E D I T O R I A L

"THERE HAVE ALWAYS BEEN SISSIES. . . ."

There have always been sissies. Not every child born "male" is courageous, determined, independent, and sexually potent. Some "males" are timid, dependent, meek, and effeminate. Or, in a word, some males are sissies.

Although sissies have always been with us, they have mostly been rather useless creatures. A sissy's wimpy nature and ineffectual sexual persona have made them especially useless to women. But in recent years a place for them has finally been found. A place that is, ironically, right smack dab in the middle of young women's households.

With so many young women working, someone has to do the housework. . .

With the vast majority of young women today working in demanding professional careers, there has been precious little time for housework and laundry. But this traditionally-feminine work, as menial as it often is, still needs doing. And this is where sissies have come to the attention of progressive women everywhere.

With society's changing gender roles the past twenty years, and the more open way personal differences have been discussed and viewed, the male sissy has become more known -- and more accepted. Suddenly the idea of having a sissy do their housework for them hit upon many young women; seemingly simultaneously. The genesis of this idea perhaps occurred when some meek little sissy was continuously duped into "running errands" and performing domestic chores for some young woman he was hopelessly in love with. But whatever the genesis, it has become a firmly established trend.

There are now effeminate males working as domestics coast to coast, especially in major cities with large populations of successful young professional women. These domestics, now almost universally known as "sissy maids", work both part-time and full-time; both live-out and live-in. But the live-in sissy male servant, uniformed and aproned in a fashion similar to that of a female maid, is the domestic "situation" that is increasingly desired by young women everywhere.

This is all so new to both sissies and their employers that a sort of "guide" has been sorely needed. Sissy Maid Quarterly hopes to be that guide. Our goal is to inform, educate, and help train sissy maids as they enter into a new career that promises to become the standard for domestic service in the 21st century. Becoming a full-time maid is a big step for most sissies. First, they must personally and publicly acknowledge their own sissiness, which for some is still difficult to accept. And they must become comfortable with a working and social position that is not exactly "equal."

Today, few women know how to properly supervise household help. . .

---

For young women, many of whom know little or nothing about how best to uniform, supervise, and discipline household help, having a maid of any kind is a new experience. And having a sissy in their households and doing their housework for them is especially new and different. Sissy Maid Quarterly will also strive to help these women, and be their guide and friend as well. Hopefully, SMQ articles and features will help young women to get excellent service from their sissy "help."

This is the premier edition of Sissy Maid Quarterly, the first in, we hope, a long series of periodicals. It certainly is a fascinating and timely subject, and one that seems to gain in popularity every year.

Sissy Maid Quarterly is about sissies living and working as domestic servants. And it is about the leisurely and luxurious lifestyles young women with sissy maids can (and do) enjoy -- lives free of all household drudgery, ponderous laundry tasks, and tedious ironing chores. Lives where a cold drink, a hot cup of tea, or even a perfectly-drawn bath all require nothing more strenuous than a snap of the fingers or a ring of a bell. Lives where much renewed energy can be devoted to artistic pursuits -- or to dating (and loving) a man. After all, every onerous household task is taken care of by "Bobbi" or "Cissie" or "Jamie" or some other effeminately-named little sissy.

Many of the sissies we discuss and teach and speak about in Sissy Maid Quarterly are already working as domestic servants, and others are in training. They are sissies who accept (though sometimes reluctantly) the fact that they will be dressed in uniforms appropriate to their domestic "station", and appropriate to their distinctly non-masculine, eunuch-like sexualities.

SMQ is not about "bedroom games" or other such activities that have nothing whatsoever to do with getting a woman's housework done. And it is not about "S&M" or other fantasies, where someone's lover plays "slave for a day." Sissy maids today get paid for their long, hard work, though their salaries are sometimes quite tiny. And they receive room and board, as well -- if they live-in. In a very real sense, then, they are professional servants.

The effort and expenditure are both well worth it for most young women, since the work and effort a sissy maid can save at home are considerable. After all, how much is it worth to you to live like a princess -- to have everything done for you, from housework, to laundry, to cooking, to serving, to secretarial work, to errand running? And done by a meek, obedient, speaks-only-when-spoken-to sissy maid dressed in a cute, effeminate uniform and nice little apron?

How much is it worth to live like a princess. . .to have every domestic task taken care of for you, instead of by you?

---

A new Editorial will appear in this space every issue, and it will speak to whatever is new, interesting, or controversial in the world of sissy-male-based domestic service. From fashion, to "domestic sciences", to etiquette and discipline, Sissy Maid Quarterly will cover it. And we'll cover it from both the sissy's perspective, and the employer's.

It's a brave new world, both out in the street, and in young women's households. A world where all maidservants are certainly no longer female -- and women as bosses have truly come into their own.

In the very near future, all those menial household tasks that were once so derisively known as "Woman's Work" will more properly be termed "Sissy's Work."

And in so many respects, it's about time!

COVER STORY

Young LA Heiress, Who Could Easily Afford Any Number of Servants of Any Gender, Chooses a Sissy As Her Personal Maid

Miss Stephanie Gweening, the pretty young Los Angeles socialite, happily agreed to pose for the cover of Sissy Maid Quarterly's Premier Issue. We, of course, are very glad she did -- it turned out great.

And the little reason she was so happy to pose is also on our cover. That's because Stephanie's sissy maid, Jeanette, is the little reason!

"I am completely happy with Jeanette. I can't imagine having a more dedicated, obedient, and skillful maid than Jeanette, regardless of gender," Miss Gweening reported to us over the phone.

In fact, she is so happy with how her sissy keeps house, waits on guests, and performs numerous "lady's maid" duties for her that she is thrilled with the whole idea behind Sissy Maid Quarterly.

"Jeanette has been with me for over a year now, and I don't know how I'd manage without him. I think it's about time a magazine was published specifically for sissy maids, and for their employers as well. I've been looking for places to get new uniform ideas. And Jeanette, like most sissies, feels a little alone sometimes, so a regular magazine, just about his lifestyle, will be nice for him," Stephanie said.

During our brief interview, Stephanie told us how she came to hire Jeanette. Similar stories are being repeated all over, however, as more and more young women discover the leisurely joys of having a full-time sissy maid at their beck and call.

"I only really had live-out help before, and was looking for someone to live-in, and work full-time. I hadn't thought that much about hiring a sissy, but one of my girlfriends had used sissy maids to serve at parties and was always very happy with them, so I investigated the idea of having a full-time sissy maid. And I'm glad I did -- it's worked out just great," the 24-year-old heiress told us.

"I hadn't thought that much about hiring a sissy. . ."

Stephanie found out about our new publishing venture and contacted us early last Fall. She seemed so supportive and encouraging that we decided to ask her to appear on our first cover. She not only agreed, but offered her home as a shooting location.

Jeanette's story is typical of many sissies' today. While working for "Miss Stephanie" (as Jeanette always refers to his boss) is the sissy's first position as a maid, he had done lots of domestic chores for girls before. However, he had started out not even being paid for doing housework and laundry.

"When I was in school I kept falling for gorgeous, long-legged girls who were totally out of my league," Jeanette reported with a shy smile.

"Anyway, I'd usually end up doing their homework or cleaning their dorm rooms or something while they were out with some football player. And eventually I just figured I might as well get paid for it!

"For some reason, I've always been good at housework and laundry -- domestic things just come naturally to me. But I can't deny that working as a full-time maid for Miss Stephanie is more work than I ever could have imagined. I like it, though. I mean, I get to live with a beautiful girl in a spectacular house. And all I have to do is all the housework, all the laundry, and all the serving!" Jeanette said with a laugh.

Stephanie enjoys having Jeanette around, and though he is her employee and she is decidedly his boss, she counts the sissy as a friend, too.

"It's nice to have someone here whenever I get in. But the best thing about having Jeanette is that I simply no longer have to worry about housework, or anything domestic at all. Jeanette takes care of everything for me. The sissy takes wonderful care of my clothes, too. He really seems to enjoy making sure everything in my closet and dresser is perfect for me all the time.

"Sissies tend to be very fussy and detail-oriented, which are important traits for a servant to have. He's also quite attentive without being a pest, which I like," Stephanie reported.

"And I also like the fact that he doesn't flirt with my boyfriend," Stephanie said with a giggle.

"I've heard some real horror stories about cute girl maids and Nannies stealing girls' boyfriends and husbands -- and maybe that's as good a reason to hire a sissy as any!" she concluded.

Jeanette's beautiful employer, Stephanie, in a cashmere sweater and wearing her tongue-in-cheek "RICH" earrings.

SPRING FASHION -- ALL THE NEW LOOKS FOR SISSY MAIDS, FROM PRACTICAL HOUSEWORK UNIFORMS,
TO THE MOST LUSCIOUS FORMAL SERVING WEAR EVER!

Welcome to Spring! This season promises to bring us the most varied choices for uniforms and accessories for sissies ever. And most of them will also be more widely available than in past years. From the practicality of housework uniforms, just right for even the most "down and dirty" domestic chores, to elegant, frilly confections perfect for serving at even the most "prissy" of cocktail parties, it's all represented on these pages.

Sissy Maid Quarterly staff members have combed the fashion centers of the world to bring this fashion collection to you. The cutest aprons, the best uniform dresses, the sleekest separates, and the briefest little short-shorts -- they're all here for your review and enjoyment. We know sissies want to look good as they serve -- and we also know that maid's employers want their servants to "look the part" at dinner parties and other festive get-togethers, as well as being properly uniformed for housework duties. And with what's now available, both should be completely satisfied.

Sissy fashions tend to follow the overall trends in women's wear. So, more feminine fashions are coming back in now, (or perhaps, more accurately for sissies, effeminate fashions!) The skirts are generally short, (though some trim longer lengths remain) and the top architecture is fitted, skimpy, and sometimes almost child-like. Short-shorts are going to be very popular for summer, and their tightness and brief cuts point to the overall emphasis on the derriere that women's fashion is focusing on this season as well.

All of the short-shorts for sissies this season are back-zippered (or back-buttoned) designs, in keeping with the rear-fastening of most fashions for sissies. This feminine touch is also returning to women's fashion as well, with many of the latest shorts and pants foregoing the menswear-look of front "flys."

Tights, "bike" shorts, and unitards, all fashioned with the miracle of Lycra, continue to play a big part in sissy daywear, since nothing can beat their practicality and trim good-looks. These practical uniforms also fashionably emphasize the derriere, since cling-y Lycra tights and unitards tend to show off this often cute part of a sissy's anatomy. (The white bow tied in an apron strap is a cute "accessory" to a sissy maid's swishing, Lycra-clad rear, too!)

The traditional maid's dress, teamed with an appropriate apron, is still the single most popular outfit for sissy servants. But well-tailored separates are also being shown. And while some skirts are tailored and fitted, others have a breezy, girlish looseness that continues last season's soft, feminine movement. Lycra tights and shorts, due to their unassailable practicality, are still perhaps the most popular uniform basics for daywear.

The portfolio of designs we've gathered here show some of the best, and most useful, of this Spring's fashions for sissy maids. Not only attractive and practical, these designs will help turn any sissy into a cute little servant -- sweet, submissive, and eager to please. And that, as they say, is just how it should be! →

Here's a perfect example of the new, brief little short-shorts that are appearing in nearly every sissy-wear collection for Spring. Most are tight, and cut surprisingly short, with hardly any "leg" at all. And all the best styles are back-zippered, (or back-buttoned) a design feature more and more women's fashions are returning to as well.

This effeminate blonde sissy is in a pink, Lycra bodysuit with matching short-shorts, the perfect thing for light housework and serving on warm Spring afternoons. In the little darling's hand is his white organdy Tea apron, shown here starched to within an inch of it's life.

Fashion Notes: Back-zippered short-shorts, made of shiny stretch "patent"; and matching pink glossy Lycra bodysuit, with lace collar and cuffs, both from "Domestic Designs." Pink elastic headband, with bow, and organdy "Tea" apron, both from "A Sissy's Work." Not Shown: Pink plastic high-heeled mules, from "Tippy-Toe".

The well-dressed sissy maid's uniform selection will include tailored separates this Spring, as well as the traditional maid's dress.

Trim skirts are teamed with effeminately-tailored little jackets for more casual, but still "dressed up", serving wear options. These separates are ideal for dinner service, late afternoon cocktails, or other less formal, but still festive, social occasions.

Here's one of the better separate options for Spring. A small, cropped jacket is worn over a black skirt that is slightly sheer. A sheer, pink lace bodysuit peeks out underneath the jacket.

Fashion Notes: Short, single-breasted jacket, with padded shoulders and shawl collar; and black, semi-sheer service skirt; both from "At Your Service." White nylon serving apron (with inner tabs to prevent riding up over skirt waist) is from "Domestic Designs." Pink lace, thong-back bodysuit from Sissy's Secret.

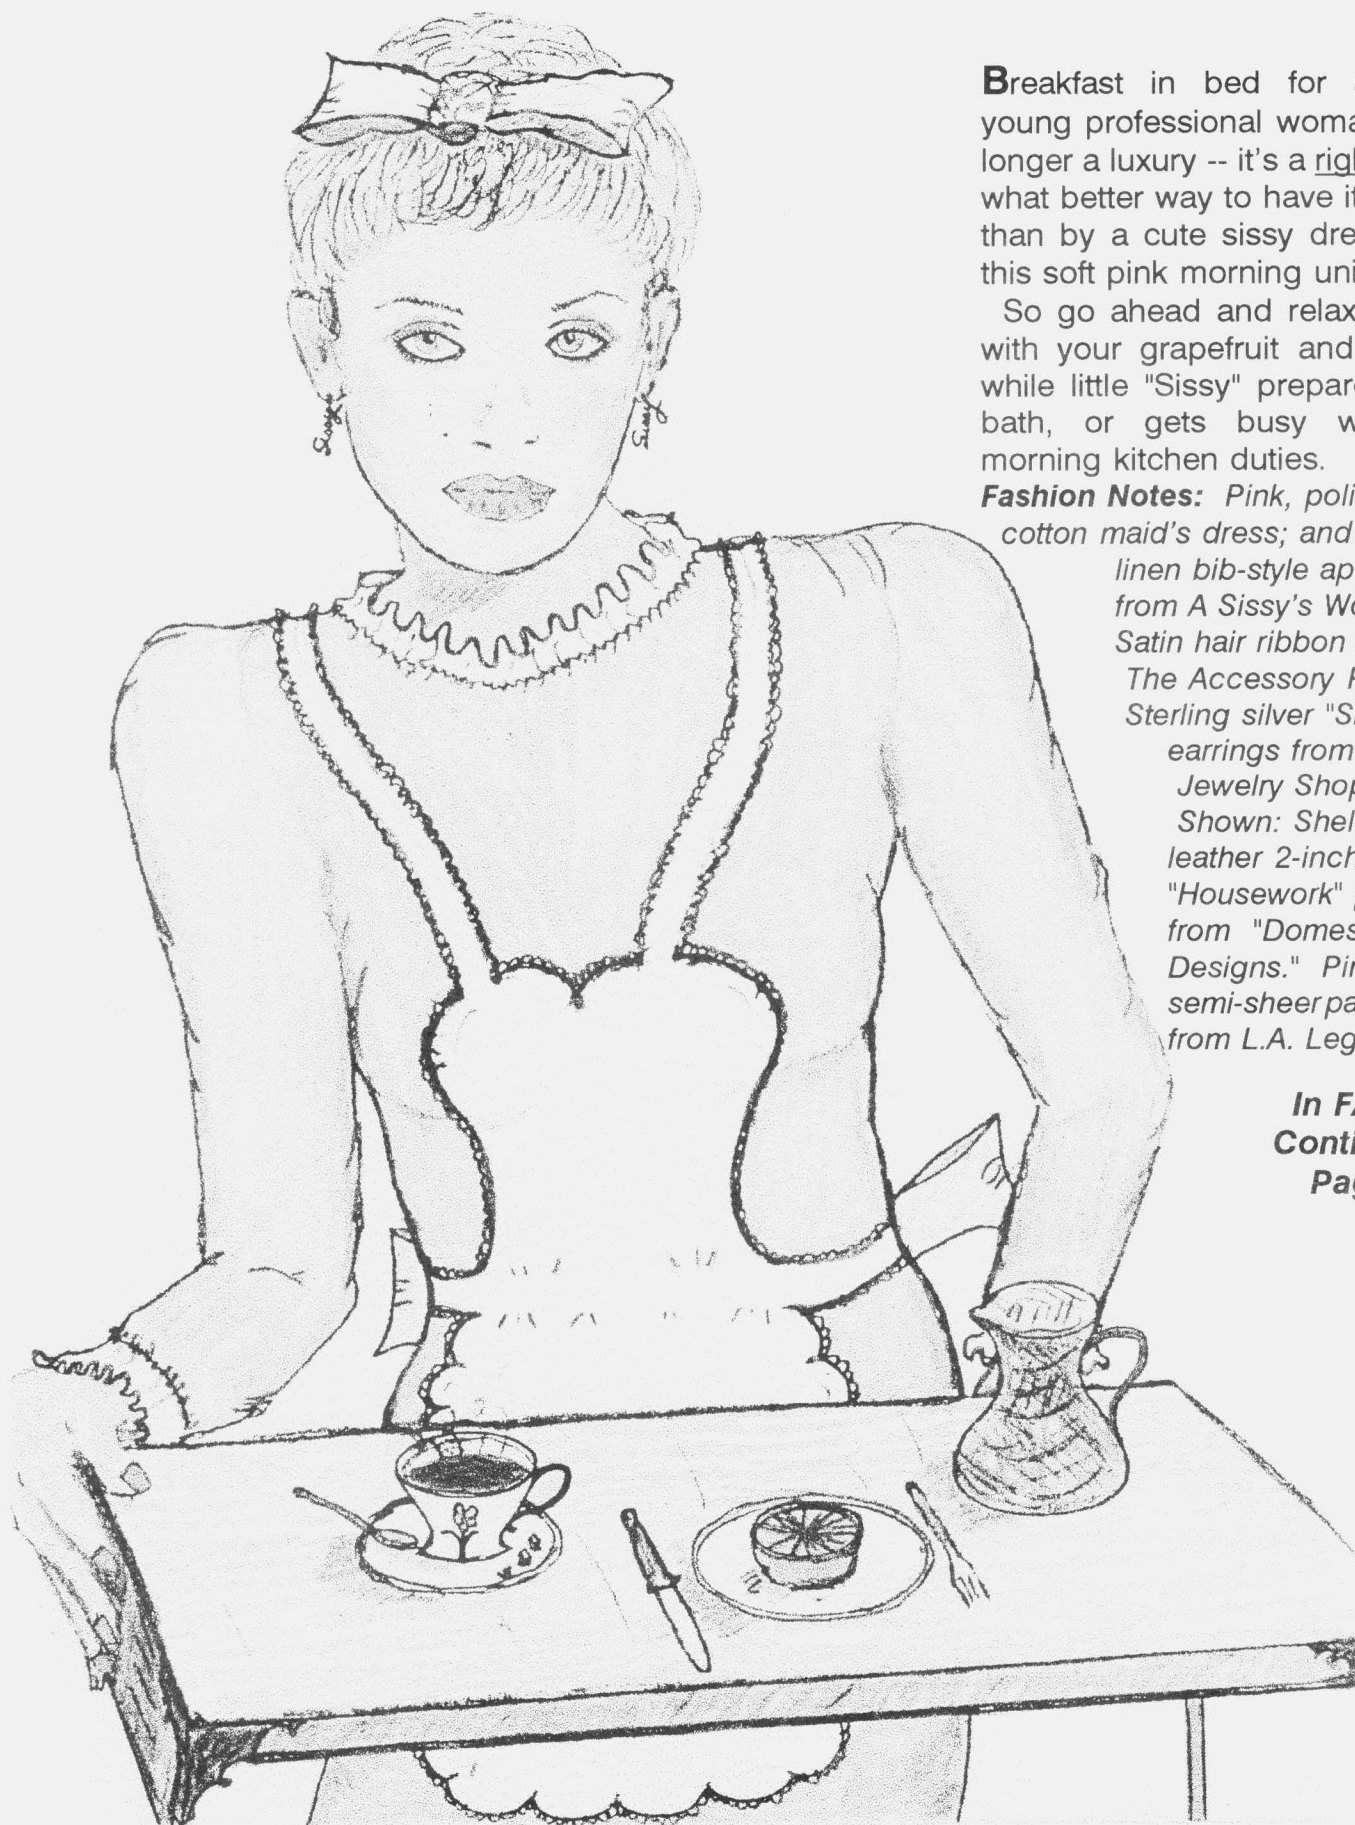

Formal serving uniforms as pretty as this one should be in every sissy maid's closet. The traditional look of service they represent is expected at formal affairs. This V-neck black taffeta dress has the full, flared skirt and tight, cinched waist of most formal serving dresses. And its gently-puffed sleeves add a touch of softness.

With a pretty, lacy, pinafore apron and a perky cap, as shown here, this maid's dress would hold its own at even the most formal of events.

Fashion Notes:

Maid's dress, in black silk taffeta; and bib apron with lace trim and shoulder straps; both by At Your Service. Crinoline and nylon-net petticoats; and starched cap; both from A Sissy's Work.

Breakfast in bed for a busy young professional woman is no longer a luxury -- it's a right! And what better way to have it served than by a cute sissy dressed in this soft pink morning uniform.

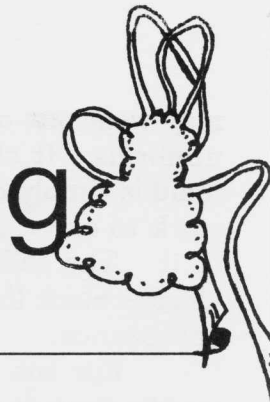

So go ahead and relax in bed with your grapefruit and coffee, while little "Sissy" prepares your bath, or gets busy with his morning kitchen duties.

Elegant Entertaining

With a sissy maid in your home, it's easy!

Entertaining can be a real joy if one has a full-time maid to "help out." But many young women, unaccustomed to having full-time help, shy away from entertaining at first. And this is especially true for those with sissy maids, for some reason.

But it doesn't have to be that way. Having a maid to help with entertaining adds elegance and ease to the whole affair. From a small cocktail party, to an intimate dinner with her boyfriend, to a full-blown formal dinner, a sissy maid can be of great help.

The fact that the woman's maid happens to be a sissy male instead of a female is of no real account when it comes to serving procedures and etiquette. The proper service routines and uniform requirements for party service are pretty much identical, regardless of whether the servant is a female or a sissy.

Preparation

Proper preparation makes any party go smoother. And this is one area where a maid can be especially helpful for the busy young woman of today. The employer should discuss any menu plans, including simple snacks and hors' d'oeuvres', with her maid as far in advance as is necessary to ensure the availability of all ingredients. Also, the guest list should be discussed with the servant, especially in terms of it's size. Sissy servants need to know whether the planned affair is to be formal or casual, and how large it will be.

The maid should then plan to prepare as much in advance as possible. Some items, of course, will have to wait to the last minute to ensure freshness, but these are often in the minority. With this method, the servant is able to calmly go about checking on last minute details. Early preparation also makes sure the sissy is free to help his employer dress, answer the door, and serve cocktails to arriving guests.

Proper Uniforms

For a formal affair, the presence of a uniformed maid is often taken for granted. In fact, a sissy maid's presence may actually add to the festive atmosphere of the event. For this reason his uniform should be pretty and very effeminate, as well as formal.

A black taffeta maid's dress is perhaps the most desirable, although black satin is certainly acceptable as well. The dress should have a tight, cinched waistline and a snug bodice, along with a short, very full skirt. Several short crinoline and nylon net petticoats should be worn underneath the skirt to ensure it flairs out sharply from the maid's cinched waist.

The sissy maid's petticoats do more than fill out his short skirt, however.

The sissy maid's petticoats do more than fill out his short skirt, however. They also rustle delightfully as the maid goes about his serving, adding a nice, and very effeminate, note to the evening's festive atmosphere.

The maid should wear sheer black hose, patent leather pumps with high, spike heels, and a rounded, ruffled white satin serving apron. While white linen serving gloves are optional, they are recommended for most formal dinner parties.

For more casual affairs, the sissy maid may wear one of his crisp black linen evening uniforms. It should almost appear that the maid is simply taking a break from his housework to serve, rather than making a big deal of it. The tailored, no-nonsense look of an elegant black linen maid's dress supports this appearance.

For the intimate dinner for two, the maid's dress is really up to the whims of the mistress. If she chooses to get really dressed up for her boyfriend, her maid will likely be uniformed rather formally. If she "dresses down" and goes for the casual look, her sissy maid should be uniformed in a similar fashion.

The Kitchen Apron

Whether the affair is formal, casual, or intimate, sissy maids should always have nice waterproof aprons and gloves to wear for work in the kitchen. Often after coffee is served, the hostess will dismiss her sissy and send him to the kitchen to attend to the dishes.

Maids must be prepared to be sent off to such messy work even when they are uniformed in their prettiest taffeta dress.

A generously-cut bib apron or pinafore in glossy white or pale pink rubber is perfect for such contingencies. The work apron will ideally have a substantial ruffle at the edges to help catch sudsy spills and splashes, protecting the servant's dress from spots and stains. Rubber gloves in a matching color should be worn so the maid may use the hottest possible dishwasher without damaging his soft hands.

Basic Serving Etiquette

Although the basics of serving are likely well known by maids, even sissy ones, it may be helpful to review a few details. First, of course, the maid should be discreet and

... verbal responses will primarily be limited to "Yes, Miss" and "Yes, Sir"...

respectful. His verbal responses will primarily be limited to answering "Yes, Miss" or "Yes, Sir" to the guest's requests. And a sissy maid should strive to pay as little attention to the guest's conversation as possible -- after all, the sissy is in attendance to serve, not eavesdrop!

If the cocktail party is of any size, the servant should stroll through the guests offering hors' d'oeuvres from a tray. Drinks may be offered in a similar fashion, though specific cocktail orders should also be encouraged if what is on the tray is not desired by a guest. Smaller get-togethers can be served on a more personal basis, with each guest being asked what he or she would like.

Sissies serving at cocktail parties need not curtsy after every order they receive, of course. But they should certainly offer this cute show of respect whenever they are dismissed by their employer; or when they greet or say goodbye to their mistress' guests.

A maid should always remember that his primary duty is to make his mistress' task of entertaining her guests as pleasant and leisurely as possible. The servant should try to predict the needs of the party guests so his employer will have to issue the minimum amount of orders.

For the intimate dinner for two, the maid should fade into the background (RE: the kitchen) as soon as practical, letting the romantic couple flirt with each other without the annoyance of an over-zealous servant flitting about.

Conclusion

A well-trained sissy maid is an absolute boon to young women who plan to entertain. The service and elegance a maid adds to cocktail parties and small dinner parties cannot be denied. With the proper training and uniforms, there is no reason why a sissy male can't be just as useful and delightful when entertaining as a female servant is.

After all, isn't it about time for "waitressing" to be an equal-opportunity occupation!

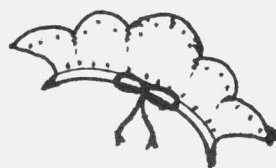

Here's a fashionable uniform for cocktail party service. The traditional styling of a short, flared skirt with a cinched waist and tight bodice is updated with this year's use of sheer.

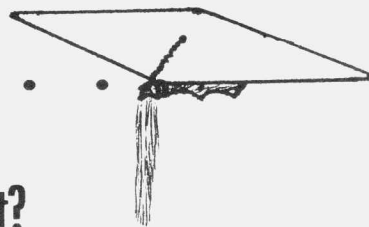

Sewn in gorgeous black silk taffeta, this serving dress is shaped with white crinoline petticoats that are sparkled with silvery metallic highlights. Small rounded cocktail apron is perfect for the elegant style of service a sophisticated affair demands.

Sweetheart neckline is softened with long, sheer sleeves and shoulders. Linen serving gloves and perky French-style cap add the final touches. Apron also has our "SMQ" logo printed on the waist strap!

Sissy Schools. . .

Are They Worth the Cost?

---

Employing sissies as personal domestic servants is still a relatively new social movement. Until recently, there really wasn't much formal training available to sissy males who wished to (or were compelled by circumstances) enter domestic service. Most of the "pioneer" sissy maids learned much of what they know, "on the job." And, since most sissy males seem to have a natural affinity for the menial details of housework and laundry duties, this impromptu' training has worked rather well.

But during the past few years the demand for better trained sissies has spawned several training institutions specializing in preparing sissy males to become domestic servants. Commonly referred to as "sissy schools", these institutions offer a full range of household-appropriate curricula. And in addition to the more "technical" details of housework and laundry, these schools also assist sissies in learning to properly deport themselves in a respectful fashion.

. . .the demand for better trained sissies has spawned several training institutions

More and more young women are availing themselves of sissy maids who have been formally trained and prepared at one of the "sissy schools." (The institutions themselves frown upon this nickname, and vastly prefer to be referred to as "Male Domestic Academies!") The real question is whether these institutions are worth the cost and time for the average employer of a sissy maid. Well, it all depends on what you expect of a maid -- and on what your budget is.

Sometimes, however, your budget and any time constraints you have do not come into the picture. This fortuitous turn of events occurs when a sissy attends one of these schools on his own time, and pays his own tuition. Some sissies go to school on their own, hoping to gain a top-level domestic position. While this eliminates the cost to the employer, and the time delay of waiting for a student maid to matriculate, you don't really get "something for nothing." These fully trained graduate sissies routinely ask for (and usually receive) a higher initial salary than "self-taught" maids expect.

In addition, it should be pointed out that the two best Academies (located near Simi Valley, CA and in Peekskill, NY) generally only accept student maids who are sponsored by a financially-qualified employer. This means that most of the very best sissy maids, with the best schooling, are those who have been sent to "sissy school" by their present (or future) employers.

It all still comes down to the question of whether formally-trained sissy maids are worth the extra time and expense. And the answer to this important question is still largely dependant upon the expectations of the maid's employer.

Most sissies can be taught to do a passable job cleaning house and performing basic laundry chores. And most can also provide low-level serving, fetching, and errand-running chores. While there may be a few rough spots at the beginning, these types of basic domestic tasks are quickly learned by most sissy maids.

But what if what you really desire is a true maid-servant -- a well-trained domestic who can superbly perform all kinds of housework chores, really knows his way around an intricately-pleated skirt with a steam iron, and can smoothly serve at even the most formal of dinner parties with nary a hitch? These highly refined domestic skills are best learned within the structured environment of a training academy, though an exceptional sissy might manage to learn these skills on his own.

Besides refining household skills, the better sissy schools also teach fledgling maids to be what they are: sissies. This may appear redundant, since it seems obvious that a sissy would certainly know how to be a sissy! While that is true, what the schools really do is help sissies accept the social ramifications of their sissiness, and come to terms with it much quicker. Special seminars slowly but firmly teach sissies what their true place in today's world is -- a place that frankly has not been all that well defined for them before.

What you must decide is whether you really only want a sissy "to do the housework and laundry -- and serve a quick breakfast in the kitchen." Or is your true desire directed towards a skilled, respectful servant who will cater to all your needs, from the mundane details of housework, to the fine points of drawing the perfect bath or preparing and serving a scrumptious breakfast in bed. While either "style" of servant will improve your home life, the well-trained maid offers more, and will even suggest ways in which he can be of greater service to you. A schooled maid is also well versed in all the myriad details of assisting a young woman with her dressing. And he may also add to your social life through the ease and elegance a skilled sissy will lend to your efforts to entertain.

Frankly, the sissy schools are rapidly becoming popular for the simple reason that young women now expect much more from their sissy servants than they did just a year or two ago. When once an occasional sloppy curtsy was considered just fine, many young women now expect beautiful, deep curtseys which exhibit a practiced elegance even a deep-South debutante would envy! When once a fashionable woman would send her trickiest laundry problems to the cleaners, she now expects her maid to work wonders in the laundry room. And instead of employers willing to take the time to allow a sissy to get used to their dating and bringing home lovers, many young women today fully expect their maids to happily welcome and wait on their boyfriends right from day one. And without a single pang of jealousy or any silly pouting, either!

Conclusion

Since most sissies seem to learn basic housework and laundry tasks easily, those employers who simply need "a little housekeeper" will usually be satisfied with an "unschooled" sissy maid. But for the new, and growing, ranks of "high expectation" women, hiring a maid who has graduated from a "sissy school" is probably worth the extra salary, (or worth the tuition, if they send a sissy they know to the best Academies.) So, if you really feel you want "the perfect curtsy", send the little sissy to school!

"the Boyfriend" . . .

A Pain in the _____

EDITOR'S NOTE: Boyfriends are the bane of a sissy maid's existence. But, since almost all employers date, and go with guys, "the Boyfriend" is something every sissy must deal with sooner or later. And it's not always easy. For this reason it is recommended that young women go a little easy, romantically speaking, when they first employ a sissy maid. Realistically, it takes some time for a sissy maid to get used to the idea of a boyfriend -- and especially a boyfriend who is around a lot. Perhaps it will be a help to look at "the Boyfriend" from the sissy's perspective. This way, both maids and employers can better understand the strong and conflicted feelings "the Boyfriend" brings to an otherwise blissful domestic situation. The following article is from the sissy's perspective, since the draft it is based on was written by a live-in sissy maid with several years of experience with "boyfriends." (Edited by Sissy Maid Quarterly staff.)

"The Boyfriend" is something we all have to contend with. First, there is the natural resentment we sissies feel when our employer suddenly begins spending almost all her evenings out. It's lonely doing housework all day -- and then finding yourself all alone all evening too. Of course, the reason she is suddenly out so much is "the Boyfriend."

Heightening our resentment is the fact that she will talk of little else during those few precious hours she is at home. While we help her dress for work in the morning, or putter in the kitchen at breakfast, all we hear is how "great" he is -- or how handsome, or brave, or (the worst) how sexy he is! Or, when she finally arrives home from her date at 3 AM, we must listen to her gush about the "perfect" restaurant he took her to while we rub our sleepy eyes -- and help her out of her sexy little dinner dress, and into silk tap pants and a little chemise for bed. (But at least she came home tonight -- which, recently, she hasn't some nights. And it's never too difficult to guess what she's been doing with her new "friend" all night, as we note the happy, tired smile on her face as we help her undress and point her confused-self toward the nice hot shower we've run for her.)

And when our employer finally begins to bring "the Boyfriend" home with her it's even worse. To see her worry about everything being "just so" -- to make us re-double our efforts to make things sparkle and shine, and make us do things over that are really fine. Her hair; her dress; her make-up -- all has to be perfection. And why? Simply because "the Boyfriend" is coming for dinner!

Sooner or later, "the Boyfriend" is something all us sissy maids have to contend with . . .

You in your very best, and very shortest, uniform (and warned to be on your very best and respectful behavior, too!) And the Boyfriend walks in casually dressed -- as if he owns the place. It's odd to see how your employer flirts and gushes and hangs on every word and every glance. I mean -- he's just another guy, right? But he's "the Boyfriend", and that automatically means everything he does, says, and wears is just great, at least to our love-sick employer. In a word, it's disgusting!

But, as domestics we must deal with it all. We are just our mistress' "little employees", after all, and it is not our place to disrupt the domestic situation. (No, that's "the Boyfriend's" job -- believe me, he'll be disruptive enough for you both!) And just thank your lucky stars "the Boyfriend" isn't living with you, (yet, at least) and there are no plans for him to become "the Husband", which is really just the worst.

I have found that the sooner you try to get used to all this, and just accept it as some silly pre-occupation of your employer's, the better it goes. "The Boyfriend" is, after all, a near inevitability. Our employers get lonely, too, so it's only natural for them to look for companionship. And, unfortunately, they are also looking for the kind of "companionship" only a male like "Mr. Macho Boyfriend" can really provide.

In order to better accept the addition of "the Boyfriend" into your domestic scene, you better be prepared for a few quirks, however. These generally fall into three main areas, and are primarily generated by the mistress of the house, rather than by "the Boyfriend."

First, your employer will likely try to have you appear and act even more "sissy" than usual whenever "the Boyfriend" is around. You'll notice that she's suddenly suggesting your shorter uniforms, tightest short-shorts, or frilliest aprons. She might even go so far as to suggest, under your little petticoats, that you don some of those pink panties with all the lace ruffles on the rear -- the ones most employers refer to as "sissy pants". In my experience, you might as well grin and bare it, and basically just swish around even more than you normally would. Somehow, this is all geared towards making "the Boyfriend" feel more comfortable and become more "secure" in his (hopefully temporary) position as "man of the house."

Second, be prepared for your employer to "put you down" a bit when "the Boyfriend" is around. She'll often send you off to the kitchen to "fetch" something, or perhaps derisively refer to you as "the little sissy" in front of her brave new "hero." This is just more posturing to make "the Boyfriend" feel more comfortable. And to show him that she is firmly and completely in control of "the help." A similar urge will in time have your employer encouraging "the Boyfriend" to take a more direct role in supervising you. And soon you will find yourself having to say a snappy "Yes, Sir!" as you scurry off to do the bidding of the new "man of the house." (While the coy, cute little mistress of the house quietly cuddles up to him and gives you a wane smile; as if to say to you; "Isn't he just the coolest?")

Third, and perhaps most disturbing, is the ever-strengthening physical relationship you'll witness between your employer and "the Boyfriend." Flirting at the dinner table quickly turns to heavy "petting" in the living room. And those hot, passionate sofa sessions inevitably lead to the "loving couple" heading off to the Master Bedroom. (And issuing strict instructions to you to "Do Not Disturb" them until late the next morning! At least you don't have to serve them both breakfast in bed -- yet.) Since most of us are emotionally quite close to our employers, seeing "the Boyfriend" casually hug, kiss, and fondle our mistress often results in jealousy and hurt feelings. The only help I can offer is this hint: Try keeping your mind firmly focused on your housework and laundry chores. This sometimes helps matters, but not always. Just try and remember, that as odd as it sometimes seems, it's all just a job -- like any other, except perhaps for all the aprons you have to wear.

Unfortunately, about the time you begin to get used to nights home alone, being treated even more as a sissy than normal, and seeing some virtual stranger head off to the Master Bedroom to the delights of your employer in her sexiest little silk teddy, another ugly problem raises it's head. Laundry. Piles of it -- stacks of it -- and a lot of it sweaty and odious. Yes, it's "the Boyfriend's" laundry, there to haunt you most every weekend. At first it will be "could you just do these few things for him." But that soon plunges into "the Boyfriend" summarily arriving every Friday evening with an overflowing basket or two of his dirty laundry, which is unceremoniously dumped into the laundry room with a flippant "have it done by Sunday!" thrown in for good measure.

For some reason I cannot quite fathom, pretty little mistress seems to oddly get off on having you do her precious boyfriend's laundry. A better showing of power over "the help", I suppose -- or perhaps her way of being feminine and "domestic" for him without having to actually do anything as menial as laundry herself. (Heaven forbid!)

It's all in a day's work for us maids, of course. So say goodbye to those leisurely Saturday afternoons when all the housework was done and mistress was out with her friends. From now on, your Saturday afternoons will be spent in the laundry room, endlessly washing, drying, ironing, and folding all of "Mr. Macho's" boring male clothes! And you'll quickly notice, as I did, that washing T-shirts and gym shorts, and ironing business shirts and cotton boxers, is somehow much worse than dealing with mistress' things. At least her clothes are cute, colorful, sexy, and interesting. Basically, "the Boyfriend's" clothes are just dull and stupid.

"the Boyfriend" always seems to come with piles of dirty laundry as "standard equipment". .

So, if you haven't encountered him already, get ready for "the Boyfriend." Rest assured your employer will drag one home soon, (like a stray dog!) And you'll have to deal with it. (And "it's" laundry, no doubt!)

Be forewarned that some particularly pretty and popular employers end up (horror of horrors!) having more than one boyfriend. Then "the Boyfriend" suddenly becomes a very confusing term -- and that's not all that will seem confusing. Because, of course, you will be expected to juggle all the dinner dates, laundry baskets, and other details, so all "the Boyfriends" don't find out about each other! Not a fun job.

Just running the phone interference for such a fiasco will drive you nuts -- let alone figuring the right move when "the Boyfriend" Number Two shows up at the door when mistress is "occupied" with "the Boyfriend" Number One in the Master Bedroom! And, of course, your employer will be sure to have your pantied little rear if it all blows up in her pretty face.

All I can end with is a hearty and heartfelt -- GOOD LUCK! 🍀

Housework Scheduling

~ The Key to Success ~

In many professions, there is just too much to do in the available time. And this is true for most sissy maids, as well.

Many sissies try to do a good job, but fail because of improper supervision and lack of direction. It is the employer's responsibility to set definite standards of performance, and to expect them to be met. And a big part of this is to develop strict schedules for housework assignments.

Many employers just run out the door in the morning with some vague, yelled-out "do the housework" or "finish all my laundry" as their only communication with the "help." This is simply not providing enough direction and detail. You must do more -- and first and foremost comes housework scheduling. We aren't just talking about some fuzzy "do the ironing on Tuesdays and Saturdays" kind of thing. What is needed is a detailed written schedule of all of your maid's expected duties, broken down day by day.

Housework scheduling is a critical aspect of maid service, since proper scheduling is a key component to a smooth-running

What is needed is a detailed written schedule of all of your maid's expected duties.

household. And remember that the importance of scheduling is no less critical for those of us with a sissy doing our housework as it was for households with more "traditional" maids. In fact, in some regards, scheduling may be more important for the sissy servant, since many of them do not have a lot of experience when they start working in our homes.

All of your sissy maid's regular housework duties should be outlined on a his written schedule. The schedule should be developed by you to suit your particular needs and desires. As an example, some employers might be "clean freaks" and insist that every room be scrubbed constantly -- while "clothes freaks" might need their servants to spend more of their time in the laundry room. In either case, it is up to you to decide what your sissy maid spends his time on each day - - after all, you are the boss!

A written schedule eliminates any silly confusion about who told whom to do what when. It also frees you from the tiresome task of continuously assigning routine household tasks to your servant. All of a maid's regular housework and laundry duties should be automatically performed. In fact, in a well-run household, you should eventually not even have to think about such mundane matters.

Perhaps the best way to begin to educate inexperienced sissy maids and their employers about proper schedules is simply to write one out. What follows is an example of a schedule for a full-time, live-in sissy maid.

Maid's typical housework schedule
DAILY (These tasks are to be performed everyday, automatically, with no prompting or "reminding" from the maid's employer.)
1. Clean up Master Bedroom -- make bed, pick up all clothes, straighten vanity, dust, vacuum, etc.

2. Check and clean Master Bathroom -- pick up used towels and discarded clothing, wipe down surfaces, re-supply fresh towels, toilet paper, soaps and shampoos as needed.
3. Check and straighten up in all other rooms -- clean up any messes that may have made by employer or her guests, dust furniture, vacuum carpets, etc.
4. Keep kitchen spotless at all times -- wash dishes, scrub pots & pans, polish appliances, keep floor clean.
5. Attend to laundry and ironing -- check laundry baskets daily and do as necessary. (Also, do any specific laundry or ironing employer may have mentioned in the morning, including any hand-laundering she may want done.)
6. Take out all trash.

WEEKLY -- In addition to the daily tasks above, the maid should perform the household duties below according to a strict weekly schedule.

MONDAY -- Thoroughly scrub and clean Master Bath, including toilet, tub, sinks, and floor. Also clean surfaces and polish mirrors. Thoroughly clean kitchen, including oven, stove top, and refrigerator. Scrub and wax kitchen floor. Clean up any messes employer or weekend guests have made. Scrub and clean Guest's Powder Room, including toilet and sink, and replenish towels, soaps, toilet paper as needed.

TUESDAY -- Clean and polish foyer and main hallway floors. Spot-shampoo carpets as needed. Check employer's shoes, outerwear, and accessories -- clean and polish as needed, treat leatherwear if needed. Also, do any mending that might be required. Wash all windows, (interior).

WEDNESDAY -- Perform secretarial duties; attend to all the paperwork, including answering mail and typing replies for employer's approval, and writing checks for her signature. Clean and straighten Maid's Room -- change bedlinens, scrub bath, launder cotton uniforms, lingerie, stockings, etc. Press uniforms and aprons. Send formal uniforms for dry-cleaning. Do any mending required.

THURSDAY -- Change linens in Master Bedroom and Bath. Launder employer's bed linens and press carefully with cool iron. Attend to employer's weekly hand-laundering -- lingerie, nightwear, swimwear, workout things, hosiery, etc. Attend to any time-consuming ironing -- intricately pleated skirts, elaborate silk blouses, etc.

FRIDAY -- Thoroughly scrub and clean Master Bath, including toilet, tub, sinks, and floor. Also clean surfaces and polish mirrors. Sweep off balcony and wipe down patio furniture.

Clean refrigerator and freezer, and reorganize. Polish silver service in preparation for use on the weekend. Make sure Guest Room is ready for any guests mistress may invite for the weekend.

SATURDAY -- Polish all furniture in Living Room, Dining Room, and Den/Office with lemon oil. Check china in dining room -- dust and rinse as needed. (Evening: While employer is out with her boyfriend, attend to the boyfriend's laundry and ironing -- press all his shirts, cotton boxers and other clothes as required. Check for missing buttons or other needed repairs and perform as necessary.)

SUNDAY -- Change linen in Master Bedroom and Bath. If silk sheets are used, hand-launder and press carefully with cool iron. Prepare employer's wardrobe for the coming week, making sure everything is ready for her to wear, (including shoes and accessories.)

MONTHLY -- This work is best accomplished while the employer is out of town on business, or away for the weekend with her boyfriend.

Go through employer's closets and dressers -- organize all her clothes and accessories and update her wardrobe list. Turn bed mattresses and cushions as required; launder mattress pads and dust ruffles -- shampoo upholstery as needed. Launder/dry clean curtains and drapes as needed. Shampoo all carpets.

Of course, whenever his employer is at home, a large portion of a sissy maid's time and energy will be directed towards waiting on his employer and running errands for her. Therefore, most of the routine housework and laundry should be done while the employer is at work or out on dates with her boyfriend. And this is especially true for household tasks that are noisy, messy, or otherwise disruptive. A good maid will never disturb the calm and quiet of his employer's evenings or weekend mornings with whining vacuum cleaners, loud dishwashers, or other annoyances.

Ideally, most of the heavier housework should be transparent to the mistress of the

Ideally, most of the heavier housework should be transparent to the mistress of the house. . .

house. It should seem as if messy jobs such as floor scrubbing, bathroom cleaning, and carpet shampooing are just magically done by little elves or something -- the sissy maid's employer should never be inconvenienced with wet floors or half-clean bathrooms. All of this kind of stuff is "maid's work," and the employer simply shouldn't have to bother her pretty head over it.

A word about discipline. . .

A well-trained sissy maid should accomplish all the tasks on his daily schedule without fail. He shouldn't have to "catch up" the next day with things he should have done the day before! However, since no one is perfect, a little discipline may be needed now and then. And it is best if strict discipline is maintained right from the start -- if you allow a maid to get away with sloppy work at first, it is just about impossible to "reform" him later.

Giving a sloppy maid a good, sound spanking is, of course, one way to maintain discipline. Although such spankings (usually administered to the maid's pantied bottom with your hairbrush or some similar implement of "correction") cause little physical pain, they are still a good way to chastise a servant. Bending over a chair back and submitting to a spanking is more than a little humiliating. And the displeasure in your voice as you lecture and scold your maid is often as painful as the spanking itself. (Most sissy maids like and respect their employers, and actually want to please them.)

Although a spanking "now and then" is O.K., you really shouldn't have to discipline your maid often. Your self-assured attitude, as mistress of the house, should be sufficient for keeping most sissy servants in line. Remember, most sissies are practically born servants, so if you find yourself scolding and spanking your maid regularly, you're doing something wrong!

Conclusion. . .

One of the benefits of having a live-in maid is the calm and serenity a servant lends to the household. With everything always clean -- and everything always organized and "taken care of", the homes of women with full-time maids should be luxurious, leisure-filled retreats from the stresses of the everyday world. Proper scheduling and discipline, however, are both key elements in fulfilling your maid's potential to serve you and make your life as carefree as possible. ♡

Spring Cleaning is one of the busiest times of year for sissy servants. And they'll need something practical to wear while they do all that scrubbing and cleaning and polishing. But there's no reason Spring Cleaning can't be done while looking cute, is there?

This hot pink Lycra unitard, with short "bicycle-length" legs and long sleeves has a soft neckline with three-button trim. (Buttons are just for style - unitard zips in back for easy dressing.) Small white nylon apron, with the "SMQ" logo, is very chic, (of course we think so.) Besides, any sissy who reads Sissy Maid Quarterly must be a whiz with housework!

Fashion Notes: Lycra one-piece unitard, back-zip, with long sleeves and short legs; from A Sissy's Work. White nylon apron, with "SMQ" logo, from "Domestic Designs." (Lycra designs this brief and tight call for perfect gaffing. Model shown is wearing a small power-net gaff from Fashion Fantasy.)

Right: Black Lycra housework unitard with long legs and sleeves is perfect for daytime duties. Ruffled apron has trim shoulder straps to help hold it in place. This is a good "daily uniform" for a sissy maid to wear for general housework when his employer is out for the day.

Below Right: It's the end of another very long day, and this sissy servant is ready for his bed. Frothy pink chiffon "baby-doll" nightie, with the hem swirling at the waist, is as short as they come. On his bottom are comfy, full-cut pink nylon "sissy pants" that are covered with ruffled lace front and rear. Cute labeling right on the seat of his panties leaves no doubt as to this pantywaist's prissy desires in clothing and lifestyle!

Off to snuggle into his nice little rubber-sheeted bed for a well-earned night of rest before the housework drudgery begins all over again at 6:30 AM. Hopefully, he'll have sweet, sissy dreams of lace panties, bubble baths, and precious little lingerie shops!

Fashion Notes:

The soft feminine styling that breezed through women's fashion recently also shaped sissy fashions. Though the trend to more tailored designs is definitely here, there's still room for the best of the softest.

This percale cotton maid's dress, in eye-pleasing baby blue, shows the loose skirt and effeminately-styled bodice that is almost classic in it's appeal. Panel-cut nylon-backed cotton apron follows the gentle flare of the sissy's dress. This is a "quiet" uniform design that is ideally suited to dusting, straightening up, and many other light duties, as well as casual service.

Fashion Notes: Soft-cut cotton maid's dress, in baby blue, from A Sissy's Work. (Also available in light grey, pink, and pale yellow.) Nylon-backed apron, in white, from Maid To Order. Sheer, light blue tint nylon stockings; and model's garter belt and lingerie from Sissy's Secret.

A determined sissy marches off to war -- war with a dirty bathroom, that is! One of this Spring's best and most practical designs, a Lycra unitard with Capri-length legs and 3/4-length sleeves, is perfect for nearly any housework or laundry duty.

Matched here with a pink rubber pinafore apron and rubber housework gloves, this dedicated sissy maid is ready for the most daunting of household battles.

So, it's "off to war" for little Major Sissy Pants. The awful battle of the soap scum and mildewed tile has begun! Fortunately, however, the little dear is properly equipped. And for his employer's sake, we can only hope he wins!

Fashion Notes: One-piece Lycra Capri-length housework unitard, in black with white banded cuffs on sleeves and legs, back zippered; from 21st Century Housework. Pink rubber pinafore, with "rubber apron" graphic print, from "A Sissy's Work." Rubber gloves from Domestic Designs. Vinyl scrub pail; and soft scrub brush; both from RubberMate. Grey leather pumps, with 4-inch heels, from Tippy Toe, (and not for cleaning bathrooms in, obviously!) ● # the Employer's Side...

From time to time, SMQ interviews employers to get their side of the story. Read how one successful young fashion model lives with her sissy maid in New York.

Miss Christy Stephenson is a New York fashion model. She's not quite one of the "supermodels" we hear so much about, but she is quite successful. In addition to her considerable fees for both studio and runway work, she has recently signed an exclusive contract to represent one of the smaller cosmetics concerns. Her yearly income is estimated to be in the high six figures -- pretty good when you're only 22! Christy's been modeling in New York since she was 17, so she's considered a "veteran" of this, the most mercurial of professions. Christy is tall and has a trim, gorgeous figure, (big surprise). And her face can stop traffic, with or without make-up. She talks fast, and often seemed in a hurry when I spoke with her on the phone to set up this interview. What I wished to speak about, of course, was her relationship with her maid, a sissy who's been working full-time for her for about two years. But Christy was always busy, and it took quite a few calls before we could schedule a convenient time to interview her. Finally, she agreed to sit down with me at her place at Noon on a cold winter Sunday.

Christy lives in an imposing building on the upper east side. I arrived at the appointed time and was rung up after checking in with security. Once on Christy's floor, I rang the bell of her apartment. In a moment the door was opened by a congenial maid dressed in a sleek, charcoal grey uniform and a rounded, ruffled-edge apron that was so white it seemed to glow. The sissy was so effeminate, it was really difficult to tell he was not a girl. I stammered out that I was there to see "Miss Christy" as the maid motioned for me to enter.

The sissy's voice, though meek and rather high, was more husky than most girl's, and it was one of the few clues as to the servant's true gender.

"Hello. Miss Christy is waiting for you in the living room, Miss," the maid said as he began to take my coat. I allowed him to take it and hang it up.

"Follow me, please, Miss," the maid said softly.

I watched intently as the maid walked in front of me. He stepped gracefully down the hallway in black leather pumps with thin, 3-inch heels. Dark grey nylons shimmered slightly on his legs, which were long, thin, and pretty. (I've noticed that sissies invariably have great legs -- so much so it can make a girl with thick ankles mad sometimes!)

The maid's apron straps were tied in a perfect bow at the small of his back, the trailing ends fluttering slightly as he moved. The uniform had long, closely-tailored sleeves, and was accented with a starched white lace collar and cuffs.

The fitted maid's dress was tight in the waist and hugged the maid's body. . .

---

The fitted maid's dress was tight in the waist and hugged the maid's body. I found myself watching his rounded, girlish bottom wiggle under his tight dress as he stepped along on his heels. For a split second, I thought I even saw panty lines showing through his dress.

"I see you've met Cissie," Christy said. . .

---

We suddenly emerged into a large room that was sunken two steps below the hallway. Curled up on a long leather sofa was Christy. She had on a beautiful beige cashmere sweater and comfy-looking ivory satin lounging pants. Her hair was tied up and she had on little tortoise-frame reading glasses, which she quickly took off as she looked up to greet me.

"I see you've met Cissie," Christy said as she uncurled herself and stood to shake my hand.

"Yes, I have," I said. I then proceeded to gush over Christy's apartment and thank her for seeing me.

The model sat down on the sofa and offered me a place beside her. I noticed she was barefoot, and that her toenails were perfectly pedicured and polished. Her hands were smooth and soft, and her fingernails were long and polished. It was entirely obvious that I was looking at a girl who was completely unfamiliar with housework of any kind.

"Cissie, go ahead and serve tea now," Christy said casually to her maid.

I'd almost forgotten about the sissy, who was, of course, the main reason I was even there. But Christy is so damn beautiful, she sort of dazzles you. And if I were a man, I don't know what my reaction would be!

"Very well, Miss" Cissie said as he dipped into an obviously well-practiced curtsey. With that the maid turned and stepped off, presumably in the direction of the kitchen.

"So, what do you want to know?" Christy said. She added that she was meeting her boyfriend at 3:00 for lunch down in SoHo, so our time was a little limited.

Cissie's Employer - Rich, demanding, pampered, and beautiful. . .

I told her about the magazine, and about our interview and editing procedures. By the time I'd finished my little "speech", Cissie was walking towards us with a large silver tray.

"Tea's here," Christy said as the maid carefully placed the tray on the low table before us.

The maid asked me if I preferred decaf or regular. Apparently the sissy was already well aware of his mistress' preferences, however, since her cup already had a tea bag nestled in it. He bent deeply at the waist and poured steaming water into two china cups from the pot. After he had poured the tea, he stood and folded his hands over his white ruffled apron.

"That will be all for now, Cissie," Miss Christy said as she reached forward for her tea. Then she smiled and said, "Go ahead and start that ironing I told you about -- I'll ring if our intrepid reporter here needs to speak with you or anything."

The maid bobbed a nice curtsy and said, "Yes, Miss" in a respectful tone of voice a girl doesn't often hear in New York. (Actually, a girl never hears such a voice in New York, but I wish we did. It was comforting and empowering just to hear it.) Cissie then stepped off lightly to attend to his mistress' ironing. (What a way to live, girls -- but on my present salary I can't afford a "Cissie", unfortunately!)

And then the interview began.

SMQ: "Well, I'd like to hear how you came to hire Cissie. I guess we can start with how you met him."

MISS C: "I didn't actually meet him, personally, at first. Actually, he was hanging around a girl I knew, another model. Anyway, she's not even in the City anymore. Cissie was really love-sick over Julie -- like a lot of sissies get, I guess. Julie would tell us about him when we'd be getting made-up before shoots. She said it was funny, because "little Stevie"; oh, . . . Cissie's name was actually Steve; . . . and Julie called him "Stevie" 'cause he's so much of a sissy. . . well, Julie would tell us about him and say how he'd do anything for her. So, one time her apartment was a disas- ter, just awful and messy and everything. And her boyfriend, some stuck-up Ivy League type, was coming into town for the weekend. And Julie had to work all week. She told us how she got "Stevie" to clean her apartment for her. She told him she'd go out with him if he spent Thursday and Friday cleaning her place. And she really had him do everything; scrub the floors, clean the closets, do mountains of laundry, even the bathrooms! We laughed hearing about it. I mean, what a sissy!

And then it was even worse, because when everything was done perfectly Friday night, and this poor little guy was exhausted and sweaty from doing all her housework, Julie just blew him off! She said, "Oh, my boyfriend called and he's coming into town tonight. So you have to leave, Stevie. Thanks for everything!" And then she just kicked the sissy out and closed the door! We were all around 20 at the time, and pretty catty and stuff, so we just thought it was hilarious.

And I met Stevie about two weeks later, when Julie had him stop by a shoot so she could apologize. She felt a little guilty, of course. She hadn't even paid him or anything for the all the housework he did."

SMQ: "But how did that result in Cissie becoming a maid -- your maid?"

MISS C: "Well, some of the models I knew in Paris and out in LA had sometimes talked about how they had "male maids". I didn't really know what they were talking about at first, but once on a shoot in Malibu I stayed with a model who had one. It was neat to see this sissy wait on her and everything. And the model's house was spotless, and she told me the sissy did all her housework and everything. I just thought it was fabulous -- he even wore a frilly little apron!

When I got back here, I just kept thinking about how great it would be to have a maid. And I liked the idea of a sissy for some reason. It seemed new and different. I'd been thinking about household help anyway, because I was just having this place redone for me. I knew I couldn't take care of it. To be honest, I've never done housework and laundry and cooking and all that. I've been modeling for good money since I was 14, back in Dallas. I don't even know how to do all that stuff -- and I don't want to know how.

None of the other models I knew here had a sissy maid at the time, and wanted to be first. I mean, some of the other girls had

"None of the other models... had a sissy maid at the time, and I wanted to be first."

talked about it, so I could tell someone was going to get one. So why not be the first?"

And then I called Stevie up one weekend and took him to lunch at some fancy place and got all dressed and made-up, like when I'm working. I sort of stunned him, I guess. You should have seen his face when I told him that I what I really wanted was for him to work for me as my maid!"

SMQ: "Did he agree to it right off, or was it hard to get him to do it?"

MISS C: "Well, he thought it was strange. But he'd heard of sissy maids, and he sort of knew deep inside that he was a sissy. That's not something you can really hide, I guess, especially from yourself. So, it took some time and some talking -- and a little bit of money, too."

SMQ: "I know it's none of my business, but could you give us some idea of what Cissie gets paid? No need to actually name a figure."

MISS C: "The sissy lives here, of course, so I take care of all his expenses, room and board, and all the uniforms and things, too. The salary is just O.K., but I gave him a large signing bonus that stays in escrow for four years. Dangling the lump sum helped him make the decision to go for it. And it's a way to keep firm control, since if I'm not a satisfied customer, he won't receive all of the payout at four years, though he'll still do O.K."

SMQ: "Do you think he'll quit after the four years are up?"

MISS C: "I don't really think so. Once a sissy like him gets into it, there's no easy way to turn back. I mean, you've seen him -- he looks like a girl, basically. He's all shaved, of course, and he's worn girl's and sissy's clothing so long he'd probably feel weird in boy's things. And he also takes small doses of hormones to help soften his appearance. But I figure that's not the only thing they've softened, if you know what I mean!

Really, I think he likes being my sissy maid, now that he's used to it. He gets to live in a nice place like this, and do housework and laundry and all the kind of stuff sissies tend to like anyway. Of course, he also gets to wear cute uniforms, too, and soft pink panties -- and sissies love wearing all those prissy little things like that."

SMQ: "What kinds of things does Cissie do for you? I mean, besides housework, of course."

MISS C: "Well, doing all the housework is a lot. I'm kind of picky, so everything has to be perfect all the time. But Cissie also takes care of all my clothes -- launders them, irons them, puts them away for me. And he mends little things, too, if they need it. He also does all the cooking and cleaning up in the kitchen, of course."

SMQ: "Well, I guess I mean what kinds of things does he do for you. Not housework things; more personal duties."

MISS C: "Oh, sure. He helps me get dressed and undressed. It makes it nice to have someone help you. Some of the gowns and wild evening dresses I have, you really couldn't even get into them without help. And he draws my bath or runs a shower for me. It's nice to step into a bath or shower that's perfectly adjusted -- Cissie even uses a thermometer, to make sure the temperature is right on. And he does my nails for me most of the time -- unless I get them done on a shoot, which happens pretty often too. And he gets me things -- like serving the tea, or going and getting something I want that's in my bedroom. I mean, he's my servant, so whatever I need done he sort of does for me, you know?"

SMQ: Does he help out when you have people over -- for parties or dinners and so forth?"

MISS C: "Sure. One of the best reasons to have a sissy maid is for entertaining. It makes it so nice. He cooks and serves and cleans up. My girlfriends think it's great when I dismiss him after dinner so he can get busy with the dishes in the kitchen. I think they like the role reversal of it, even though he isn't really a "guy", since he's such a sissy. And he does look kind of cute standing at the sink in his pink rubber apron and gloves!"

SMQ: "This final question is a little touchy. But how does your boyfriend take all this? I mean, having Cissie live here with you and everything."

MISS C: (laughing) "He thinks it's great. With a maid, I have more time to spend with him, which is all he cares about. He's seen Cissie, of course, and it's not like he thinks my maid is going to seduce me or something. Frankly, with models, that's probably more likely to happen with a female maid, if she was beautiful. No one's really going to be interested in a sissy -- you know, that way; are they? So it's no problem at all. Cissie, however, had a few bouts with jealousy when I first started bringing my boyfriend home. But he got over it. Cissie waits on Frank now like he's one of the family, and they get along fine. Cissie even does his laundry for him."

With that, the interview ended. But Miss Christy then took me on a tour of her apartment. It was unbelievable, girls. Christy's apartment flies in the face of all those "my New York apartment is so small" jokes -- it's very spacious, and every room is large and airy. Just some of the spoils of perfect genes, I guess!

We started the tour in her bedroom. Cissie cutely refers to it as "the Master Bedroom", and I could see why. It is huge, and has an immense pedestal bed. Half a dozen models and their men could have an orgy on this thing, (and probably have!) The "master bath" is attached, and is all done in a light rose marble with a large semi-sunken tub in the center. Absolutely beautiful.

Of course you want to know what her closet was like -- we're always interested in what a successful fashion model's closet looks like. Well, it was depressing to me -- but only because I don't own it! Christy's walk-in closet is larger than my bedroom, and it is filled with the most gorgeous clothes you'll ever see. Racks and racks of slinky dresses and skirts and great, colorful blouses -- all from designers and hung perfectly from padded hangers, of course. And I don't even want to tell you about her shoes, because it would make you cry.

Next, we went to Cissie's room, which is right next to the "Master" Bedroom. The door is labeled in a fancy script "Maid's Room", which I thought was cute. The room itself is about the size of my bedroom -- meaning smallish. But it was nicely decorated in a rather girlish style. Most everything was either pink or white, with bits of lacy trim and chiffon ruffles here and there as well. The little single bed and it's matching dresser and vanity looked like something out of some pre-pubescent girl's bedroom. And there was a bathroom right off the bedroom, though much smaller and plainer than Miss Christy's, of course.

The maid's room had a walk-in closet, which Christy showed me through quickly. Various styles of maid's dresses were hung on racks, including fancy serving styles with short, full skirts made of taffeta or satin. And clouds of frothy white petticoats hung beside them, their exuberance partially restrained with little pink nylon straps so they wouldn't take up acres of closet space.

The Laundry Room was just down the hall from the Maid's Room. When we walked in, Cissie was standing at the ironing board pressing one of Christy's skirts. The maid bobbed a quick, tiny curtsy in deference to his mistress' presence, but he did it so quickly and was back to ironing so rapidly I almost missed it. I thought it a nice, old-fashioned gesture of respect, however. The laundry was busy, and Miss Christy's clothes were hanging all over the place, including several small racks of undoubtedly hand-laundered silk lingerie and colorful Lycra work-out things.

"Cissie, I'll be needing to get dressed soon to leave. Make sure the outfit I mentioned at breakfast is laid out for me," Christy said casually as we were leaving the laundry.

I glanced and noticed the sissy curtsy and say quickly "Yes, Miss; of course."

The tour continued through the kitchen, dining room, and den. It was all very nice. And frankly, any girl would love living there, especially with a full-time maid!

Christy called for Cissie to come say goodbye to me, and to help me on with my coat. The maid stepped down the hall, his hips swaying back and forth under his apron. As the sissy helped me on with my coat, I asked him what the rest of his day would be like.

"I have quite a bit of ironing to finish yet, Miss. And then some housework. And then I have to begin working on tonight's dinner. Miss Christy is bringing her boyfriend home, and I'm making them their favorite meal."

Christy smiled and said, "Fresh, chilled lobster salad and champagne -- Cissie's cooking is delicious."

The sissy beamed with pride, obviously quite pleased his mistress enjoyed his efforts in the kitchen. As I said goodbye and shook

---

Christy's hand, Cissie bobbed a small curtsy to me and said "Goodbye, Miss -- it was nice meeting you," in his small, meek voice.

As I walked down towards Central Park South to catch a cab, I thought about how nice Miss Christy's life must be. And I must admit that my impression of Cissie was that he was happy in his life as her maid. It was obviously a lot of work, and the social inequities were obvious as well. But he seemed happy to be providing someone he liked and respected a very luxurious and care-free domestic life.

All this sissy maid business has a definite future. Anyway, I hope so, since I can't wait until I can afford one myself!

The Maid's Room

A continuing look at what's new, and what's proper, in and for The Maid's Room.
This issue: Selecting and decorating a Maid's Room specifically for the sissy male.

Decorating a Maid's Room is not a difficult task. But it does require some thought and planning, especially on the part of the employer. While a maid is often consulted, the final decisions are the employer's alone -- after all, it's her home!

The sissy male maid's requirements for a servant's quarters are remarkably similar to those of a female maid. But there are a few small differences, most of which will be covered in this edition of "The Maid's Room." Sissy maids should be able to feel "at home" in their quarters, and should also feel secure there. It is the single place within the household where they are not "on duty" -- and is the only place where they can untie their aprons and relax between work sessions that sometimes last for many hours.

The location of the Maid's Room is vitally important...

The first consideration for a proper servant's quarters is the location. This is vitally important, and should be considered for some time before a final decision is arrived at. Most employers have to work within the confines of an existing home or apartment, while the lucky few who may be building a custom residence can work with the architect and design the "perfect" servant's quarters.

The ideal location is one which is a bit out of the way, but is still close to the laundry room, the Master Bedroom, and the kitchen. The "perfect" Maid's Room will have it's own attached bath, a walk-in closet, and direct access to and from the laundry room. These features are important because a maid must often check make-up and uniform status before "appearing" to serve at parties and other social functions. The walk-in closet is nice for storage of a maid's many uniforms and service accessories. (All those frothy petticoats take up a lot of room!) And direct access to the laundry room adds convenience, since maids tend to spend so much of their time there, especially in the evenings. In addition, the ideal Maid's Room is close to the Master Bedroom so that late night summoning for service, such as a glass of water or to have one's bed turned down, is easy and convenient for the employer.

Often newer homes have small fourth or fifth bedrooms located near the Master Bedroom. These little rooms are probably intended for small children or infants, but they can serve as very suitable quarters for a sissy. The only drawback these little bedrooms have is their almost universal lack of an attached bath. But if a communal bath is close by, your maid can "make do."

Apartments sometimes pose problems. There is often little extra space in apartments, unless you are one of those lucky girls who has a giant duplex on Park Avenue! But many apartments have small second bedrooms, usually located quite near the Master Bedroom.

Once the room is selected, decorating can begin. First, if the room has been used for some other purpose, strip it completely of furnishings and decorating elements. There is very little chance anything that exists already would be suitable or desirable for the sissy maid. Next, a color scheme is selected.

This is relatively easy, since almost all sissy maid's rooms are done up in some combination of white and pale pink. If the walls are to be pink, select a white carpet. Or, with white walls, choose a pink carpet. If wallpaper accents are desired, there are a number of feminine designs in matching shades of pink and white available. Some of the most popular include small "Victorian" sketches of girls in frilly dresses, various flowery florals, and one particularly cute design that has (suitably) pink high heels and lace aprons dancing across it.

Once the painting, carpeting, and (if desired) wallpapering are done, it is time to begin selecting furnishings. First, your maid will need a place to sleep, of course. It is a tradition already that sissy maids always sleep in little single beds -- NOT doubles or anything larger. These little beds take up much less room in cramped Maid's Rooms, and this alone makes them the best choice. But it is also true that sissy maids will never have any overnight guests that might require a larger bed. It is a well-known fact that sissy maids sleep alone, 365 nights a year. Therefore they simply need nothing larger than their cute little "single."

The bed frame should be of some effeminate design, so that it is suited to the sissy who will be dreaming in it. Some employers go so far as to have their maids sleep in single canopy beds -- like those some 11 year-old girls have. While there is certainly nothing wrong with this, the luxury of a lace canopy is not really required. The old standby, French Provincial, is a safe choice, as are plainer designs in pink or white enamel.

A sissy maid's bed should always be a cute little single one. . .

---

The single bed should be outfitted with a frilly dust ruffle, a ruffled chiffon spread, and lace-edged pillow shams. These can be in either pale pink or white, depending on what the rest of the room's color scheme is. A reversible satin comforter (pink on one side -

Sissies naturally love frilly decorating schemes . . .

---

white on the other) should be provided for use on cool nights. Finally, pink rubber "sissy sheets" should always be used on sissies' little beds, of course. (Details about these will be covered in a future SMQ issue.)

A small bedside table should be purchased, to go with the bed. It needn't be large or elaborate -- just a spot to have a glass of water and a small lamp is all that is needed.

Since the Maid's Room is often so small, it is very nice if all the furniture matches in style and design. This helps give a small room the slight appearance of space.

The next piece to look for (and matching the selected bed) is a dresser. Sissy maids require a good-sized dresser, since they have lots of tights, nightwear, and lingerie to store. (Have you ever seen a sissy's panty drawer? Most are so overflowing they barely close!)

A small vanity is a very nice addition, and is especially crucial if the Maid's Room does not have an attached bath. The vanity should have a small stool and adequate lighting for make-up sessions. And a wicker wastebasket nearby for all the cotton balls and tissues is a requirement as well.

In addition to the vanity, a little desk is nice for the Maid's Room to include. This is an optional item, however, so if you have your maid "housed" in something not much larger than a closet, you can skip the desk. But in rooms that can accommodate them, a desk can be useful. Where else would be quite so perfect for your maid to write out your Thank-You notes -- or perform other little secretarial chores than at his own desk in his own room. The sissy is out of the way, and as busy as a little beaver -- what could be better?

The details of decorating are the fun part. If there is a window, put up lacy curtains. Also, use lace doilies, china figurines, and other juvenile and effeminate elements to make your sissy "feel at home." His little room should, of course, support his naturally sissified tastes and help further develop his sissy identity. While he may balk a bit at first, once in the privacy of his new little lair, he will no doubt love all the frilliness, and feel perfectly comfortable there.

The Maid's Bath requires little decoration. But a few hints may help in this area. First, if the bath is not attached to the Maid's Room, it must be decorated in a way that is both appropriate for the maid, and for possible guests. And the maid should have some way of carrying hair products, bath soaps, and all the other paraphernalia a sissy regularly uses to and from the bath. These products should not be kept in the bath, since they will clutter it up and make it less inviting to guests.

If the Maid's Bath is attached to the Maid's Room, decorating becomes easier. The same pink and white, effeminate design elements used in the Maid's Room can be echoed in the bath. Also, with any bath for a maid, it is almost imperative that it have a tub, and not just a shower. This is because sissy maids often have to bathe without messing up their hair, and this is much easier with a tub. Besides, most sissies just love taking frequent, skin-softening bubble baths -- and why deny them one of the very few pleasures in their lives.

A tub is a very nice addition, since most sissies love taking bubble baths. . .

So, after all the decorating have made it so comfortable, how to you get the little servant out of there? Well, most employers install some sort of bell or buzzer system to

"alert" the maid that he is needed. And a small light board above his door indicates where his services are required: "Master Bedroom"; "Master Bath"; "Kitchen"; "Den" and "Living Room" are all that are usually required. The buzzer/light system should be able to be accessed from convenient locations throughout the home. Near mistress' bed would be one certain location. But beside her bath, near her favorite chair in the living room or den, and in the kitchen are other possible spots for a button. With this simple method, (variations of which have been used with maidservants for over 100 years now) a simple push of a button can bring your maid scurrying to your side from anywhere in the house.

A convenient method for summoning the maid should be provided. . .

Some employers even install similar buzzer/light board units above the ironing board in the laundry room and above the sink in the kitchen, since these are both places where sissy maids spend so much of their waking hours. With these additional boards, the maid can easily be called from housework to serve tea or run errands.

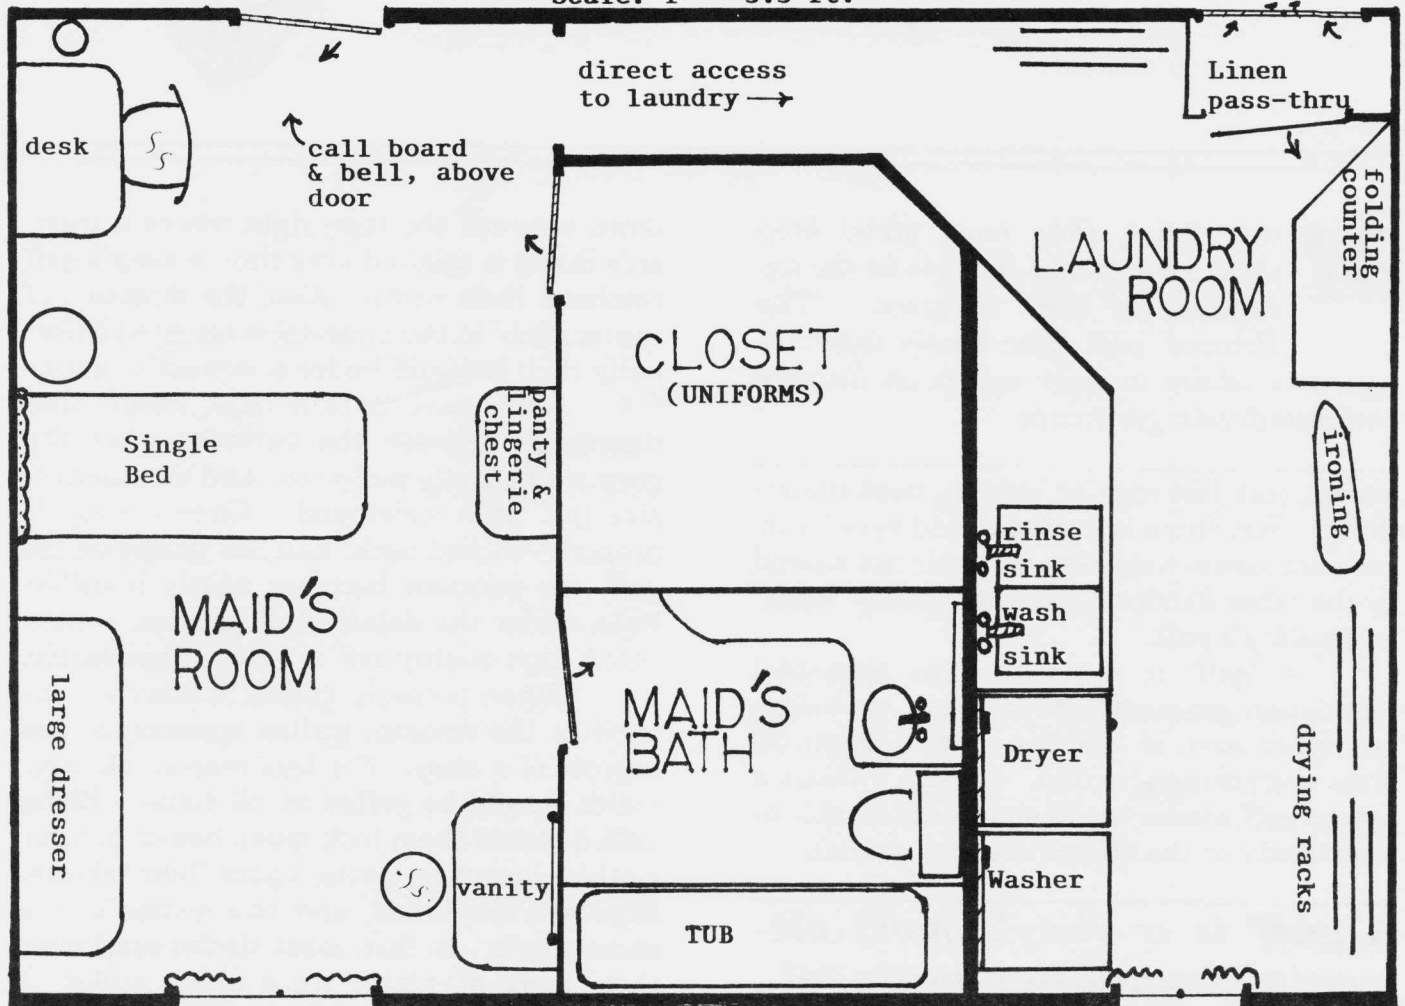

A final note to remember about the Maid's Room is, simply, that it should be clearly labeled as such on the door. This labeling makes sure all guests and visitors know you have a live-in maid, even when he is engaged out of sight in the kitchen or laundry room. And it makes it clear your "little sissy" sleeps alone in his own little room. This point is of some importance since some "sneaky" sissies without labeled quarters sometimes try to tell others (with a wink and a nod) that they sleep in the Master Bedroom! Of course, no one really believes them -- but it's a good idea to label your Maid's Room anyway -- in a nice, big, curly sissy script: Maid's Room.

Layout of Ideal Maid's Quarters

With Attached Bath & Laundry Facility

Scale: 1" = 3.3 ft.

The above is one example of an ideal Maid's Room for the live-in sissy domestic. This Maid's Room suite has an attached bath and laundry room, as well as a walk-in closet, all of which are desirable for the "ideal" servant's quarters.

The attached laundry room offers convenience to the maid, while keeping it out of the way and "behind the scenes." The laundry's linen pass-through assists the maid in quickly returning freshly-laundered towels, linens, and clothing. Large sink is specially designed for hand-laundering duties, and drying racks are provided for delicate items.

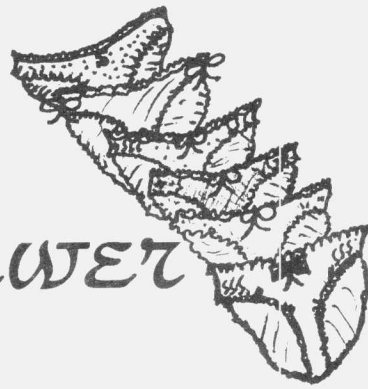

Maid's Room includes the expected single bed, vanity, small desk, and dressers. Maid's bath is small, but entirely adequate. Decoration and color scheme would be of the generally effeminate, "frilly" style discussed in the accompanying article.

Walk-in closet handles storage for a sissy maid's numerous uniforms, including the voluminous petticoats often worn under short formal serving dresses.

This generic layout, in part copied from the design of a wealthy New York fashion model's Maid's Quarters, may serve as a guide for the design of quarters for sissy maids.

Top Drawer

Most sissies, (like most girls) keep their panties and lingerie in the top drawers of their dressers. "Top Drawer" will offer timely information and advice to sissy maids on lingerie and foundation garments.

Sissies, just like men or women, need underthings. But there is a special, and very basic, garment sissies wear that is simply not shared by the other genders. That important "basic" is the sissy's gaff.

A "gaff" is a sissy's most elemental foundation garment, and it is put on before any other item of clothing, and is taken off after everything else, too. In fact, without a proper gaff, sissies would simply not be able to wear many of the effeminate and sissyish

A gaff is a sissy's most elemental foundation garment.

clothing styles male maids routinely wear, (and, indeed, most sissies actually love.)

For those who may not know, a gaff is a small, tight, panty-like item whose sole purpose is to firmly pin a sissy's genitals back between his legs under his bottom, where they belong. The gaff is quite specialized, in part because the only gender who would have any use for one at all is sissies.

Gaffs are made from either stretchy nylon powernet or smooth, resilient latex, and they are always in a beige or "nude" color that closely matches the sissy's own skin tone. They are shaped somewhat like a thong panty, but there are important differences. First, down between the legs, right where a woman's thong is tailored very thin, a sissy's gaff retains a little width. Also, the direction of the "stretch" in the material is oriented differently than it would be for a woman's thong.

Gaffs have a thin back strap (that disappears between the buttocks when the garment is firmly pulled on) and an unobtrusive flat little waistband. Once a sissy is properly "tucked back" and has pulled on his gaff, the garment becomes nearly invisible. Even under the daintiest of panties, a well-fitted, high quality gaff is quite unnoticeable.

When properly gaffed, a sissy's front exhibits the smooth, girlish appearance one expects of a sissy. For this reason, all sissy maids should be gaffed at all times. Being gaffed makes them look much better in their clothes, including tights, Lycra "bike" shorts, little exercise briefs, and this season's new short-shorts. In fact, most sissies even wear their gaffs at night, since many styles of nightie panties and tap pants tend to require them.

Gaffs fit very tightly, and are often a struggle to put on. Some sissies even have to lay on their beds and wiggle into their gaffs, like some girls struggled into skin-tight "designer" jeans years ago. Gaffs cannot be pulled out of the way or easily removed; yet another reason why sissies invariably sit whenever they go to the rest room.

Being gaffed is a very basic and normal condition for a sissy male . . .

Being gaffed is a very basic condition for a sissy male, with psychological as well as physiological benefits. By firmly pinning back his small, sissyish appendage, a gaff allows a sissy's appearance to more closely match his personality and inner (and ineffectual) sexuality. The gaff also allows the sissy to attractively wear the tight effeminate clothing styles he actually feels most comfortable in.

By being gaffed a sissy also sends strong signals to others. His status as a sissy is plainly advertised, which lets others immediately determine his totally non-threatening sexual persona.

At first, many sissies find being in a tight little gaff is a little uncomfortable. They often report that there is a definite feeling they are "sitting on themselves", which can be disconcerting. Sissy maids, of course, do not really get the chance to sit that much, so they do not experience this problem with gaffs quite as severely as sissies who may not be domestics.

But nearly all sissies eventually take to their gaffs like a duck takes to water. And, after several months, most sissy maids routinely wear their gaffs twenty-four hours a day, seven days a week. Their gaff basically

For most sissies, being gaffed is as normal and expected as bathing. . .

---

becomes almost a part of their body -- and the way it smooths their frontal appearance certainly becomes a part of their body image.

For most sissies, being gaffed is as normal and expected as bathing or other forms of grooming. Tucking themselves back into their gaff and pulling it up tight is just something they do, just before they put on their panties.

(And speaking of grooming, it is an excellent idea for sissy maids to shave (or use a good depilatory) over their entire bodies. Gaffs work better, and are more comfortable to wear, when a sissy is totally free of body hair everywhere.)

When gaffed, a male maid's effeminate and sissified clothing will fit much better. As just one example, all of his panties will fit him much better, including the little bikini styles many sissies opt for. In addition, tight mini-skirts will fit the maid with a smooth, flat front.

But perhaps the benefits of proper gaffing are most useful when a sissy maid is in Lycra tights or "bike" shorts. The smooth, sleek way these tight garments hug a gaffed sissy's front is actually quite cute, and is a definite visual reminder of a male maid's innate sissiness. This area is usually hidden by a sissy maid's apron, but the fact that he is firmly gaffed underneath his uniform is still important.

. . . gaffs are especially useful when worn under Lycra tights or other thin, stretchy "bottoms" . . .

This season's big fashion trend for sissies, short-shorts, will likely make proper gaffing more important than ever. The new short-shorts are surprisingly brief and tight, and leave very little to the imagination. And this year's short-shorts for sissies are extremely tight-fitting at the crotch, which may make having a good gaff as much a comfort concern as it is a fashion statement!

For so many of the effeminate and sissy-ish styles of clothing male maids routinely wear, being gaffed is imperative. These tight-fitting, "cling-y" clothing styles simply will not fit correctly without the sissy wearing them being firmly and tightly gaffed.

Sissies and gaffs simply go together, like well-endowed women and bras. A gaff is perhaps a sissy's most important "fashion basic", and all male maids should have an ample supply of them in their "top drawer."

Report from The Laundry Room

Since sissy maids spend so much time in the Laundry Room, they might as well know what they're doing! This time: How to properly iron your employer's "separates", such as blouses, skirts, and pants.

---

One of the most important places sissy maids spend their work time is in the laundry room. And specifically, at the ironing board. Yes, in survey after survey young women have emphatically stated that a sissy maid's skills at the ironing board are one of the single most important aspects of his overall job performance. This is surprising, since there is so much more sissies do around the house. But it is true nonetheless.

Women care a lot about their appearance, and their clothes are a big part of that. This is perhaps especially true of the successful young women whom sissy maids most often find themselves working for. This at least partially explains why "proper ironing" comes in so astonishingly high in the above-mentioned surveys. In any case, it is high time male maids all learned to do a thorough and proper job at the ironing board. They are paid to do no less, after all.

Surveys show women believe excellent ironing skills are among the most important assets a sissy maid can have. . .

The first step of proper ironing is actually practicing proper laundry procedures. Delicate blouses and fine wool skirts and pants need to be cared for carefully, from the moment they are taken off our employer until they are returned to her closet. So, save yourself some time and make sure you try to pick up your employer's discarded clothing as soon as possible. This is easy if you happen to be assisting her to undress, but sometimes she'll throw something on the floor of the Master Bedroom when you're not in attendance, so you won't even know about it! You must remember to check as often as possible (without being a pest, of course) so that her pretty linen blouse or fine wool trousers don't take a nasty "set" crinkled up in that corner by the bed.

Next, try to perform your ironing chores as soon as possible after laundering the items. In extreme cases (such as chiffon or certain linens) you should launder, dry, and press the item in a close sequence. This procedure certainly plays havoc with the "assembly line" method you may like to employ in the laundry room, but it is the only way to properly care for some of your employer's finer garments.

Unfortunately it is true what they say. For certain blouses and pleated skirts, a maid must spend at least as many hours laundering, drying, ironing and hanging/folding the garment as his mistress spends wearing it. For some categories, such as knife-pleated tennis skirt outfits, you will likely spend at least two or three hours of your time for every one hour mistress wears them! This may seem unfair, but it is for just these reasons your employer hired you in the first place. It is a big part of your job to make sure her clothing is always perfect, so she can have

Some styles of clothing require many more hours of care than the hours they are worn. . .

the pleasure of always looking perfect. And, unfortunately, this may include short little knife-pleated tennis skirts that she'll sweat in on the court in mere minutes. (But she'll look terrific while she's doing it, with all those tiny, perfect pleats making her skirt swirl around her tanned thighs!)

Blouses should always be pressed first, since they generally take the longest time and are so visible when worn. The sleeves of the blouse should be pressed first, and then the "body". Otherwise, you would wrinkle the body of the blouse as you pressed the sleeves. Immediately after a blouse is pressed it should be carefully placed on a padded hanger and hung in a secure location. The blouse should be buttoned all the way up on the hanger -- not just the top button or two. This procedure keeps it safe in the closet, and also helps keep the blouse body as wrinkle-free as possible.

Specific fabric care is a broad and rather technical subject. It is best to check some of the better textile care books (they may be on your laundry room shelf) for the details of fabric care. Also, always check the little tag that is sewn into every garment as to it's proper care -- and follow any instructions to the letter.

Today's sheer chiffon blouses, while pretty, require demanding care. Only a barely-warm iron can be used with these wispy blouses, and it may take many passes to get worrisome wrinkles out. Thankfully, most of the sheer bodysuits "in" right now do not need pressing if they are hand-laundered and very carefully laid out on screens to dry.

Lace insets, so often used with "business" blouses, are another source of trouble. A bit of steam and a not-too-hot iron may be used, but the best medicine is an artful, light touch.

Skirts are generally easy to press, except of course, pleated ones. Skirt fabrics are usually less fragile than those blouses are sewn from. Wool gabardine, heavy cotton blends, and rayons make of the majority of most skirts, and all of these can stand a standard steam iron. Rayon sometimes requires a light touch, however. There are also the inevitable linen skirt or two, especially in summer. Linen takes a hot iron, but you must keep it moving constantly. And it will take some patience to get all the wrinkles out.

Linen skirts will require some patience to press. . .

Skirts of any fabric should be unzipped and placed on the ironing board so the zipper placket can be pressed first. Once this is done, let the garment cool slightly and zip it up. Then continue pressing it in a circular fashion until it is done. Like blouses, skirts are best hung immediately after pressing and cooling. Special skirt hangers, with clips like those for men's pants, are used. And remember that skirts are to be hung from the waistband, not upside down! It has been reported that some sissy maids do not know this important fact, so this warning should be noted and remembered.

Pleated skirts take some practice to get right. Mostly, it involves learning to concentrate while you are performing what is an astonishingly tedious task. It is this ironing tedium that made pleated skirts go out of style in the first place. But since girls with maids no longer have to personally experience the tedium, pleated skirts (especially those short, sexy "tennis" ones) are suddenly all the rage.

---

The tedium of pressing pleated skirts is something sisties just have to get used to.

All you can do is take a deep breath, relax, and dive in. Know from the start that you will be at the ironing board for quite some time. So drink a glass of water first and sit down a moment. And if it all gets too wearisome, you just have to take a break. Just make sure the skirt you're working on is left in a position so that won't mess up the work you're already done. Many maids have come back to the laundry room to see an hour or more of work laying in a ruined, wrinkled pile on the floor beside the ironing board!

A maid's life and work is not all fun. And laboriously pressing pleated skirts with a hot steam iron will prove this fact to you pronto!

Pants are, fortunately, quite easy to press. Once again, the zipper is left down so you may press the placket. Then it is zipped up and each leg in turn is carefully pressed. Finally the top of the trousers and waistband

Shorts are pressed in the same fashion as pants are..

are done. (For certain types of women's trousers, you have to unzip them to properly press the seat and front.) Pressed trousers are hung on pants hangers in a similar way men's trousers are. Women's shorts are pressed in the exact same fashion pants are, of course.

Some fussy employers require their maids to use pieces of stiff paper with the pants hanger clips so the trouser's cuffs are not deformed. Be sure to check with your mistress to find out if she prefers this little "extra."

---

Unfortunately, many of the ironing skills required to properly press blouses, skirts, and women's pants can be directly applied to men's clothing as well. Because of this unfortunate fact, many employers will eventually request that you "help out" and press their boyfriend's things from time to time. You have little choice in the matter, of course, since you are a paid employee who must do what the "boss" says, at least when you are on duty. So just buckle down and get busy with the boyfriend's things -- the sooner you get it over with, the better. Generally his things will be easier to press than women's things anyway. And at least men don't wear pleated skirts! ●

15 Things Your Sissy Maid Can Do For You

Everyone knows that sissy maids are great for doing all the housework. But many employers are unfamiliar with the literally thousands of other little services they can provide. This brief listing is offered to "jog" your mind and get you thinking about new ways your sissy servant can make your life easier and more luxurious.

YOUR SISSY MAID CAN:

1. Get up early and start your coffee, so it is always fresh, hot, and ready for you when you get up.

2. Warm a big, fluffy towel with a hair-dryer so when you emerge from your tub or shower you have a soft, warm towel to cuddle into.

3. Have him make sure your stocking drawer is always stocked with your favorite styles of pantyhose. There is nothing worse than having an important morning meeting and running your last pair of pantyhose!

4. Give you a nice foot massage when you arrive home after a hard game of tennis; or even after a long day at work in heels. He should use lotions and cool his hands on an ice pack to make the massage special.

5. Cook your boyfriend's favorite meal, including dessert, and then getting out of your hair while you and your boyfriend dine by candlelight. (Of course, your sissy will come back later to clear the table and do all the dishes!)

6. Serve as a great gift! Send a card to a special girlfriend, announcing she will have "A Full Day of Maid Service!" Send your sissy over to her place to clean, do laundry, and wait on your girlfriend hand and foot.

7. Your little maid can embroider your monogram in your clothes, including a tiny one below the waistband of all your favorite panties. (This will help keep him busy while you're out on dates with your boyfriend!)

8. Have your sissy wear his nicest, laciest uniform and invite the girls over for a prissy, late afternoon tea. During the tea, go ahead and be "snooty" towards the help, of course.

9. Your sissy maid should make sure your stupidest, fuzziest slippers (but you love them!) are always ready for you. And he should fetch them for you when you arrive home after a hard day.

10. Your sissy should always make sure your aerobics bag is packed and ready for you. A nice aerobics outfit, a sport bra, an extra pair of panties, a swimsuit (for going into the jacuzzi) and a fresh pair of socks will all be required. When you get home from the gym, it will be your sissy's responsibility to empty your bag, put your sweaty things in the laundry, and pack your bag for the next day. (Your sissy will launder all your sweaty tights, thongs, and crop tops, too. Many of them will have to be done by hand, of course.)

11. Your sissy should read the major fashion magazines each month and brief you on the fashion trends by writing a "Monthly Fashion Report" for you. This will save you time.

12. Have your maid assist you with your business paperwork. While you relax, the sissy can type things, add columns of numbers, or do any other tedious business chore. He'll serve as your personal secretary on the weekends. (And fetching coffee will definitely be part of the sissy's job description!)

13. Your maid should softly brush your hair 100 strokes as you unwind at bedtime.

14. Your sissy should turn down your bed every night for you. Also, if you like a glass of ice water at night, your maid should make sure it's there.

15. Serve you chilled champagne and strawberries, while you luxuriate in a scented bubble bath he's perfectly drawn for you.

In The Kitchen. . .

Cooking, serving and dish washing all start in the kitchen. "In the Kitchen" will cover all aspects of kitchen duties, from the fun and creative to the dull and dirty.

As maids, we spend a lot of time in the kitchen. Along with the laundry room, the kitchen is sort of a "second home" -- a place where we feel comfortable.

Most employers enter the kitchen only infrequently, except perhaps to have a quick breakfast served to them if the kitchen is laid out for such service. In fact, employers are so scarce in most kitchens it almost seems as if they believe spending time there will somehow cause kitchen duties to rub off on them -- and they'll suddenly find themselves tied into an apron, washing dishes! And, for the rather pampered young women most of us work for, this would likely be seen as a fate worse than death!

But it's O.K. that our employers are scarce in the kitchen, because that leaves it all pretty much to us. And we're quite used to having an apron tied about our little waists -- and washing lots of dishes, too!

While many kitchen duties are not pleasant, (cleaning a dirty oven, or scrubbing greasy pots and pans immediately spring to mind) cooking is one kitchen activity most of us actually like. It frees our creative side, which is not much used during all those long hours of dull, repetitive, housework.

"In the Kitchen" will often address the less pleasant tasks associated with kitchen work, but this time we'll discuss cooking. In particular, we'll talk about how to fix a quick, delicious dinner for two. And even offer a suggested menu and recipes.

Your mistress is bound to call from work some day and inform you that she is bringing someone home for dinner. The guest may be a girlfriend, close work associate, or even her new boyfriend. Don't panic, however. If she really had a particularly romantic dinner in mind, rest assured she would have informed you of her plans much sooner!

Your mistress is bound to call from work some day and inform you that she is bringing someone home for dinner. . .

First, (instead of panicking!) sit down and write out a plan. Decide what you might serve and check the cupboards to see if you have all the ingredients. If you don't, you may have to run out to the store. This is easy for maids who live in the city, since they can have things delivered. But for suburban maids it's more difficult, so you must plan ahead.

After your initial planning, get anything you need quickly, or change your menu to include items you already have. Get things going in the kitchen in plenty of time for dinner. Do "prep work", such as chopping and mixing, in advance if possible. Remember that you can use the time things are cooking in the oven to finish your daily housework duties.

As the time gets closer, change into a nice serving uniform and apron. You will probably know just what to wear due to previous discussions with your mistress. If not, a trim, black evening service uniform is perhaps best. The apron should be fine white nylon, rounded, and with a scalloped or gently ruffled edge, (otherwise known as the "waitress" style.) Nice hosiery and high-heeled pumps should also be worn, rather than any style of "housework" shoes.

When you're all ready, it's time to set the dining room table. While you generally would not use the "best of everything" for such a casually-planned dinner, a linen table cloth and china will be expected. And perhaps, if the mistress of the house is bringing her boyfriend home, set out the candlesticks as well.

Try to have things in the kitchen pretty much under control before mistress and her guest arrive home. You'll be expected to serve drinks and otherwise wait on them before dinner, so you shouldn't have too much going on in the kitchen. It's O.K. to have to gently excuse yourself from time to time to "check on things" in the kitchen, however. In fact, your mistress will likely excuse you to go check on dinner anyway.

Once mistress and her guest have had approximately 30 minutes to relax with a drink and talk, and if all is ready, you may softly announce that dinner is ready. If they are not ready to dine quite yet, you'll have to do the best you can. It is not your place to dictate such things, no matter how much time you've invested in the meal. (But if the meal is not perfect, it is not completely your fault under these circumstances, either.)

Once mistress and her guest are seated in the dining room, you may begin to serve. Be attentive yet casual about the service. No need to whip away plates as soon as either of them finishes. You'll have plenty of time to clear the table and attend to the dishes after your mistress and her guest have retired to the living room.

You'll have plenty of time to attend to the dishes later. . .

---

Once the main course is served, take your place in the corner of the dining room nearest the kitchen entrance. Simply stand at attention with your hands folded softly over your apron. Keep an eye on the table, but try not to appear to be listening to their conversation. Do not laugh at jokes, express surprise, or otherwise engage yourself in the proceedings at all.

If your employer or her guest motion for more of something, or request anything verbally, you must respond quickly. So pay attention!

If the "order" is a mere gesture, you need not speak. If the order is verbal, you should bob a quick curtsy and respond with a soft, but fast-paced, "Yes, Miss" (or "Yes, Sir" as the case may be.) Then, of course, you should immediately proceed to serve the desired item to whomever requested it.

Your mistress may indicate she wishes the table cleared while her and her guest are still seated. The rule to follow is to gently clear the table with as little interference as possible. And do not try to take too much up at once. Resign yourself to the fact that clearing the table will require many trips to and from the kitchen.

Good Luck in the kitchen. And try to have little fun, too. Here's a possible menu and associated recipes you may wish to try. (And steal a little crabmeat for me, while you're at it!)

APPETIZER:

Smoked Salmon Canapés
Lightly spread toast fingers with Lemon Butter. Place thinly sliced smoked salmon on toast. Sprinkle with lemon juice, capers, and touch of dill. Broil lightly, arrange on tray, and serve.

DINNER FOR TWO:

Garden Salad; Long-grain Seasoned Rice; Crab Imperial

Salad: Prepare a fresh, cool salad to be tossed moments before serving.

Rice: Steam long-grained rice with several drops of lemon juice. When done, fluff with fork and add a bit of paprika, celery salt, and seafood seasoning.

Crab Imperial:

1/2 pound backfin crabmeat

1 Tbl. mayonnaise

1/2 t. chopped pimento

1/2 t. whole capers

Dash Worcestershire sauce

Salt and white pepper to taste

Drop or two hot pepper sauce

Whipped mayonnaise and paprika (as garnish)

Flake and clean fresh crabmeat. Place crab in large bowl. In separate container, mix mayonnaise, pimento, capers, Worcestershire, salt & pepper, and hot pepper sauce together and blend well. Pour this mixture over crabmeat and toss lightly.

Divide crabmeat into 3 or 4 scallop-shaped baking shells, (aluminum or ceramic) and top each shell with one heaping teaspoon whipped mayonnaise and sprinkle with paprika.

Place shells in shallow baking dish and bake at 375 degrees for approximately 20 minutes.

Serve as promptly as possible!

To My Cute Little Sissy. . .

*C*issy, my sissy, so busy with housework,
So cute in your apron and lace.
Knees on the floor, sponge in your hand,
Sweat on your brow and your face

*Long days in the bath, scrubbing for hours,
While shopping I go -- not a care.
You vacuum and dust, as I lay on the couch,
Whoever said life is so fair?*

*Your weekends are spent, many tedious hours,
With laundry and ironing; so trying.
You folding and stacking, and hanging it up,
As I relax in my bath; just sighing.*

*Your bottom is round, and girlish and smooth,
And seems for panties just made.
Your legs so sleek, they're the envy of girls,
But sissies like you don't get laid.*

*Pantied and bra-ed, you swish by in heels,
Petticoats brushing your thighs.
Bending and serving, and fetching so well,
Mascara enhancing your eyes.*

*Panties so smooth, at the front like a girl's,
You were always so very well gaffed.
I remember the night, your hair up in curls,
We talked and giggled and laughed.*

*In the bath you may see, though never possess,
My legs and breasts and rear.
You're there just to serve, and never caress,
Your proper place is quite clear.*

*He launders and irons and puts things away,
While his mistress is out on a date.
He's jealous and mad but obeys just the same,
And angrily ponders his fate.*

*He knows he's to blame, for even this shame,
And his frustrating nights in his bed.
His actions confirm what's known all along,
That sissies are easily led!*

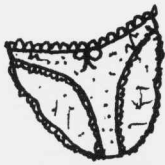

*He sleeps all alone, as good sissies should,
In a Maid's Room so frilly and nice.
And twists and squirms in pink rubber sheets,
Which are slippery, and cold like ice.*

*Aprons he wears, all ruffled and frilly,
A flouncy white bow at his rear.
He prances in skirts, girlish and silly,
And curtsies before me in fear.*

*I do him no harm, but enforce many rules,
And make sure he remembers to Thank.
He obeys me so well, like a servant and belle,
And if not, his bottom I'll Spank!*

*Slowly he learns, the tricks of the trade,
Caring so well for my house.
And "Woman's" work's now "Sissy's" work,
As he becomes meek as a mouse.*

*Rubber aprons he'll have, and gloves galore,
To help keep his dresses from messes.
On his knees on the floor, cleaning some more,
I relax and brush out my tresses.*

*Aproned and dressed, he waits on a guest,
And perches so dainty in heels.
He bows and scrapes, calling everyone "Miss",
But no one cares how he feels.*

*After dinner he'll go, dishes in hand,
To the kitchen, to stand at the sink.
We laugh and talk, and sip liqueurs,
So giddy we can't even think.*

*Housework no longer a girl's concern,
Since sissies can do it so well.
I wonder sometimes, but don't really care,
If working for me is like hell.*

*In nighties he snuggles, all silky and warm,
In his lonely bed by the wall.
I stay out on my date, all silky and late,
And for my boyfriend I fall.*

*Sissy now finds, that I'm out all the time,
Yes, out past dawn -- and more.
And then he will know, my lover's control,
As he greets my man at the door.*

*Choking back tears, confirming his fears,
As with my new lover I lay.
But breakfast in bed, a lovers' delight,
Is served by my maid, on a tray!*

*Men's shirts he will iron, at my command,
And clean his apartment as well.
Sissies do as they're told, are never too bold,
And I so love ringing his bell!*

*Girls get married, but only to men,
Not to sissies in panties and frills.
I walk down the aisle, new husband in hand,
Sissy stands in back with his chills.*

*When baby arrives, all crying and wet,
A Nanny we've already got.
All hours of the night, 'til early light,
He's in our Nursery a lot.*

*While lovers make love; husband and wife,
Wet diapers still need many changes.
But we never worry; make love all we want,
Since diapers Sissy arranges!*

*To a house we will fly, much larger than this,
With acres of floors to keep clean.
Sissy spends his days, and even his nights,
Doing housework and thinking I'm mean.*

*Year after year, he quivers with fear,
And lives with his wounds never healing.
But he never retrieves, all the power he leaves,
And gets used to scrubbing and kneeling.*

*So sissies beware, girls know who you are,
And into an apron they'll tie you.
So if you wear panties, satin or lace,
You'd better make sure they don't buy you!*

*Girls hate to clean, or even to cook,
And we hardly love doing dishes.
So sissies beware, don't let down your guard,
Or you'll soon be obeying our wishes.*

*We know you are weak, so easy to order,
And know you look cute in your panties.
But sissies like you are not for our beds,
You're better at washing our scanties!*

*I love you so much, in your aprons and lace,
Just like a girlish friend,
I know I am strict, but not all the time. . .
And at least you've money to spend.*

*Don't feel ashamed if your bottom's in panties,
Alone in your bed in the city.
No man is complete, you learned it so sweet,
'Til he knows how it feels being pretty!*

. . . The End . . .

SUMMER FASHION - A hot and timely review of all the best Summer uniform fashions for sissies. Short-shorts will certainly still be "big", (or, rather, little!) and some skirts will be micro-mini short and so bare that even a maid's panties won't be much of a secret.

We also cover sleek, bare swimwear and cute sunsuits for sissies -- perfect for serving at those lazy, hot afternoon pool parties you'll be having your girlfriends over for. And with sheer still "in", we'll take a look at a new combination "bodysuit/gaff" that some sissy maids are beginning to wear underneath all those see-through things.

RUBBER SHEETS - Most employers now insist on the use of rubber sheets on sissies' beds in the Maid's Room. Let's face it, with sissies being sissies, rubber sheets simply save on laundry.

But which brand of rubber bedlinens is best? We test the three leading contenders for stain resistance, gloss retention, and that age-old problem, stickiness. Our volunteer test staff of sissy maids offers valuable opinions based on extensive personal experience of sleeping on rubber sheets. "And the winner is. . ."

ROMANCE AND SISSY MAIDS - Does your sissy maid pout when you go out on dates? Does the little sissy not speak to you all day after you've stayed out all night with a new lover? Read what a leading psychologist, who specializes in the "inner workings" of sissies, has to say about this frequent behavior problem. She offers valuable insights in how to get your sissy maid to fully accept that you date, and sleep with, men. Also, how to gracefully handle your maid on those first few nights when your new boyfriend is "staying over."

GOING OUT WITH YOUR SISSY - Just how public should your sissy maid be? More and more young women in cities are beginning to take their maids with them shopping, and some are sending their sissies out to run errands for them. There's no problem, as long as you follow a few simple rules. Also, we discuss some of the better outfits for sissies to wear in public.
