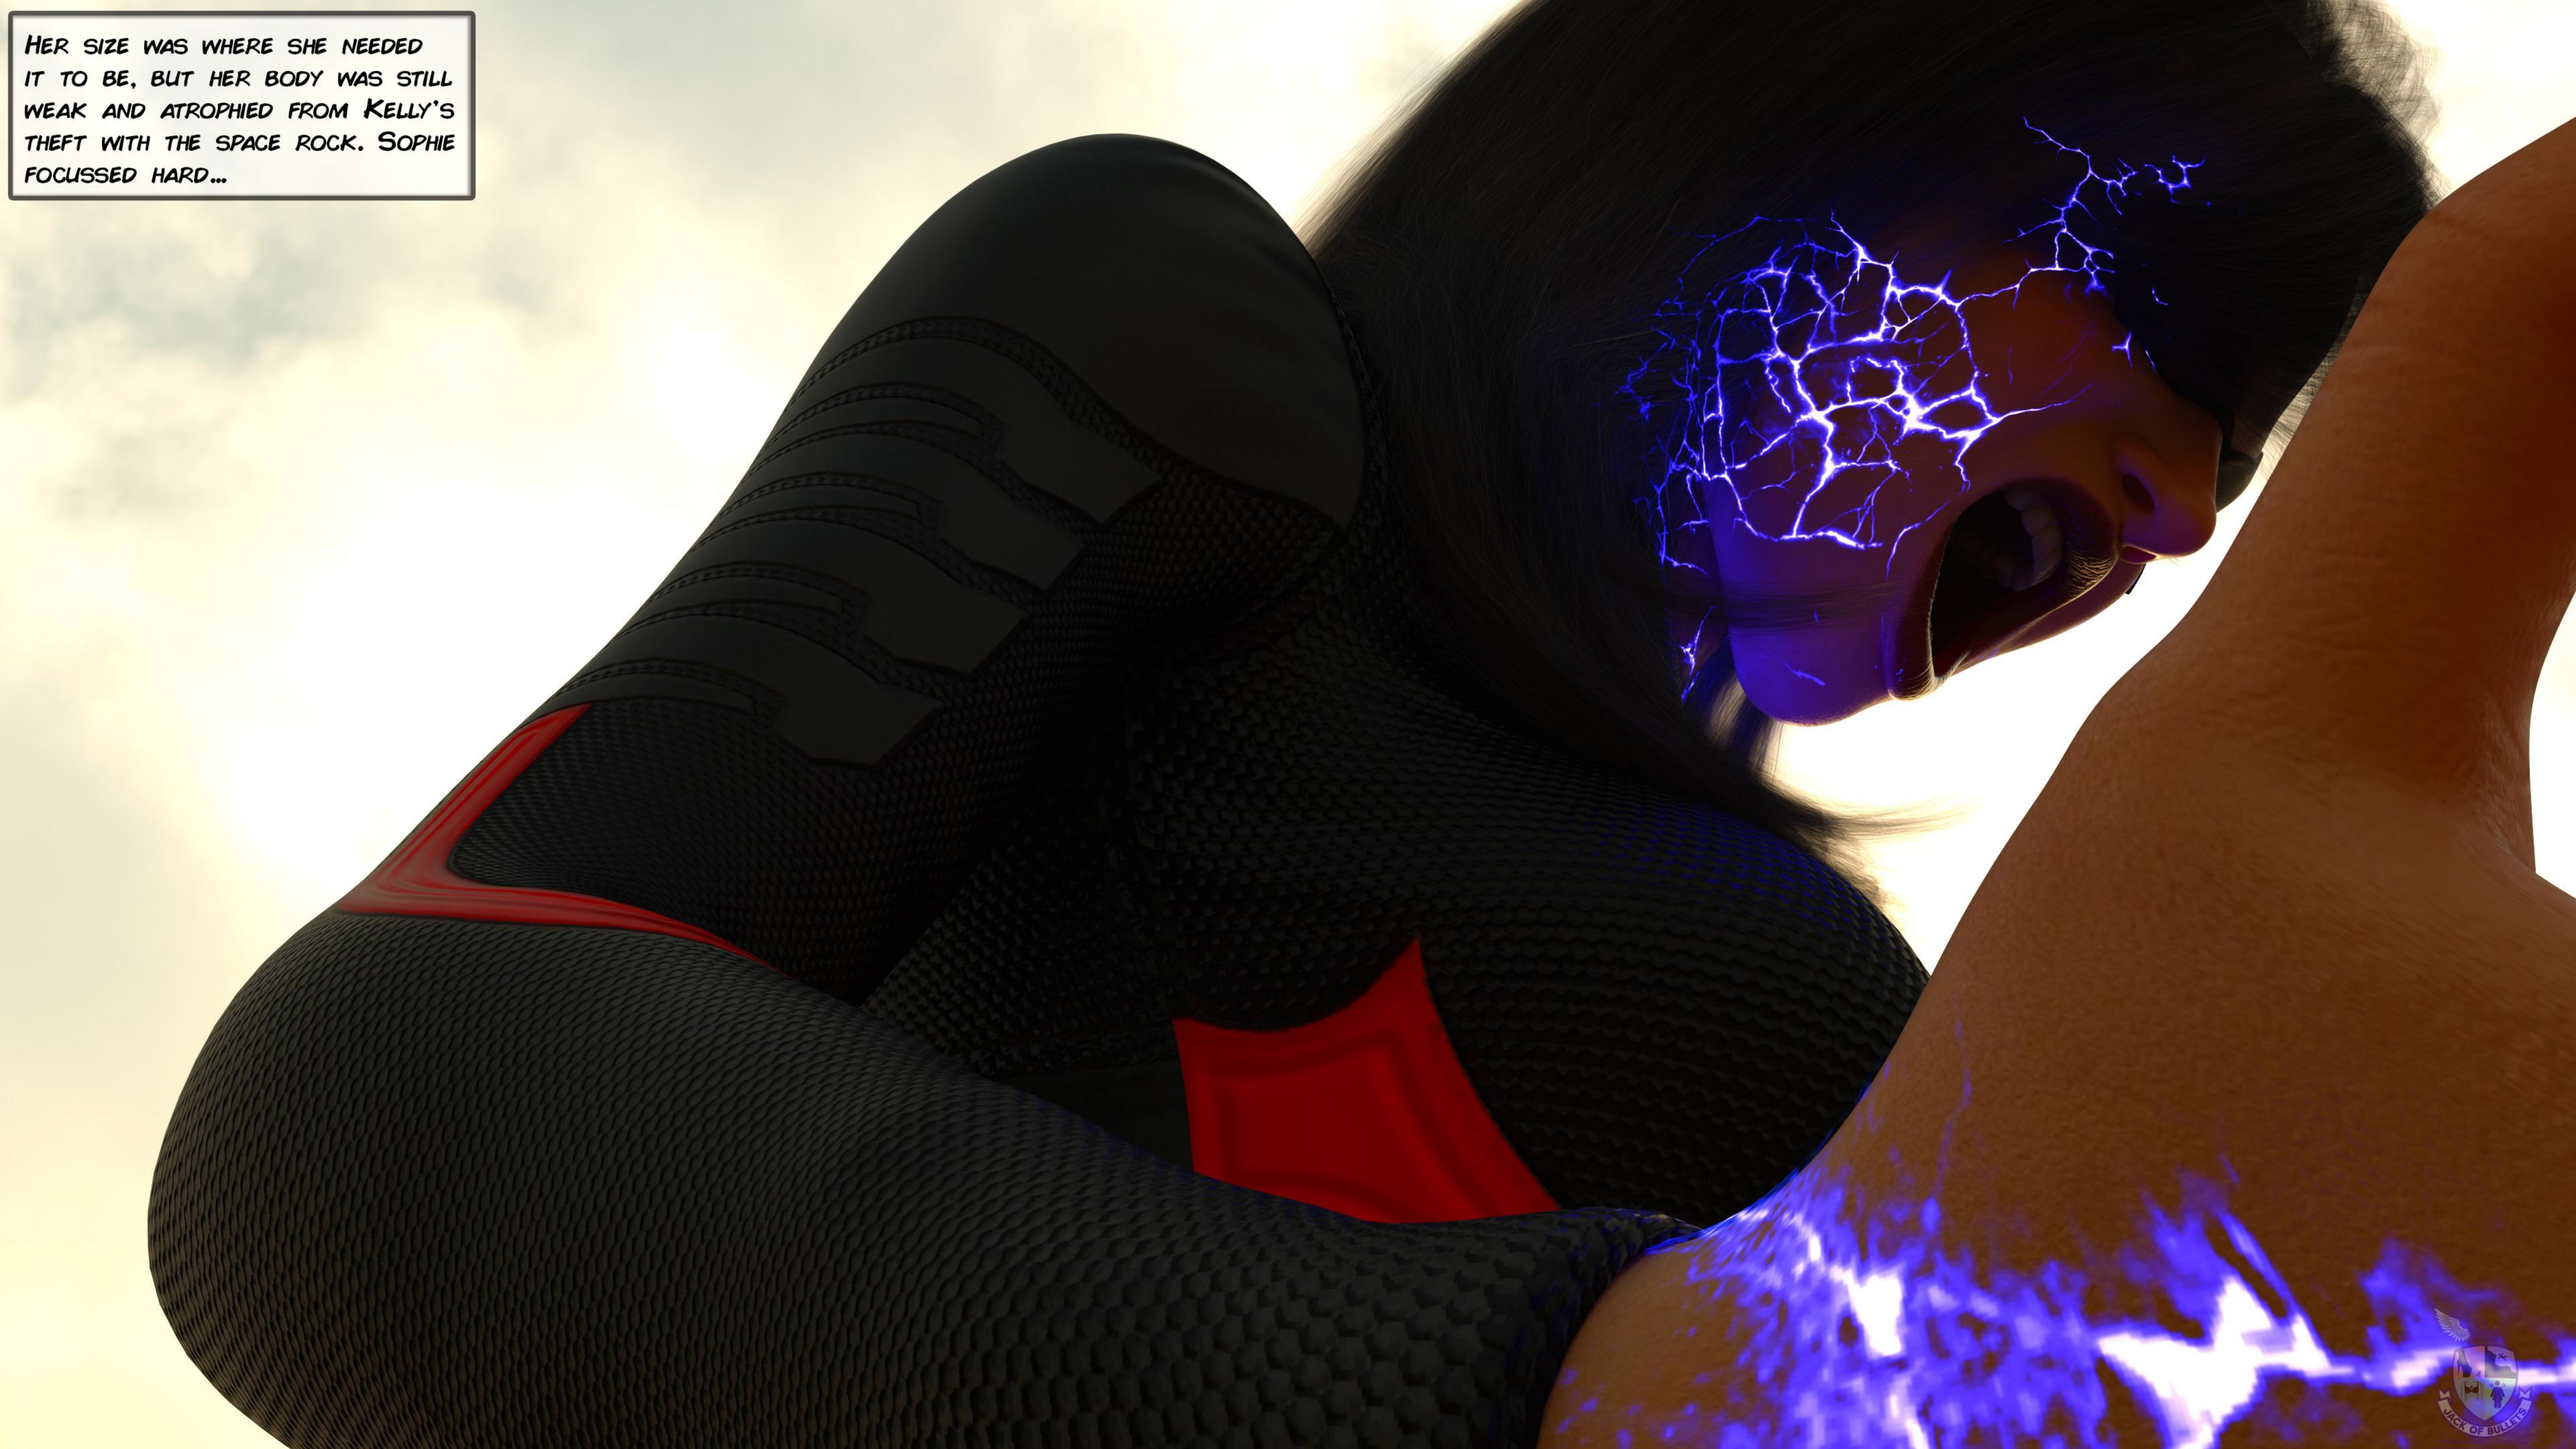
"Kelly..." Sophie groaned, her mind racing. She could think of a thousand things to say to Kelly Clarke, but her body was still changing. Even as she tried to stand, she felt her balance shifting, as the weird cosmic energy gave her back everything she'd lost.

Kelly smirked as Sophie stood as tall as she could, still only reaching her own impressive bust. "This is priceless. All this effort, and you're not even as big as me. What are you going to do, tickle me to death, shrimp?" Kelly chuckled.

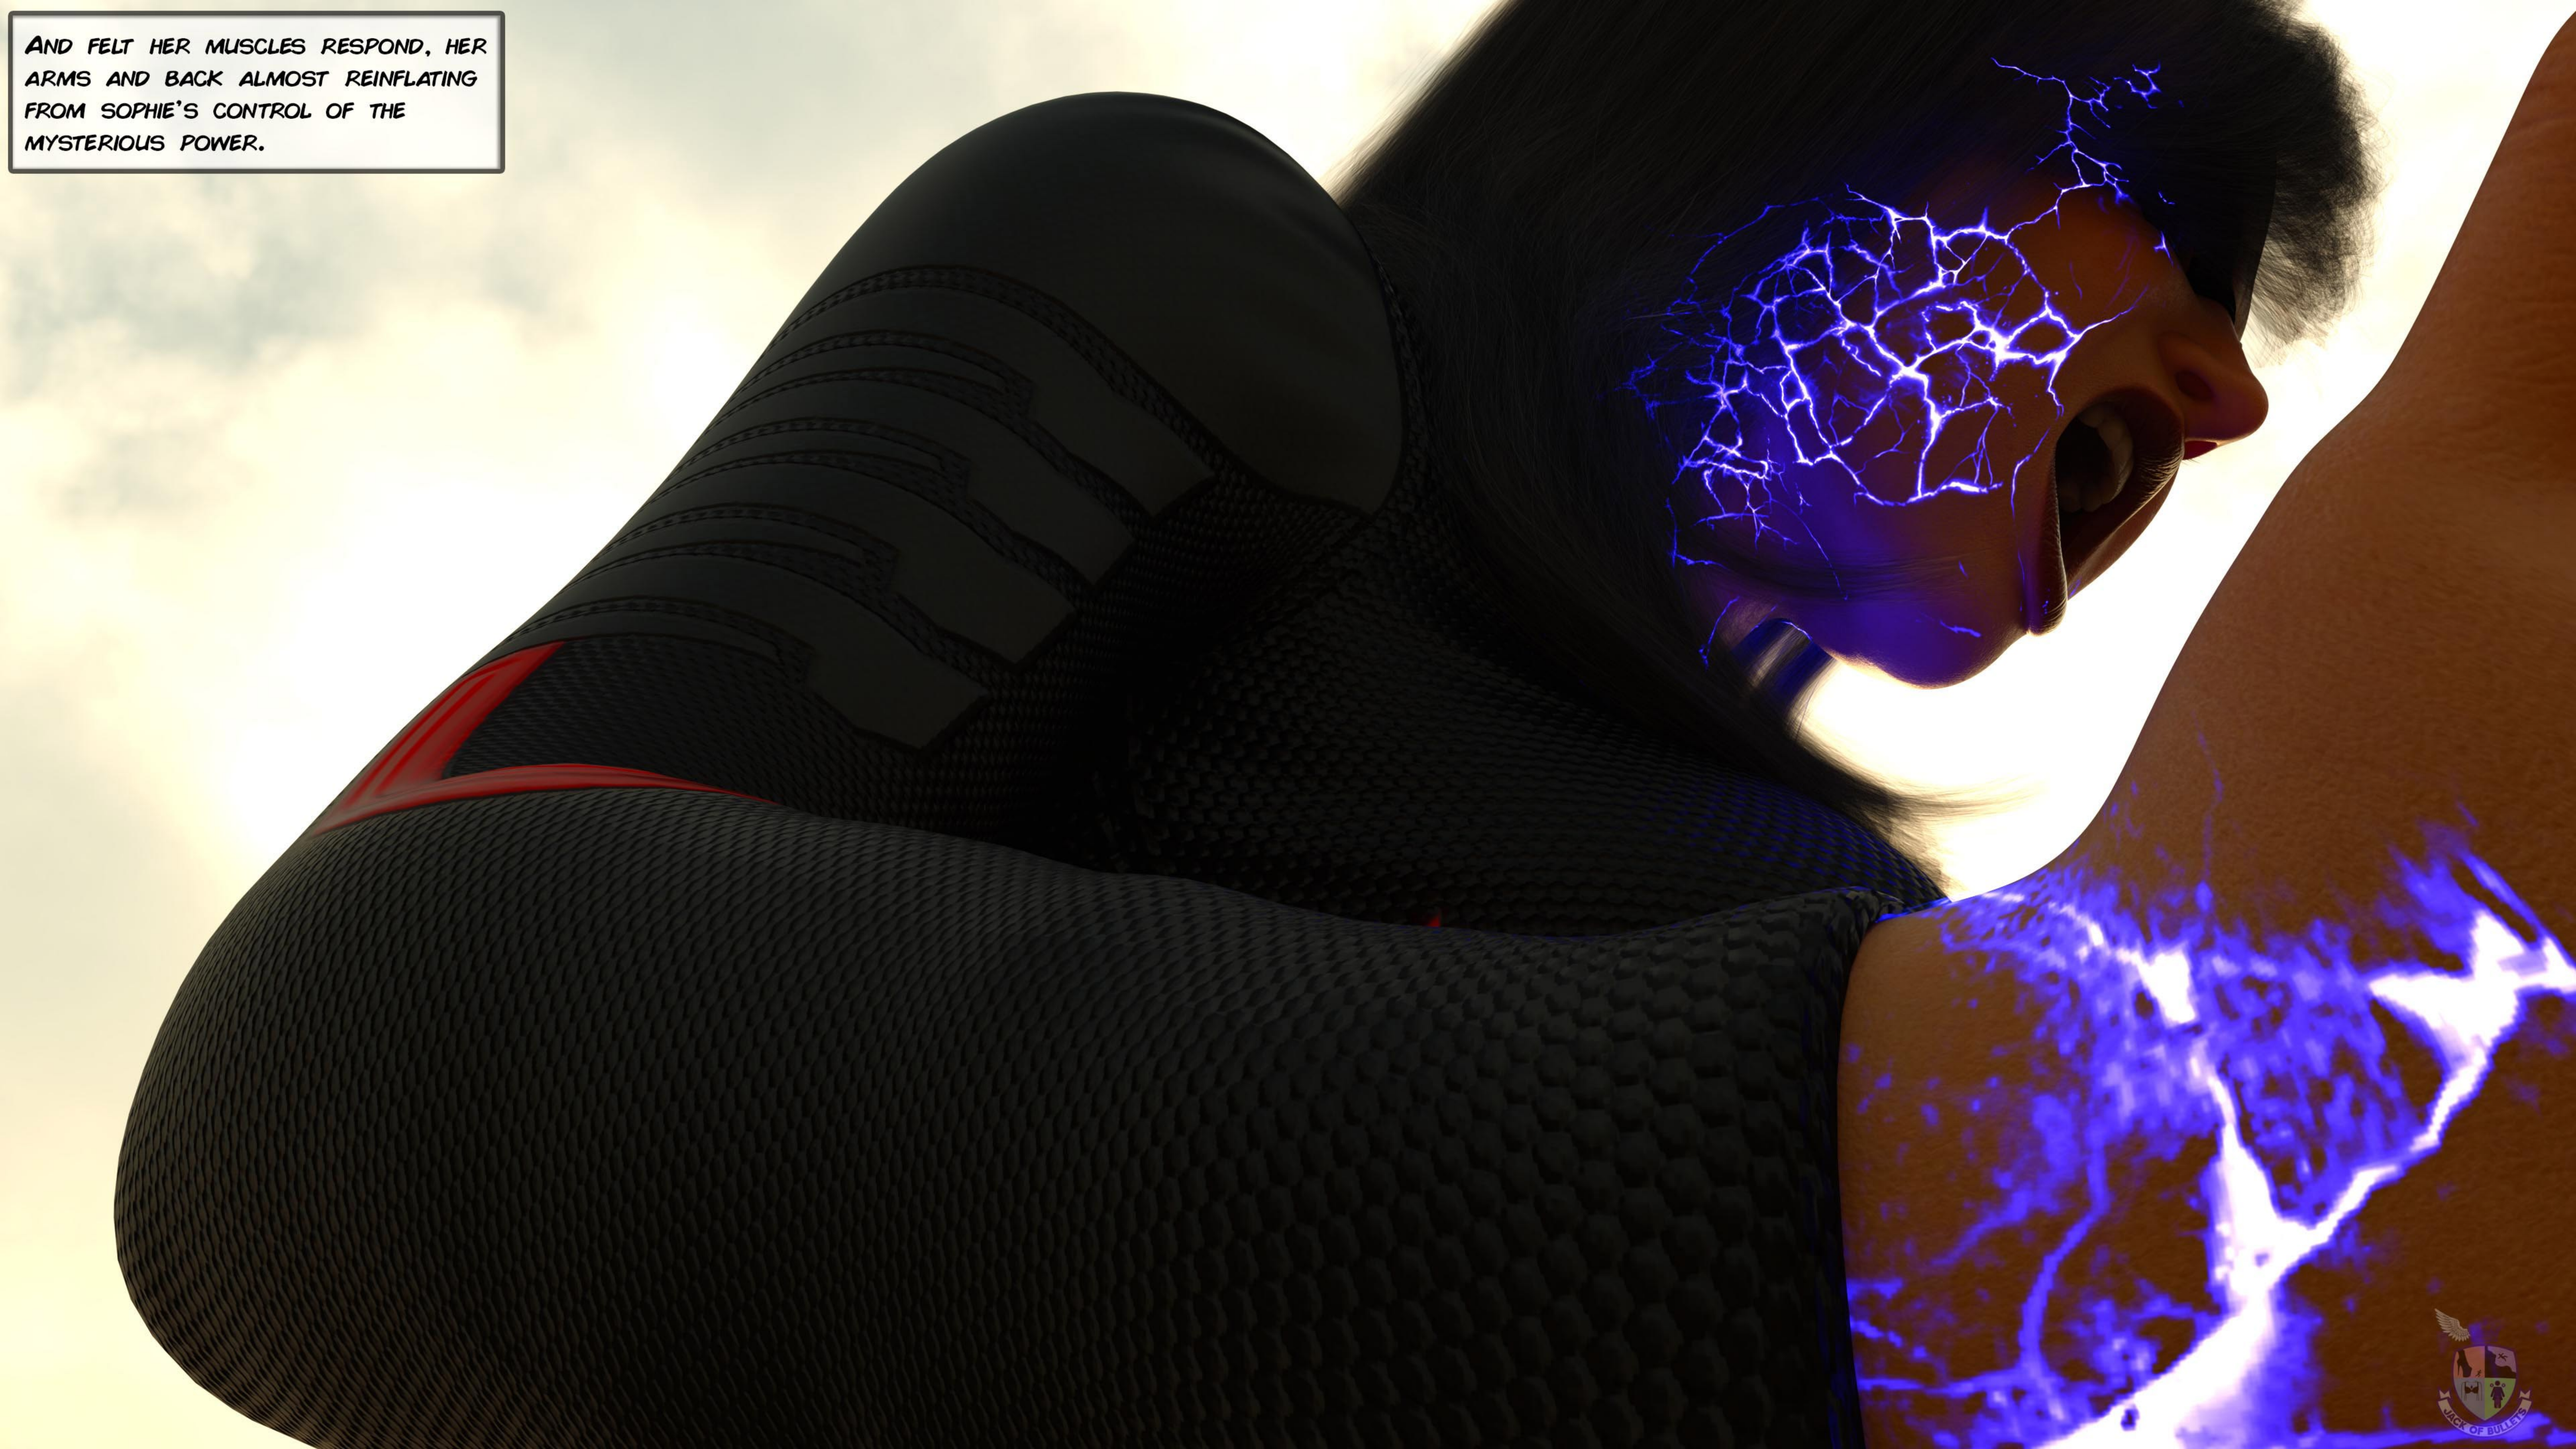
"Why don't you go home and think this over. For a very long time!" Kelly laughed.

"Yeah, keep laughing Kelly. You've got a lot to learn about this power. I'm a fucking expert!" Sophie roared, the unearthly blue energy behind her skin flaring and pulsating...

SOPHIE FLEXED THE SECRET MUSCLE, THE ONE THAT CONTROLLED HER SIZE, SUDDENLY ROCKETING UP AND CLOSING THE GAP IN THEIR TITANIC SCALE.



Her size was where she needed it to be, but her body was still weak and atrophied from Kelly's theft with the space rock. Sophie focussed hard...



And felt her muscles respond, her arms and back almost reinflating from Sophie's control of the mysterious power.

The new weight, the new size was making her shake with effort. She felt her legs almost go out from under her, until she drove the power down...

And felt her thighs respond, expanding to their former glory in a matter of seconds.

SOPHIE FELT HER LIMITS BUCKLING, FELT HER HUMANITY LEAVING ONCE AGAIN AS THE COSMIC POWER MADE HER MORE THAN SHE WAS....

More than Sophie strong.

"But... how?" Kelly whimpered, still creeping backwards. "I broke you!" She added.

"You stole me." Sophie replied, suddenly bigger and stronger than Kelly.

"But I'm the real thing!" Sophie snarled, reaching back...

"I AM RAMPAGE!" RAMPAGE ROARED, SURGING FORWARD AND CONNECTING WITH AN EARTH SHATTERING PUNCH. KELLY FELT HER WORLD ROTATE, AND HER KNEES QUIVER. HER SUPERIOIRITY COMPLEX MELTED AS SHE REALISED THERE WAS NO GAP IN THIER POWER.

KELLY RIGHTED HERSELF QUICKLY, STANDING TALL IN THE FACE OF SOPHIE'S ATTACK. "GAH... NICE ONE SOPHIE... YOU FIGHT MUCH HARDER THAN YOU FUCK!" SHE SNIGGERED.
"IF WE'RE GOING TO FIGHT, THEN LET'S FUCKING DO THIS RIGHT." KELLY ADDED, ROLLING HER SHOULDER OUT OF HER JACKET...

And letting it tumble to the ground.

"Let's dance." She grinned, cracking her knuckles as she advanced.

"You never deserved to be rampage! It should have been ME!" Kelly roared.
"Oh you're gonna get rampage! You're gonna get all you can handle!" Rampge roared, as the two locked up in a greco roman knuckle hold that made the ground shake under them.
