
SIZEPUNK
PART FIVE

Art by JazKof Bullets
Story by RedFiredog
Edited by EmmaGear

Alicia threw her arms back, reveling in the scene before her. She took another step, flaunting her near-limitless power as the earth itself trembled beneath her feet. She looked over the megacity spread before her in every direction for miles around. The buildings. The densely-packed crowds. The panic and chaos she'd inspired by appearance alone.

"“This city belongs to me now!” Alicia announced, her voice echoing for miles around.

Mina watched as Alicia walked closer, her enormous size becoming more apparent by the second. Despite being over a mile away, Alicia already appeared unbelievably huge. To make matters worse, she was moving towards Mina at incredible speed, crushing entire city blocks with each footstep. Whether Alicia knew it or not, they were on a collision course.
Mina was big, sure. Big enough to rip apart buildings and crush people with hardly any effort... but it wasn't even close to enough.

"This is bad. This is really, really bad..." Mina whispered as panic began to set in. Out of desperation, Mina scanned her surroundings for any possible means of escape. She was still just barely small that hiding behind a building seemed viable. If she got lucky, that might save her for a while... but she knew it would only delay the inevitable. Unless she actually did something, it was only a matter of time before the titaness tracked her down.
HUMAN

Mina racked her brain, trying to figure out some way to make up the difference. She could try to focus her mind and channel her energy… but her nanobots were almost depleted. She needed to recharge them, and fast! That much was obvious. But there was one problem… she didn't know how.

As Mina walked through the streets, her stomach growled, giving her an idea. She'd watched as the other giants ate people. She had assumed they were just flaunting their newfound power, but what if there was more to it? Maybe they craved the taste of human flesh for a reason? Bio organic mass as fuel wasn't the most far-fetched idea. Maybe consuming them was a quick and efficient way to recharge the nanobots. It was just a theory, but if it was true... The crowds roaming the streets might be just what she needs.
お好み
もんじゃ
たこ焼

Sure enough, the sight of crowds was all it took to whet Mina's appetite. She was getting the same cravings that she was sure the other giants had gotten, and for the same reasons. But unlike the others, Mina had a sense of decency. She wasn't eager to simply dive right in and start devouring innocent people... but what if she could find someone who wasn't so innocent?

Just half a block away, Mina spotted a pair of figures lying in the rubble of Endicott Tower. Not only were they wearing neon-lined jumpsuits, they looked noticeably bigger than everyone else.
Street
on Square Station
N
R

Right away, Mina knew exactly who she was looking at: Sabrina and Daisy Endicott. The two heiresses that had kidnapped Mina and humiliated her... not to mention what they had done to her beloved android. Now, the tables had turned, and the sisters were hers for the taking. Their genetically-enhanced bodies should be several times more efficient than a regular human as well. At least, in theory. One that she was all too eager to test out.

Mina watched as Daisy took her sister by the hand, pulling her up and out of the rubble.
“Come on, Sabrina! Get up!” Daisy urged.
“There’s no point, you idiot.” Sabrina muttered. “The game’s already over. We lost. Alicia is going to destroy what’s left of our empire.”
“That’s just a setback at worst! We’ll start over again from nothing… but first, we’ve got to get the hell out of here!”
3 Mins

"Come on, we don't have long!" Daisy urged her sister, pulling her to her feet.

As they shambled along, Mina followed after. The sisters still hadn't noticed her, something Mina hoped to take advantage of. She stepped as quietly as she could, but the sound of concrete crunching was louder than she expected.

Daisy was the first to look back at the noise. Her eyes widened when she saw the giantess following after them.
"Shit, Sabrina! We've got company!" She shouted.

Sabrina looked back, and saw Mina's eyes glaring down at her. "She doesn't look too happy either!" Sabrina exclaimed. "Shit, what are we going to do?"

"What do you think? Run as fast as you can!"

The sisters starting running, pushing their way through the crowd with desperation. Mina followed after, chasing towards them with a single-minded determination. Nothing was going to stand in her way.
1 Middlesbrough
3 Mins
2
& Wealdstone
6 Mins

Sabrina pushed through the streets as fast as her legs would carry her. The pain from her injury faded to the background, pushed aside by the rush of endorphins that were coursing through her. Whatever pain she felt now was nothing compared to what she'd feel if Mina caught up... and the sound of Mina's feet hitting the pavement again was a reminder to pick up the pace.

Mina followed after, plowing through the densely-packed streets. Mina wasn't eager to step on innocent people... But she didn't have the luxury of allowing them to slow her down. When her foot came down she would feel something go crunch underneath... followed quickly by a second crunch. A single footstep had just killed two people... But she didn't have time to dwell on that. She was on a mission.

Mina quickened her pace, stepping down again. Once again, more unfortunate bodies were crushed under her soles. She didn't let that bother her. She couldn't. They were collateral damage. Besides, they were nothing compared to the countless lives Alicia would end if Mina failed to stop her.

As each footfall claimed more lives, Mina felt something dark stirring within her. The sensation of bodies giving way beneath her massive feet sent an unexpected thrill through her body. For a fleeting moment, she understood why the other giants had been so ruthless. She gritted her teeth and forced the feeling down, refusing to let herself enjoy what she was doing. This was out of necessity, not enjoyment.

A covered walkway stretched across the street just ahead of Mina, blocking her path ahead. Mina could duck under it, but that would cost precious seconds she didn't have.

Without breaking stride, Mina thrust her chest forward and barreled straight through. The walkway exploded in a shower of metal and shattered concrete, raining down on the hapless crowds below.

Through the settling dust, Mina looked over the crowd, and caught another glimpse of neon jumpsuits. The way ahead was blocked, and for a moment Mina thought the chase was near its end. But just seconds after Mina caught sight of the sisters, they ducked through a narrow side street.

The rest of the crowd poured through that side street, funneling down an arched gateway. The sisters followed along, forcing their way through a crowd half their size. Mina's footsteps faded into the distance, and for a moment it seemed as if the sisters had lost their pursuer.

Daisy slowed down for a moment to glance backward. Her blood froze when she saw Mina's enormous foot slam down onto the pavement, not twenty feet behind them. The impact shook the ground, sending loose bricks tumbling from the buildings nearby.

"Faster!" Daisy screamed, pushing Sabrina forward. Before they could run away, Mina's massive form rounded the corner. The giantess caught sight of them, and her eyes narrowed.

The arch stood in Mina's way, but no mere obstacle was going to stop her. She lifted her leg high into the air, clearing the three-story structure in a single, massive stride.

Mina pushed forward, pursuing the sisters with a furious determination.
"Going somewhere, ladies?" Mina's voice boomed. "After everything you put me through, did you really think I would let you just run away?"
BAR
the Ministry

Reinforced metal pipes jutted out across the walkway, blocking Mina's way. Undeterred, she simply wrenched one of them free, stripping the structures clean off the walls.

Mina launched the metal pipe forward like a spear, aiming for the sisters. The pipe landed right behind the pair, narrowly missing them. Mina tried to chase after them, but had her progress slowed by even more pipes.
BAR

Mina's patience had completely run dry. In a fit of rage she stomped down on the pipes, ripping them loose from the buildings. Screams rang out through the crowds below as the huge metal pipes fell down, crushing anyone unfortunate enough to be caught beneath.

Mina stepped over the debris with a long, swaggering stride. Her eyes swept the space with slow, deliberate confidence, like a predator surveying its domain. Her gaze passed over faces, corners and shadows alike before she finally spotted Sabrina once again.
BAR
The Ministry

Mina rounded the corner, her massive body casting a shadow over the fleeing crowds. Just ahead was Sabrina, separated from her sister. The heiress looked up, her face draining of color as she realized how close Mina was now.

Without a second thought, Sabrina turned and ran, abandoning her sister to her fate. She moved as fast as she could, her feet pounding against the pavement in a desperate bid to escape the giant Mina.

Mina was quick to follow, though. A tangle of power lines stretched across the street at the giantess's eye level, forcing her to duck low. With a frustrated growl, she dropped to all fours. Her hands slammed down onto the pavement with enough force to crack the asphalt. Now she could move faster, crawling forward like a massive predator. Sabrina was so close now, just barely out of arm's reach.

Mina surged forward on all fours, knocking over utility poles as she squeezed her huge body through the narrow street. Sabrina was so close that Mina could practically taste her. Stretching out one enormous hand, Mina lunged for the woman who had tormented her just hours ago.

Sabrina felt the rush of air as Mina's fingers swept past, missing her by mere inches. Mina turned sideways and tried to push through the narrow street, only to bump into a walkway above her. She grunted in frustration, trying to force her way underneath, but her shoulders were too broad.

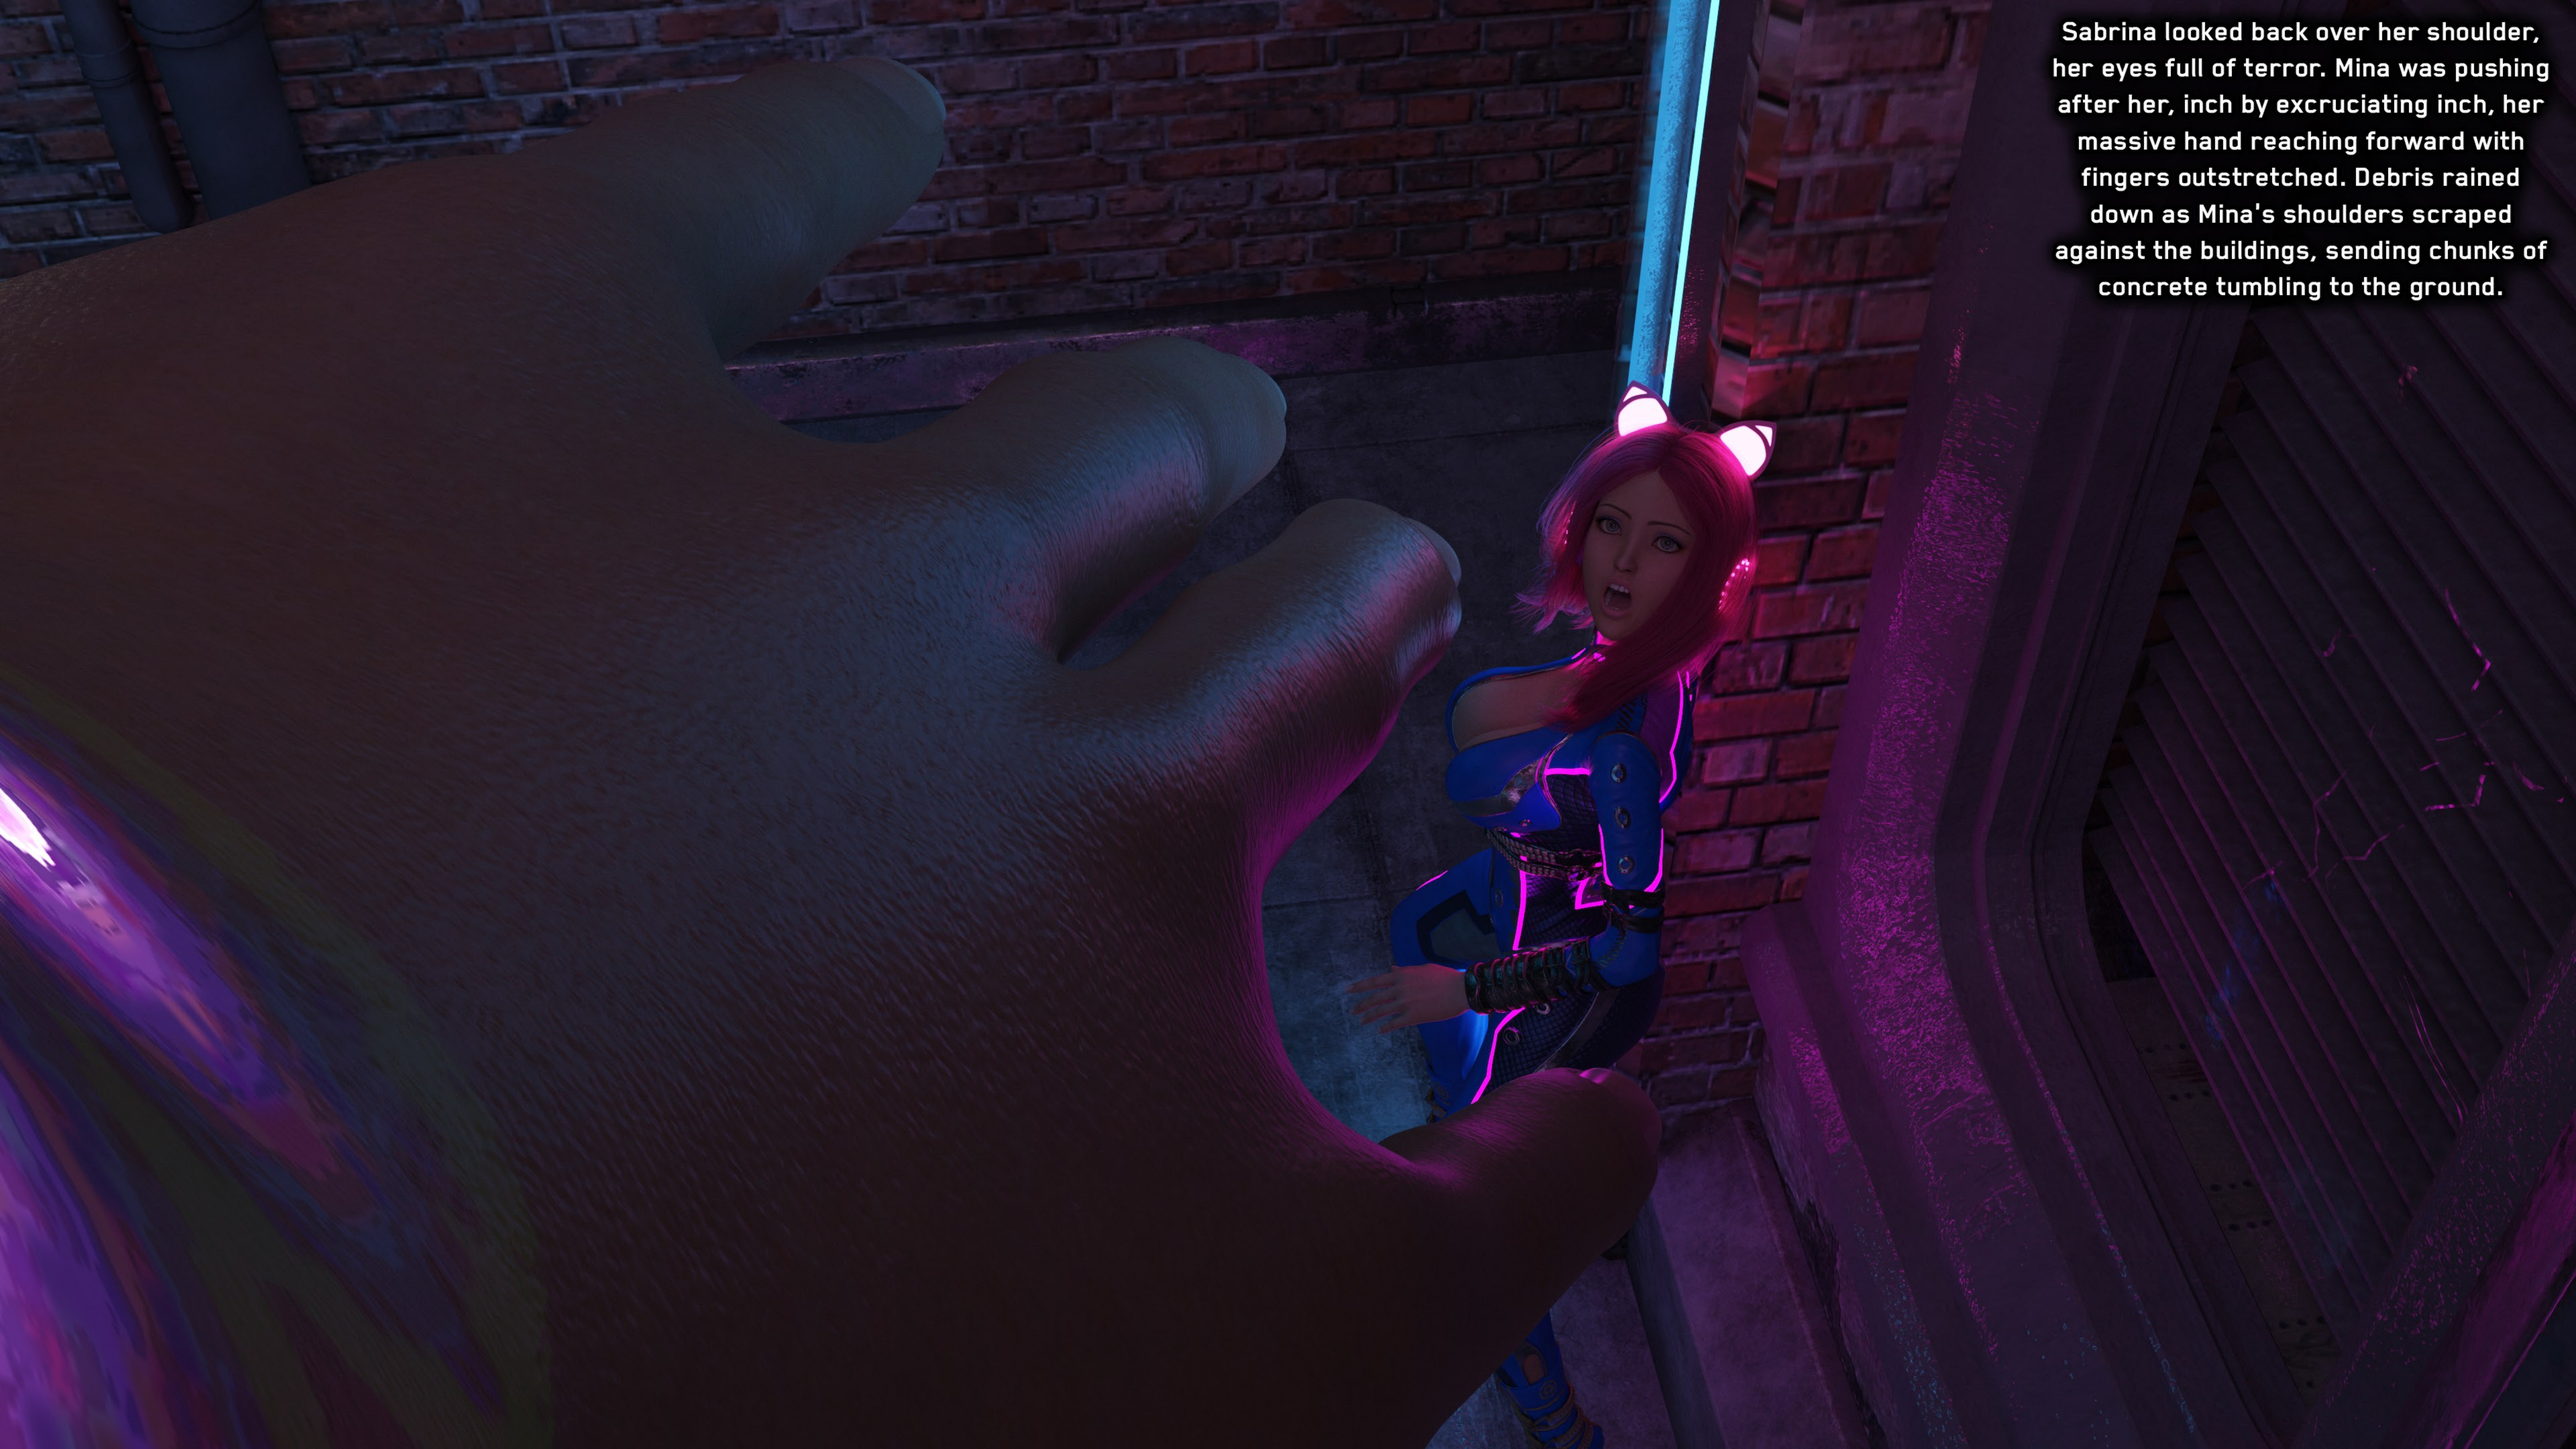

Mina pushed herself back and rose into a crouch. The walkway that had blocked her only came up to her waist. She could see Sabrina on the other side, still running, still thinking she might escape... But Mina wasn't about to let her quarry get away.
四字樓
4/F

Mina lifted one leg high, climbing over the walkway with ease. The structure groaned under the pressure of her hand as she used it to steady herself. When her foot came down on the other side, an entire food cart was flattened beneath it, its contents exploding outward in a spray of metal and steam.
四字樓 4/F
冠 南 華

Now nothing stood between Mina and her prey. She lunged forward once again, her hand shooting out with surprising speed. This time, Mina felt her fingers brush against Sabrina's hair. She closed her fist tight... only to find herself empty-handed once again.

Sabrina darted into a narrow alley between two skyscrapers, breathing frantically. The space was barely wide enough to fit a car through, let alone a hundred-foot woman. She turned sideways and tried to push through, her shoulders scraping against the concrete facades of the buildings on either side. Loose bricks and debris broke off, but the buildings themselves wouldn't yield.

Rage boiled up inside Mina, hot and uncontrollable. "You're not getting away, you hear me?! You're mine!" she bellowed.
Gritting her teeth, Mina pressed her body harder against the gap, feeling the concrete crack beneath her skin. With a grunt of effort, she managed to force herself a few feet deeper into the narrow passage, the buildings groaning in protest with every movement she made.

Sabrina looked back over her shoulder, her eyes full of terror. Mina was pushing after her, inch by excruciating inch, her massive hand reaching forward with fingers outstretched. Debris rained down as Mina's shoulders scraped against the buildings, sending chunks of concrete tumbling to the ground.

Sabrina ran around the corner, and she breathed a sigh of relief… but her good luck came with a caveat. The alley led to a dead end just a few feet in. She was safe, for now, but she was still trapped. It came as little solace when she felt the earth shake… and remembered there that she had bigger problems than Mina.

The tremors started small, a rhythmic pounding that seemed to come from everywhere at once. But as the seconds passed, the vibrations grew stronger, more violent, until loose chunks of masonry began raining from the buildings above. Even trapped in the alley, Mina could feel Alicia's approach with every earth-shaking footfall. The massive titan was drawing closer.

Alicia walked through the city with all the casual indifference of a god among insects. She crushed entire neighborhoods with her every step, her massive feet obliterating houses, apartment complexes, and shopping centers without distinction. The suburban sprawl served as nothing more than a crunchy carpet beneath her soles. The lives of those within were snuffed out before their owners could even comprehend what was happening.

People watched in terror from countless miles away, their faces turned skyward towards the impossibly tall figure that dominated the horizon. Even from such vast distances, Alicia's presence filled their vision, her head disappearing into the clouds above while her legs stretched down like pillars supporting the very sky. Telescopes and binoculars were useless—her scale defied human comprehension, turning grown adults into whimpering children as they witnessed the end of their lives approaching them one devastating step at a time.

One of the mega-towers caught Alicia's eye. It was a colossal black skyscraper that had once been the pride of the city's architects. Its sides were adorned with massive screens that cycled between advertisements. The structure rose thousands of feet into the air, a monument to humanity’s ambition and engineering prowess. To Alicia, it only barely rose as high as her ankle. Just another obstacle to be cleared from her path.

Alicia raised her foot above the mega-tower with deliberate slowness, savoring the moment. Her shadow fell across the tower like a solar eclipse, plunging the surrounding blocks into premature darkness. Thousands of people inside pressed against the windows, knowing their lives were about to end.

Alicia brought her foot down on the mega-tower, her heel striking the building's crown with devastating force. The impact sent shockwaves through the structure's steel frame, which immediately began to buckle. Floor by floor, the building collapsed beneath her, each level pancaking into the one below as glass and concrete exploded outward in glittering cascades.

Alicia pressed down harder, grinding her foot through what remained of the building's foundations. The structure's lower levels finally gave way in a massive fireball, as gas lines ruptured and electrical systems were overloaded. The explosion bloomed upward around her heel, illuminating her godlike form against the sky as she effortlessly completed the tower's annihilation.

Without pause, Alicia took another step forward. Her foot came down onto a dense block of smaller buildings; offices, restaurants, and apartments that had stood for decades. They crumbled instantly under her heels, their destruction so complete and instantaneous that the people inside never even had time to scream. Mere seconds later, there was nothing left except a foot-shaped crater filled with pulverized concrete and twisted metal.

Alicia spotted another gleaming skyscraper in her path and decided to try something different. She drew back her massive leg and kicked the building with casual force, watching with amusement as the entire structure exploded into fragments. The impact disintegrated the tower into dust, which quickly scattered into the winds.

Alicia threw her head back and laughed, the sound rolling across the cityscape like thunder. The sheer intoxication of her power coursed through every fiber of her impossibly huge body. She was no longer bound by the petty constraints of mortality or mercy... She had transcended into something far beyond human comprehension. Each building she destroyed, each life she extinguished, only fed the growing euphoria that consumed her. She was a goddess of destruction, and this once-vast city was her playground.

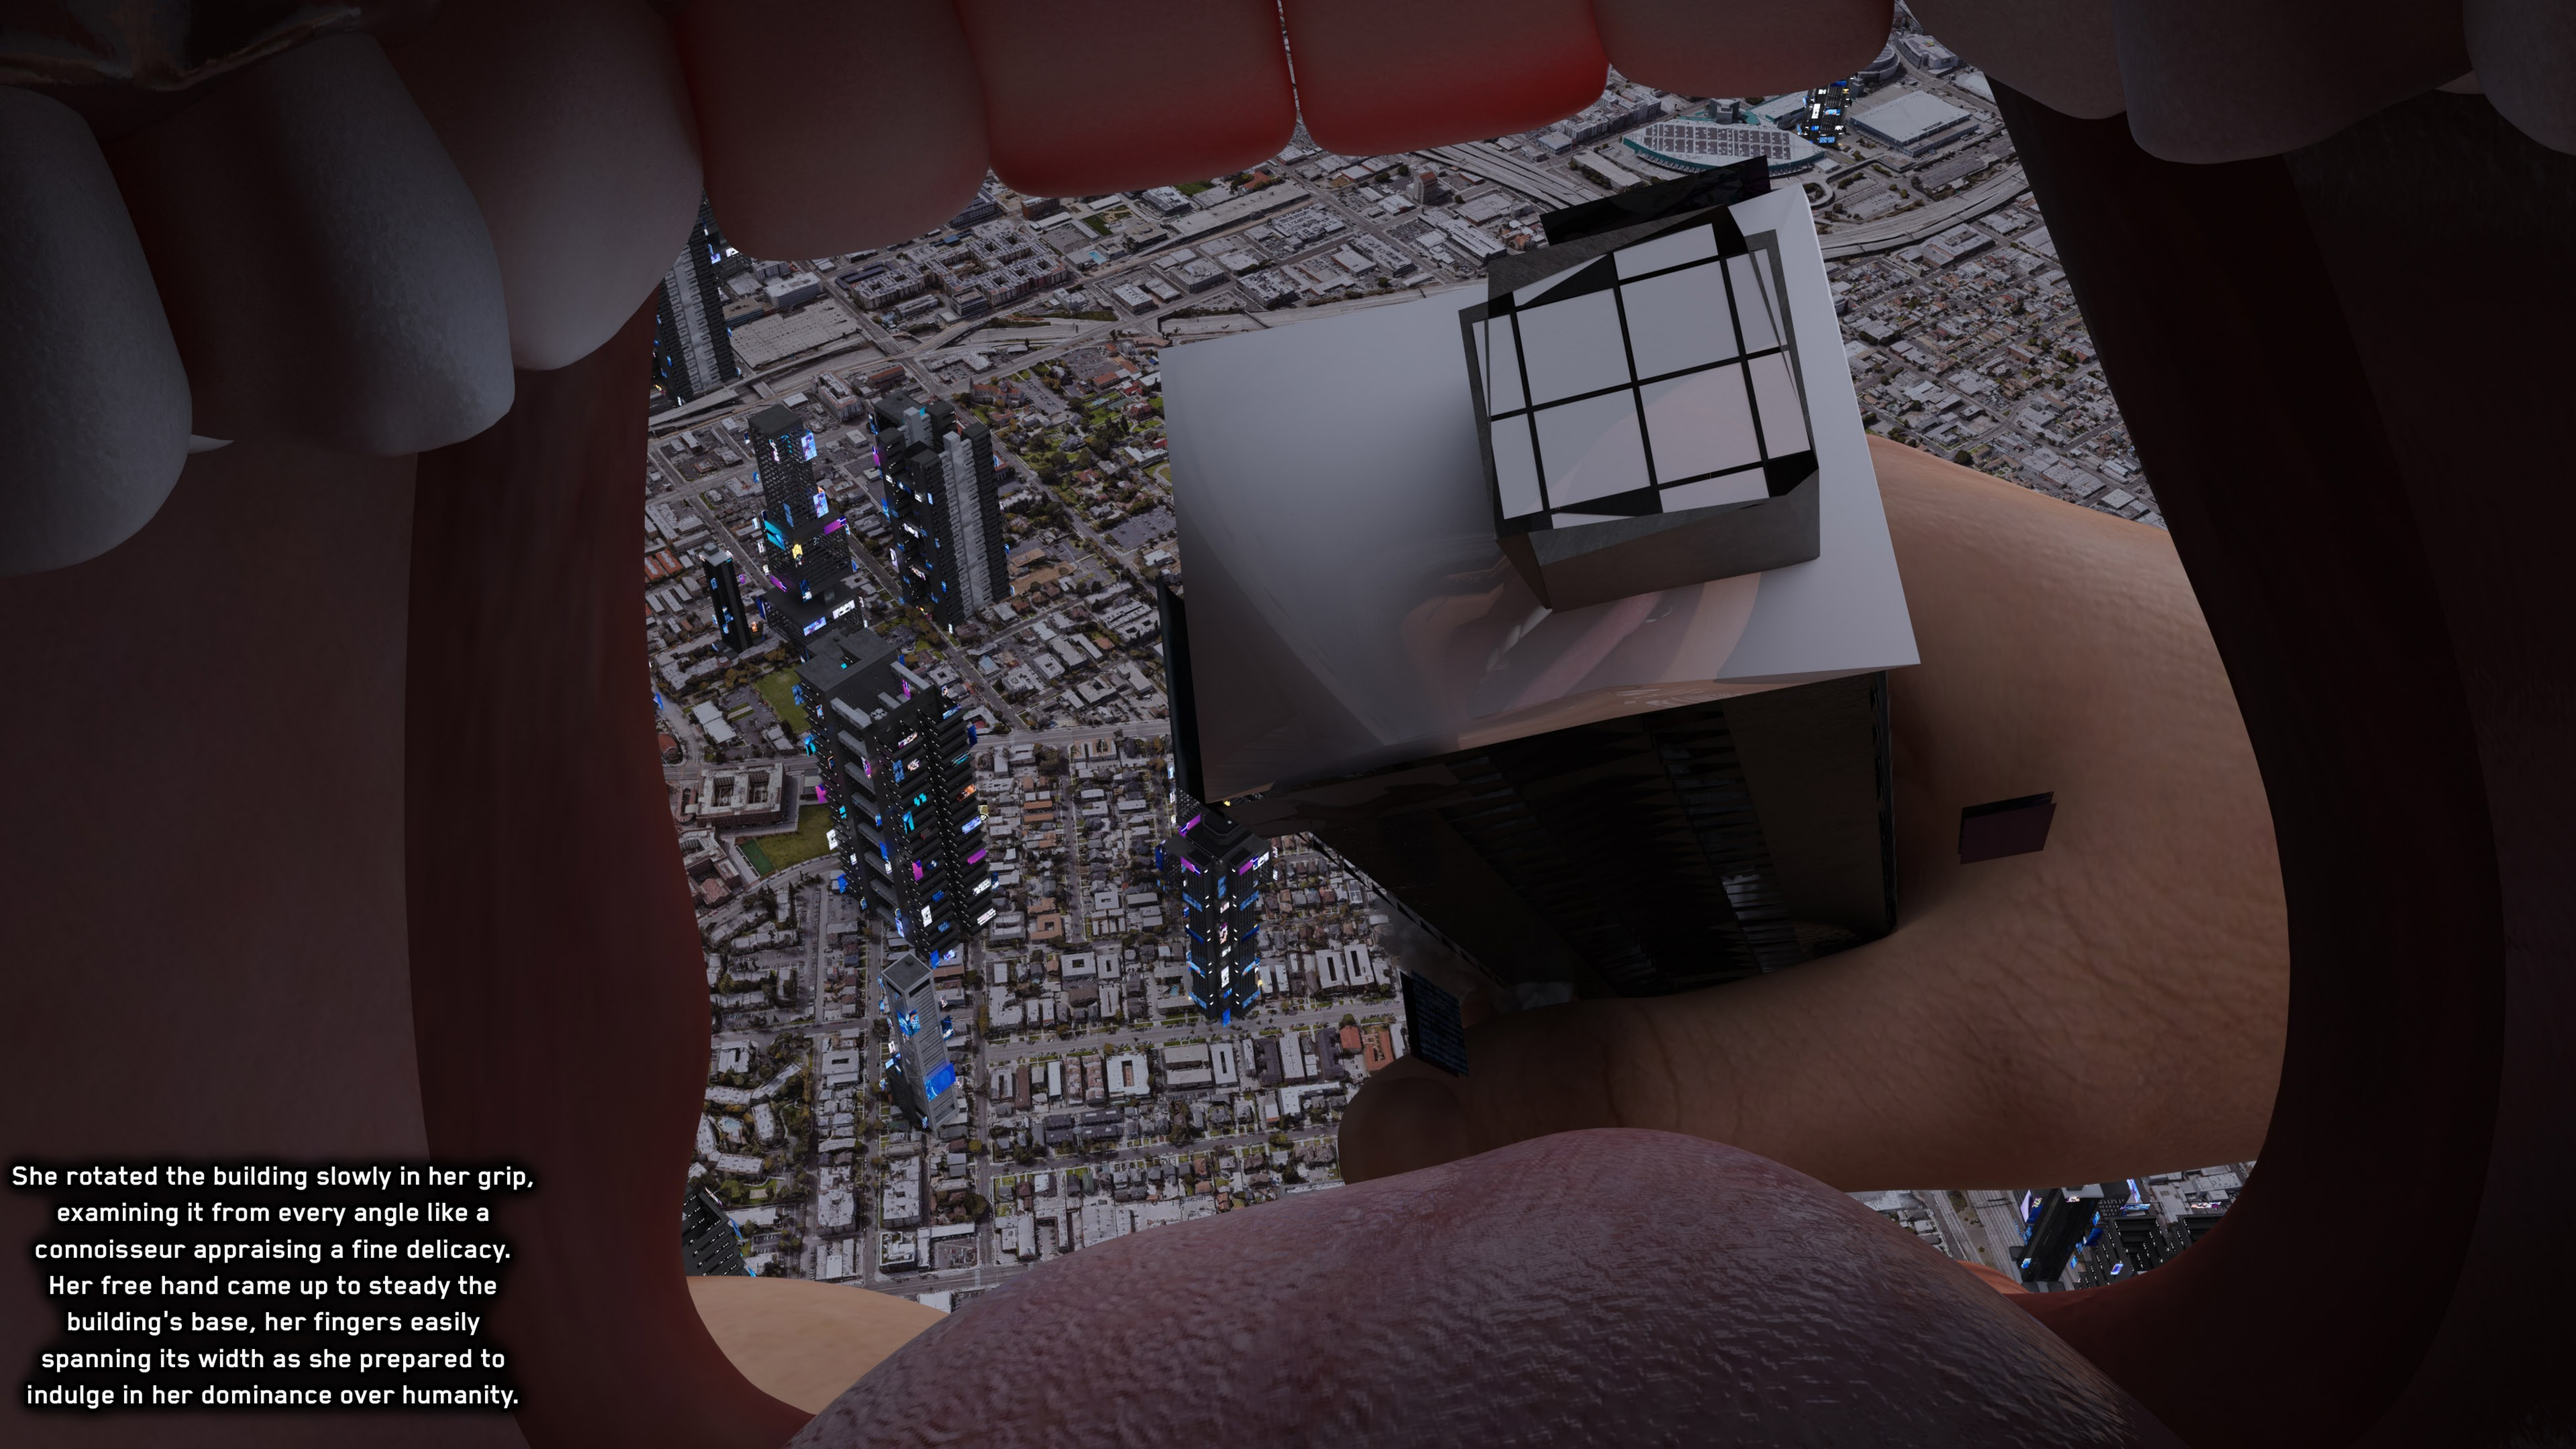

Her gaze fell upon another magnificent skyscraper. Unlike the previous towers she had simply crushed underfoot, this one sparked her curiosity. She crouched down slowly, her massive form casting shadows across entire districts as she reached towards the structure with one enormous hand.

Alicia's fingers wrapped around the skyscraper's midsection, her grip encompassing dozens of floors at once. With a single effortless motion she ripped the building from its foundations, watching chunks of concrete and twisted rebar fall away like crumbs.

The tower trembled in her grasp, its steel frame groaning under the stress of being lifted, but the structure held firm. Even at this size she could feel the weight of it, tens of thousands of tons that would have challenged the most powerful cranes ever built. But to her, it felt no heavier than a mere toy.

A wicked smile crossed Alicia's lips as she pressed the tower's uppermost floors against her breast. The building's top was barely wider than her nipple, and she shivered with pleasure at the sensation of the cool metal against her skin. The contrast between her divine flesh and humanity's greatest architectural achievement wasn't lost on her.

Alicia's mouth opened wide, revealing massive teeth. She brought the skyscraper up toward her lips, her breath fogging the glass as she contemplated her next move. The building's emergency lights flickered frantically, as if the structure itself understood what was about to happen. Her tongue darted out briefly, sampling the metallic surface of the tower.

She rotated the building slowly in her grip, examining it from every angle like a connoisseur appraising a fine delicacy. Her free hand came up to steady the building's base, her fingers easily spanning its width as she prepared to indulge in her dominance over humanity.

Alicia slipped the top several floors of the skyscraper into her mouth and began to suck gently. The glass and steel groaned under the pressure, and she could taste the bitter tang of metal. Her tongue explored the building's surface, feeling the tiny ridges and textures of its construction.

Then came her teeth. They began to gently press down against the building's upper floors, as she gradually increased the pressure. Glass shattered and metal buckled as her jaws slowly closed. The sound of crushing steel and splintering concrete filled her mouth, and she felt the top floors collapse between her molars. She could hear the terrified screams of those inside the building, which only further whetted her appetite.

Alicia's massive teeth clamped down, effortlessly shearing through steel, glass, and concrete alike. The top twenty floors of the skyscraper crumbled between her teeth, glass and metal mixing with the screams of thousands trapped inside.

Alicia quietly chewed. Not that she needed to. The simple act of biting down had been enough to crush everything in her jaws to a pulp. She did it for the sheer thrill of the act, before tilting her head back and swallowing, feeling the crushed remains of the building and its occupants slide down her throat. A wave of euphoric energy coursed through the vastness of her body. The nanobots within her system absorbed the enormous amounts of matter, converting every lost life into more raw power that further enhanced her already-invincible form.

The sensation was intoxicating beyond anything Alicia had ever experienced. Every cell in her colossal body hummed with newfound energy, but rather than satisfying her hunger, it only amplified her cravings. She gazed across the sprawling metropolis that stretched endlessly in every direction, and a dark realization settled over her.

She wanted more.

Not just more destruction, not just more power, but more size. Even at an astounding eight miles tall, she yearned to grow larger still. The very thought of becoming even more massive, of dwarfing her current impossible scale, sent shivers of anticipation through her body.

In the streets below, Mina couldn't help but stare up at the gigantic titan. She could feel every movement Alicia made reverberating through the earth beneath her feet. Alicia's legs rose like living skyscrapers on the horizon, her torso disappearing into the clouds above.

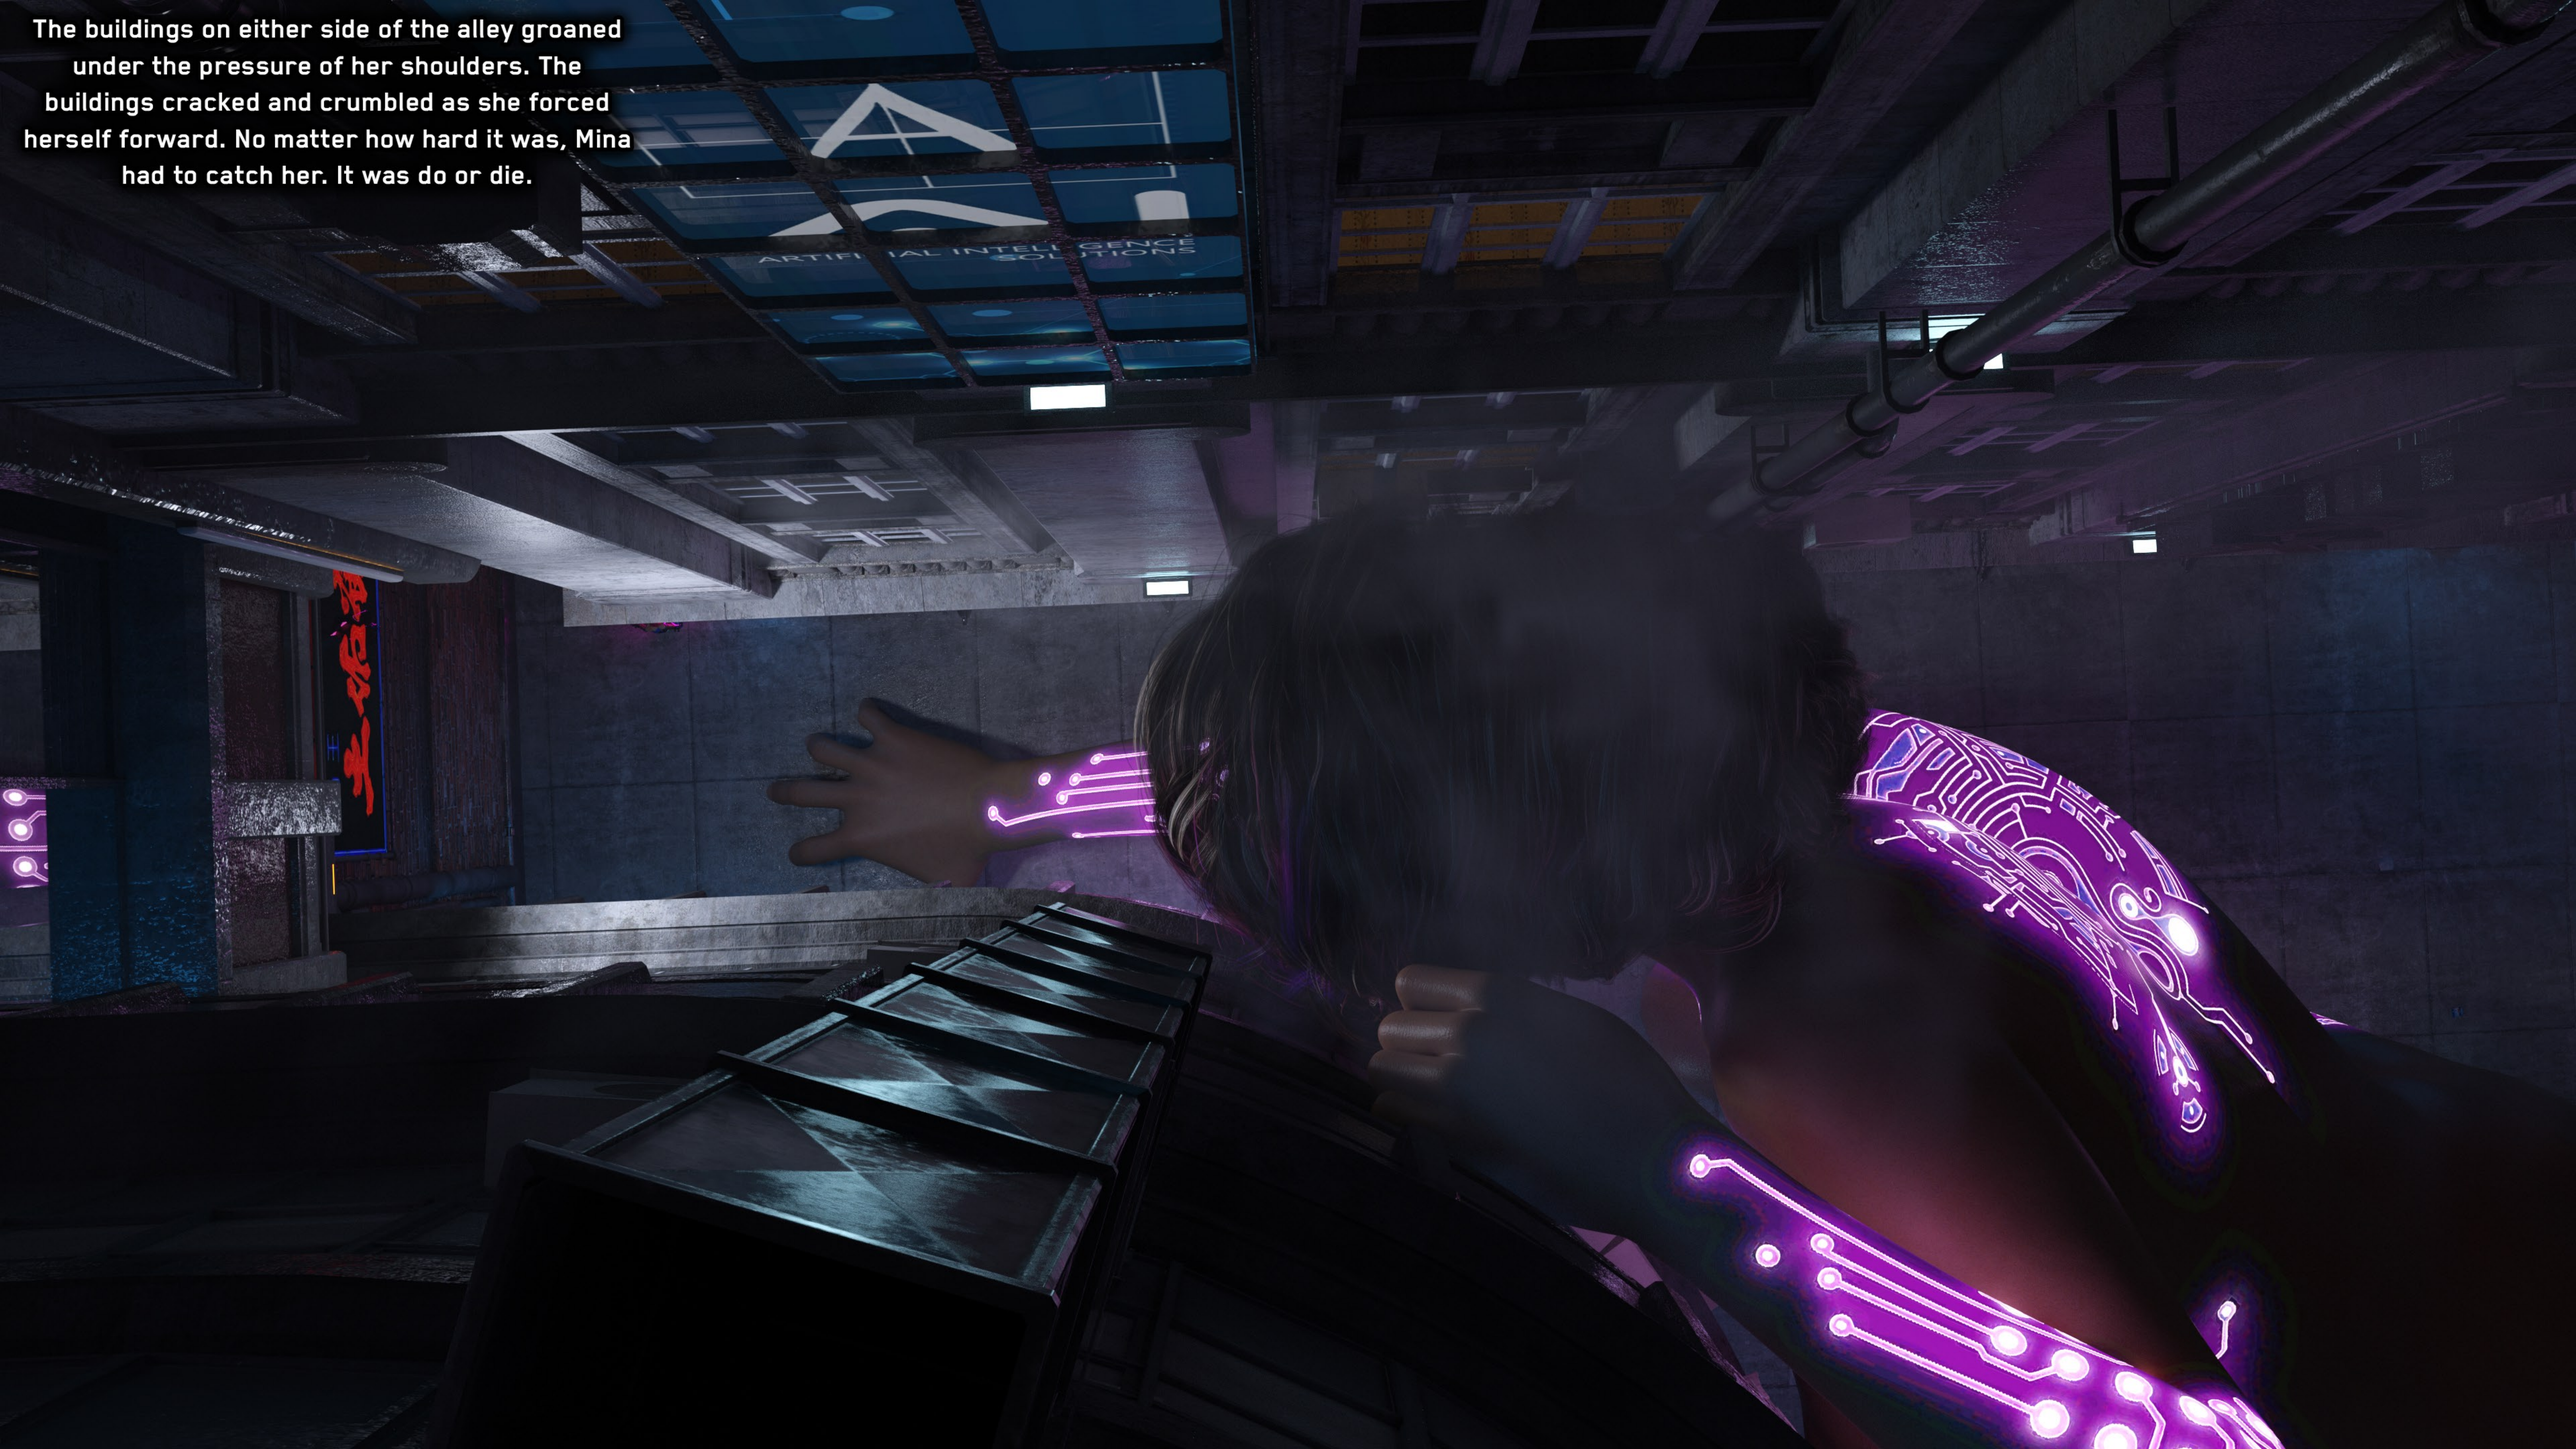

Forcing herself to focus, Mina turned back toward the narrow alley where Sabrina was still trapped. She was convinced eating Sabrina would give her enough power to stand against Alicia. It was her only chance, no matter how slim. Mina positioned herself at the alley entrance again.

"Come on out already," Mina pleaded. "You know how this is going to end, so why not make it easier for both of us?"

"Wait!" Sabrina's voice cracked with desperation as she pressed herself against the back wall of the dead-end alley. "Mina, please! I can help you! I have some ideas about the nanobots, trust me! I can make you bigger! Big enough to fight Alicia!" She stood trembling as she stared up at the hundred-foot giantess looming over her. "I know you don't have any reason to trust me… but I'm only asking for one chance. We can work together! I can give you everything you need!"

Rage flared in Mina's eyes as she glared down at the cowering heiress. "Work together?!" she snarled. "After everything you did to me? After you kidnapped me, made me into your slave, and treated Eva like your personal plaything? You're nothing but a parasite who's spent your entire life feeding off other people's suffering... Fuck a partnership, I want you dead every bit as much as Alicia."

Mina dropped to her hands and knees again. Her shoulders scraped against the building walls as she forced her way deeper into the narrow alley.

The buildings on either side of the alley groaned under the pressure of her shoulders. The buildings cracked and crumbled as she forced herself forward. No matter how hard it was, Mina had to catch her. It was do or die.

High above the city, Alicia's attention turned to the restrictive red leotard that clung tightly to her gigantic form. The fabric had stretched beyond its limits, and now felt confining against her divine skin.

With casual indifference, she grasped the material in her powerful fingers, and ripped it away from her body, tearing it in half. Now completely nude except for her towering heels, she looked like a true goddess. Her skin gleamed in the light of the city below, every curve and muscle of her titanic body a testament to her transcendence beyond mortal limitations.

With a flick of her wrist, Alicia tossed away the tattered remains of her leotard. The fabric drifted through the air like a crimson parachute, finally settling over a smaller mega-tower. The building vanished completely beneath the cloth, dwarfed by the size of Alicia's garments.

Alicia reached down to her now-bare crotch and gently touched herself. A jolt of pleasure ran through her entire body as her fingertips grazed across her most intimate areas with deliberate slowness. The sensation sent electric waves of pleasure coursing through her colossal form. She had never felt anything like this before; pleasure amplified to godlike proportions, just like her size. Her massive body trembled slightly, the minute movement causing minor earthquakes in neighborhoods miles away.

With her other hand, Alicia fondled her breast, feeling its impossible weight and warmth against her palm. Her fingers traced lazy circles around her nipple, which had grown hard and sensitive in the cool night air. She squeezed gently, marveling at how something that had once been so normal now felt so transcendent. The pleasure was intoxicating, and she threw her head back, a moan escaping her lips that echoed across the city. To the terrified people below, it sounded like the world itself was coming apart.

She looked down at the city below, her eyes narrowing with dissatisfaction. She felt like she'd done quite a bit of damage... but in the grand scheme of things she was disappointed. Entire districts remained untouched, their lights still twinkling against the darkness like stars on the ground. The sight irritated her. Every untouched building was an affront to her new divinity. They needed to be erased, crushed beneath her feet until nothing remained but dust and memory.

She'd been rampaging for hours now, yet no one had even tried to stop her. There had been no military response, no heroic last stand from the microscopic humans at her feet… Just endless fleeing and screaming. It amused her how quickly humanity's illusion of control had shattered in the face of her transcendent power. There were no rules anymore, no boundaries she couldn't cross. Her rule was uncontested. The world belonged to her now, and she would reshape it however she pleased.

Alicia took a deliberate step forward, her foot descending toward the heart of the financial district. A gleaming mega-tower stood directly in her path, its spire reaching up almost to her knee. The building was built sturdy and powerful, able to withstand earthquakes and hurricanes alike… but it was never designed to resist the power of a titan like her. Her heel came down first, pulverizing the top of the tower in an instant. As her full weight settled, the building's central support columns gave way one after another. Thousands of lives were compressed into nothingness in less than a second, their existence reduced to a thin layer of organic matter beneath her heel.

Another step brought her foot down onto the city's most prestigious university. The massive buildings had housed equally-massive research facilities, producing Nobel laureates and world leaders. Alicia's massive sole flattened the entire campus without resistance, crushing laboratories housing groundbreaking research, and dormitories packed with helpless students. The destruction was so complete that nothing remained to indicate what had once stood there. It was just another perfect footprint pressed into the earth, indistinguishable from the ones that had come before.

Her third step landed on top of a major hospital. The medical center had been in the process of frantically evacuating patients since Alicia's appearance, but it was slow going and thousands remained inside, too sick or injured to be moved quickly. Alicia felt the structures collapse beneath her weight, but paid no attention to the countless lives being snuffed out. The hospital's generators exploded as her weight crushed them, sending plumes of flame shooting out between her toes. She wiggled them slightly, enjoying the warm tickle of the heat against her skin as she ground the remains of the medical center into dust.

Alicia approached another skyscraper, this one the headquarters for a news channel. Most of the crew had fled hours earlier, but a skeleton crew remained to ensure the broadcast remained live. The anchor stood bravely at his station, broadcasting about Alicia's rampage until the last possible second. The camera showed him watching in horror as Alicia approached the building, raising her heel over it. Then, in an instant, her foot came down, obliterating the building and everyone within it.

Her next step brought her to the edge of the government district, where the city's administrative buildings stood in orderly rows. The massive courthouse disappeared beneath her heel without resistance. The city hall, police headquarters, and federal buildings followed in quick succession as her foot swept across the ground. The buildings were reduced to powder, crushed by a brutal titan who recognized no authority but her own.

Alicia threw up her hands up in a dramatic gesture, her arms spread wide as she stood amidst the devastation. Her massive body loomed over what remained of the once-great metropolis. Her voice boomed across the ruined landscape, loud enough to shatter windows miles away.
"This world is mine!" she bellowed, her words shaking the very air itself. "I am your new god! Worship me or perish beneath my feet!" She stood there, daring someone, anyone, to challenge her supremacy... knowing full well that nothing on Earth could stand against her now.

Back in the streets below, Mina was still stubbornly trying to get ahold of Sabrina. Mina was tantalizingly close to the heiress, but she remained just out of reach. So close, yet the final inches seemed impossible to bridge despite her best efforts.

A loud boom echoed through the city, followed by another, then another in rhythmic succession. Mina felt her heart rate spike as she recognized the pattern. Footsteps. Alicia's, undoubtedly, and they were getting closer, each impact stronger than the last.

Mina looked back over her shoulder, her blood turning to ice. Alicia was right behind her, looming over the city like a living titan. Mina felt like an insect by comparison… and knew that she wasn't far off. The sheer difference in scale between the two of them was difficult to comprehend.

Alicia's gaze, previously scanning the panorama of destruction around her, suddenly dropped. Her eyes narrowed as she focused on something near the ground: Mina. The titan's expression shifted from casual indifference to intense curiosity. Her massive head tilted slightly, lips parting in what might have been surprise. The movement was subtle, but at her scale, even the slightest change in posture sent shockwaves through the city.

A cruel smile gradually began to form on Alicia’s face, visible even from Mina's distant vantage point. The titaness took a deliberate step forward, the movement slow but purposeful. Her trajectory was unmistakable: she was headed directly for Mina.

Desperate, Mina braced her hands against the buildings on either side of the alley. She pushed outward with every ounce of strength she had, her muscles straining against the concrete and steel. The structures groaned in protest, their foundations having been weakened by the tremors of Alicia's approach. Mina gritted her teeth, feeling sweat bead on her forehead as she applied more force.

Then, something began to give.

Fractures appeared in the concrete facades, spreading like spiderwebs through the structures. Her approach finally paying off, Mina pushed herself even harder, and with a final surge of strength, forced the walls apart and widened the gap herself.

The force of Mina's efforts split the streets themselves open. The pavement cracked and split apart as a chasm formed directly in front of Sabrina's feet. The heiress screamed as the ground gave way in front of her, and she flattened herself against the wall for safety.

Mina lunged forward, her hand shooting out with lightning speed. Her fingers closed around Sabrina's torso just as the heiress stumbled into the chasm. The heiress dangled above the void, her legs kicking uselessly as Mina pulled her away from certain death.

The once-powerful amazon was reduced to a squirming, terrified girl in Mina’s hand. The woman who had once held her captive was now completely at her mercy. Mina could feel Sabrina's rapid heartbeat through her skin, could see the terror in her eyes as she realized the futility of her situation. There would be no escape this time.

Mina looked up, and saw Alicia drawing closer. She knew she didn't have long before Alicia reached her... But she wanted to relish her victory just a little longer.

"Wait, please!" Sabrina pleaded, her voice filled with desperation. "I swear I can help you fight her! The nanobots, I know how to amplify their effects ten, no, a hundred times over! I just need two minutes! That's all! Please, let me help you!"

Mina's laugh was bitter and cold. "Oh, you're going to help me alright... just not in the way you were hoping." She tightened her grip slightly, just enough to make Sabrina gasp.

Mina opened her mouth wide, her teeth gleaming as she brought the terrified heiress closer. Sabrina's screams grew more frantic, her body twisting in Mina's grip as she tried to delay the inevitable. But the heiress's pleas fell on deaf ears as Mina brought her closer.

Mina lifted Sabrina toward her mouth, shoving her inside feet-first. Sabrina's legs kicked frantically as they passed between Mina's lips, her expensive boots scraping against the giant woman’s teeth. She pushed Sabrina deeper, feeling the woman's legs slide across her tongue.

"Please, Mina! You don’t have to do this!" Sabrina screamed, her voice echoing from within Mina's mouth. "I can make you stronger! I can help you beat Alicia! I’m more valuable to you alive!" Her fists beat impotently against Mina's finger, doing nothing to stop the giantess from shoving her deeper inside. Little by little, Sabrina's body vanished into Sabrina’s mouth. Then, finally, Mina closed her lips around the heiress, sealing her fate.

Mina would have liked to swallow the heiress whole, and feel her wriggle inside of her belly until she was digested. But time was of the essence, and she would have to deny herself this pleasure. Her jaws worked methodically, teeth grinding down on Sabrina’s form. The heiress's muffled screams grew weaker with each crushing bite, her body offering little resistance to Mina's powerful molars. The taste of blood mixed with the metallic flavor of Sabrina's enhanced genetics, and Mina felt a dark satisfaction as the screams abruptly stopped. The woman who had taken such glee in tormenting her was nothing more than a broken lump of meat between her teeth.

Mina tilted her head back and swallowed hard, feeling Sabrina's remains travel down her throat in a warm, thick mass. The sensation was oddly satisfying; justice served in the most primal way imaginable. She felt reinvigorated, as the nanobots in her system swiftly began converting Sabrina’s body into raw energy.

Mina didn't have time to revel in her victory, however. Alicia drew closer, each step sending tremors through the ground that tested Mina's balance. Already, the titaness was nearly on top of her. She stared down at Mina, laughing madly as she closed the gap.

The eight-mile-tall titan moved with casual confidence, her nude body gleaming in the city lights as she approached. The sound of her footsteps was deafening, like thunder rolling across the landscape.

Alicia's laughter boomed across the cityscape as she gazed down at Mina's comparatively tiny form. She was just over a mile away from where Mina cowered, and she drew closer with every footstep.

Mina’s heart raced as she waited for a surge of power, for the growth that would let her stand against Alicia. She could feel the nanobots working, processing Sabrina's genetic material, but she wasn’t growing. There was no increase in size, no rush of strength. The nanobots had seemingly absorbed Sabrina's essence, but whatever power they'd gained wasn't translating into the size she so desperately needed. She remained exactly as she was: a hundred feet tall, and utterly dwarfed by the eight mile-high titan bearing down on her.

Desperate, Mina clenched her fists, trying to force the nanobots to activate. She focused all her energy inward, willing herself to grow, to change, to become something that could fight back. Her muscles tensed and her body trembled with effort... and something changed.

Like a switch had been flipped, Mina finally began to grow. The change began as a tingling sensation began spreading through her limbs. Soon, she could feel electricity coursing through her veins. The power of the nanobots was finally unleashed, giving her the raw power she desperately craved. She felt her body stretching upward, her perspective shifting as she rose even higher above the streets below.

Mina's body expanded in all directions, her muscles swelling with newfound strength as she nearly doubled in size. Soon, her head stood above the office buildings surrounding her. The street beneath her feet cracked and buckled under her increasing weight, sending cracks radiating out from where she stood.

Mina's growth continued relentlessly. The sensation was intoxicating. Raw power flowed through every cell of her body, as the nanobots worked through the seemingly bottomless well of energy they'd been given to fuel her transformation. She clenched her fists harder as she felt her strength multiplying with each passing second.

Mina's growth showed no signs of slowing. Her body stretched skyward like a living skyscraper, her form becoming more imposing with every surge of growth she experienced.

Her growth accelerated even further, pushing her past four… five… six… then seven hundred feet in rapid succession. The mega-towers that had once seemed impossibly tall now stood at practically eye level with her, their glass facades reflecting her expanding form. As she approached eight hundred feet in height, Mina finally stood as tall as a skyscraper. She could see through the windows into boardrooms and offices, where terrified executives pressed themselves against the glass, watching in awe as this new giantess rose to meet their lofty perches.

Just as she was starting to think she might have a chance of beating Alicia, Mina's growth started to slow. She tried the same tricks she'd used earlier, clenching her fists and channeling her energy, but to diminishing returns. Alicia was drawing nearer, and she was still far from adequately able to challenge the massive titan. One way or another, she had to buy more time.

High above, Alicia looked down at Mina with smug amusement. Even after all of that, Mina was still laughably small compared to the impossibly huge titan. The size difference remained vast, and Mina would not prove the slightest bit difficult for the titaness to overwhelm.

Alicia began walking closer, moving with casual confidence. She reveled in what felt like her inevitable victory. THIS was the greatest challenge humanity had provided her with… and she couldn't hope to defeat Alicia. No one could. She was simply too massive, and too powerful, to lose.

Alicia threw her arms wide, as if inviting Mina to try her luck. “Come on, little Mina! Show me how you fight!” Her laughter echoed across the cityscape as she spread her stance, waiting for the challenge. Even with her growth spurt, Mina barely rose past Alicia's ankle. The height difference was still so vast Alicia had to crane her neck down just to see her properly.

Nevertheless, Alicia continued her advance, each step carrying her closer to Mina with terrifying speed. Her massive foot came down onto a twelve-lane highway, crushing it under a heel. She hardly seemed to notice the destruction she caused. Her focus remained solely on Mina, who crouched in the empty street ahead, looking a little taller every second.

On the highway, those in vehicles who had narrowly avoided Alicia's descending foot found themselves caught in the explosive aftermath. Cars bounced and skidded as the concrete buckled beneath them, their occupants screaming as they were thrown against seatbelts and dashboards. They were lucky, unlike the dozens who were caught under her tread.

Alicia's lips curled into a mocking smile as she looked down at Mina. "Is that all you've got?" she mused, her voice booming across the devastated cityscape. "It's passable for a first attempt, I suppose… but a losing effort nonetheless. As far as I'm concerned, I'm staring down the world's biggest insect… and I'm going to crush you like one."

Without warning, Alicia raised her foot into the air, high above Mina's body. Alicia's toes wiggled slightly as she savored the moment, the anticipation of crushing her newfound rival beneath her heel. Her foot began its descent, gathering momentum as it plummeted toward the ground.

With a desperate lunge, Mina threw herself sideways just before Alicia's foot collided with her. Her reflexes saved her, and Alicia's gigantic foot crashed into a nearby skyscraper instead. The building exploded under the impact, smashing into bits. Concrete and glass erupted outward, peppering Mina's back with debris.

Mina landed several blocks away, her massive body crushing a row of smaller buildings as she crashed onto the ground. Alicia still loomed above, undeterred.

Mina scrambled away, her hands and knees demolishing everything in their path as she frantically retreated. Even now she could feel her body continue to expand, muscles swelling with newfound power as the nanobots continued their work. Every second bought her more height, more strength... but could she even evade Alicia long enough to make up the difference? She would need a few more minutes to close the gap, to reach a size where she could actually fight back instead of merely running for her life.

Alicia stomped forward relentlessly, her patience clearly wearing thin as the smaller giantess repeatedly evaded her crushing steps. Her pace quickened, eating up the distance between them.
"Stop running, you little insect!" she taunted. "You're only delaying the inevitable!"

Mina tried to crawl faster, but Alicia was gaining on her with every step. The titan's massive foot came down right beside Mina's ankle, barely missing her. The gap between their sizes was narrowing, but Alicia still had the edge… for now.

"You can't win, Mina!" Alicia shouted. "I'm still bigger! I'll always be bigger!"
This time, Mina wasn't intimidated. There was something different in her voice now; a hint of uncertainty that hadn't been there before. The titaness stared at Mina's expanding body, watching as the difference between them continued to shrink.

With a primal scream of rage, Alicia raised her heel high, aiming to bring it down on Mina's head with crushing force. "Just! Stay! Down!" she shrieked, her voice cracking with fury. But as her foot descended, Mina twisted away at the last possible moment. Alicia's heel crashed into empty pavement, the impact sending ripples through the earth itself, but missing its intended target completely. Frustration contorted Alicia's features as she realized her advantage was slipping away with each passing second.

Mina pushed herself up onto her knees, rising to her full height for the first time since her transformation began. As she rose, it became obvious that she had underestimated just how much time she would need, and the gap in their sizes had closed dramatically. The titaness took an involuntary step backward, her eyes widening as she finally understood: this wasn't going to be an easy win.

Mina surged upward with all the power she could muster, smashing her fist into the side of Alicia's with all the force of a runaway train. Mina felt a surge of hope as Alicia's head was thrown back from the incredible impact. For a moment, it seemed as if Alicia might not be as strong as she feared.

Alicia turned to look down at Mina, smiling smugly as she rubbed her cheek with mock concern. "You actually hit me.” She growled, before her smile faded. “Too bad it didn’t hurt." She taunted. Although their sizes were similar, Alicia's body had been more thoroughly transformed by nanobots than Mina's, making her skin significantly more resilient to damage. A punch that should have shattered bone had barely left a mark.

While Alicia gloated, Mina capitalized on the opportunity. She darted behind the titaness with surprising speed, wrapping her arms around Alicia's and locking her grip tight. She managed to pin the arm against Alicia's side before the larger woman could react.

Alicia looked back over her shoulder, her laughter echoing across the ruined cityscape. "Really? You think you're strong enough to hold me?" she sneered, flexing her trapped arm experimentally. "I could break free anytime I want. You're just embarrassing yourself now."

“Oh yeah? Then do it!” Mina taunted.

“Fine, I will!” Alicia shouted.

Alicia drew back her free hand, curling her fingers into a massive fist. "Let me show you what a real punch looks like," she growled. Her knuckles cracked as she pulled her fist back, preparing to deliver a devastating blow.

Alicia's fist shot forward like a bullet, but Mina had been watching for exactly this move. She let go of Alicia's arm and ducked under the punch, feeling the wind from the massive haymaker whistle past her head. Alicia's fist sailed harmlessly through empty air, the force of her own swing throwing her off balance.
EPR-0031A

Mina sprang up behind Alicia, wrapping her arms around the other woman’s waist in a bear hug. With a grunt of effort, she lifted the massive woman off her feet, Alicia's legs kicking frantically as she found herself airborne for the first time since her transformation. "What the—"

Using all her momentum, Mina leaned backwards, preparing to deliver a devastating suplex. Alicia screamed as she realized what Mina was about to do, but she was powerless to stop her.

Driving Alicia's head and shoulders into the city below. The impact was catastrophic. Entire city blocks disappeared in an explosion of concrete and steel, as Alicia's skull carved a crater into the city. The shockwave could be felt for miles around as thick plumes of smoke exploded outward in every direction.

Mina did not allow Alicia any time to recover, however. She rolled away and sprang to her feet, breathing hard but victorious. Below her, Alicia lay sprawled on the ruins of the city, her arms twitching as she struggled to regain her bearings. For the first time since her transformation, her movements sluggish and uncertain.

Seeing her chance, Mina leaped into the air and came down hard on top of Alicia's prone body. She wrapped her fingers around Alicia's neck, choking her with all her strength.

Mina straddled the dazed titan's chest, raining down blow after blow on her helpless opponent. "This is for Eva!" Mina snarled, hitting Alicia once again.
WELLS FARGO
AECOM
ROSSLYN
HOTEL ROSSLYN
BLM

The last blow hit Alicia especially hard, slamming her face into the ground below. Alicia's head hit hard enough to send debris flying high into the air.

But Alicia's recovery was faster than Mina had anticipated. “Fuck your stupid robot!” Alicia screamed, as she drove her foot into Mina's stomach. The kick sent Mina reeling backwards.

Mina was injured, but undeterred. She wasted no time getting back up and ready to fight. She was like a tiger, just waiting to pounce.
“I’m gonna tear you apart!” Mina screamed, her eyes full of fury.

“No.” Alicia stated simply. “I’m going to end you, just like I ended every other piece of trash who thought they could take a piece of me.”
Mina said nothing, fuming silently. Slowly, she rose to her feet, staring Alicia down.

Finally, Mina broke her silence. “You think you’re better than me? Go ahead, prove it,” Mina taunted. “Come on, I’m waiting. Make your move!”
Alicia made her move. Slowly, she tightened the grip around the mega-tower in her hand, her fingers leaving indentations in the upper floors of the structure.
INTEGRATED CIRCUIT

Alicia wrenched the mega-tower from its foundation, lifting it high into the air. She hefted the improvised weapon like a club, feeling its satisfying weight as she raised it high above her head. “Let’s see you block this!” Alicia shouted, as she swung the tower through the air.

Just before impact, Mina's hand shot out with lightning speed. Her fingers closed around Alicia's wrist, stopping the attack in an instant.

"Is that all you've got?" Mina asked, her voice eerily calm as she maintained her crushing grip on Alicia's wrist.

With a grunt of effort, Mina seized Alicia's other arm and hoisted her rival into the air. She lifted Alicia's struggling body above her head, holding her across her shoulders. Alicia's legs kicked uselessly in the air. She was completely at Mina's mercy, her massive body powerless in her opponent's powerful grip.

"You wanted to be a god?" Mina taunted, her voice dripping with satisfaction as she held Alicia aloft. "Well, guess what? Gods can fall too!"

Mina bent backward with explosive force, driving Alicia's body toward the ground into another catastrophic suplex. Alicia's back slammed into the city with enough force to shake the earth. A massive cloud of dust and debris billowed outward from the impact zone.

When the dust began to settle, Alicia was crawling on her hands and knees, her movements slow and pained. She dragged herself forward through the ruins, desperate to put distance between herself and Mina. Behind her, Mina followed with measured, deliberate steps, each footfall bringing her closer to her prey.

"That's ENOUGH! This has gone on for far too long..." Alicia gasped. She reached for a cybernetic implant embedded in her wrist, her fingers dancing across its surface to activate a series of emergency protocols. A holographic display flickered to life above her arm, showing a target on Alicia. "If I can't have this city, then no one will," she snarled, preparing to call in an orbital strike that would reduce everything to ash.

She never got to call in the strike. A swift kick to the ribs threw Alicia off-balance, where Mina's foot capitalized by slamming down onto her wrist. In the blink of an eye the cybernetic implant shattered into massive blue-white tendrils of electricity that arced dangerously in every direction. Alicia screamed in pain as the implant's power core overloaded, sending tens of thousands of volts of electricity up her arm.

"Look how the tables have turned," Mina taunted, staring down at her defeated opponent. "Do you have any last words?"
“Just two,” Alicia growled. “Fuck! Off!”

Alicia rolled over quickly, kicking at Mina's feet and knocking her off balance. Before either of them knew what was happening, they were back on their feet, and squaring off once again... And once again, Alicia had the advantage.

The two of them locked hands, fingers intertwining as they each pushed against the other with all their might. It was a classic test of strength, and for a moment they seemed evenly matched. Their arms trembled with exertion as neither gave ground… Until Mina felt something change.
Alicia's hands were steadily expanding within her grip, the fingers lengthening, palms widening. Alicia's eyes gleamed as she started to grow taller, little by little. “I thought you would have learned your place by now!” Alicia taunted.

"It doesn't matter where I came from, it matters where I'm going." Mina jabbed, even as she struggled to maintain her grip. "And when this is all over, I'm going to be standing on top of your corpse!" She dug her heels into the ruined streets below, refusing to yield.

"I'm going to put you down like the mongrel you are!" Alicia shot back. With a sudden surge of strength, Alicia pushed forward, forcing Mina to give ground.

Mina's feet dragged through the city, carving twin trenches through the streets as her toes clenched to try and slow her movement. Glass, steel, and concrete crumbled beneath her heels, pulverized into dust as she was pushed further backwards.

Alicia stared down at Mina with fury in her eyes. “You could have been my loyal little lapdog, you know. I would have given you everything you wanted… But instead you betrayed me!”
Fueled by her rage, Alicia's growth accelerated dramatically. Her body expanded upward and outward at with shocking speed.

“Now you’ll get nothing, you worthless little cur!” Alicia continued. “I’m going to crush you like everyone else who has ever stood against me. No one takes on Alicia Alani and lives to talk about it!”

The size difference became more pronounced with each passing second. Alicia's growth accelerated, fueled by a seemingly inexhaustible reservoir of nanobots. Soon she stood nearly twice as tall as Mina, glowering down at her opponent with undisguised contempt. Their hands remained locked together, even as the contest become completely one-sided. Mina's arms were fully extended upward now, her shoulders straining as Alicia held her at arm's length.

Mina closed her eyes, drawing deep within herself to find any remaining reserves of power. She couldn't let it end like this. She wouldn't. The nanobots in her system had to have more to give. She concentrated, focusing her will on a single command: grow. The sensation began slowly at first, a tingling in her extremities that gradually intensified. Heat spread through her limbs as the nanobots responded to her desperate summons, activating dormant protocols buried deep within their programming.

The change was sudden and dramatic. Mina's body surged upward, her muscles expanding with renewed vigor as she rapidly gained height. Within seconds, she'd nearly caught up to Alicia, their eyes once again level with each other. The shocked expression on Alicia's face was worth all the pain and struggle. "Surprised?" Mina asked through gritted teeth, her voice strained but triumphant as she pushed back against her rival's grip.

Mina's growth accelerated beyond anything she had experienced before. Her rate of expansion doubled, then tripled, her body stretching skyward at a dizzying pace. In mere moments their sizes had reversed, and she stood nearly twice as high as Alicia. Now it was Mina looking down on a smaller opponent struggling to hold her back, Alicia strained to maintain her grip as she was forced to stand on tiptoes, looking for a way out. With a surge of strength, Mina pushed forward, sending Alicia stumbling backward.

But just when victory seemed within Mina's grasp, Alicia's body began to change again. Her growth resumed with explosive force, her height doubling in a matter of seconds. Her expanding body grew exponentially until she towered over Mina once more. Her foot pulverized several mega-towers like dominos as she grew bigger and bigger. "My turn!" she shouted through clenched teeth.

The clash of titans continued as Mina responded with another surge of growth. Her body expanded relentlessly, stretching toward the heavens until the city more closely resembled a carpet at her feet, with its tallest structures not even reaching their ankles. Once again, she stared down at Alicia, their hands still locked together in the contest of wills. They towered over the landscape, their titanic forms visible from hundreds of miles away.

Mina’s dominance didn’t last long, however. Alicia's strength surged yet again, and she pushed Mina backward with enough force to make the smaller giantess lose her footing. Mina fell to her knees, crushing a significant portion of the city in the process.

Alicia stood over her triumphantly, still holding Mina's hands in her iron grip while preventing her from rising. "On your knees yet again." Alicia snarled. "Good. It’s where you belong."

Mina could feel her energy reserves rapidly depleting. The nanobots that had fueled her incredible growth were burning out, their power fading as they reached their limits. She struggled to maintain her current size, let alone continue growing. Her muscles trembled, and her heart skipped a beat when she could feel herself beginning to shrink. A stark realization hit her like a bullet.
She couldn't win this contest. Not like this. Not by trying to outgrow a rival who, even now, seemed to have limitless resources at her disposal.

"I can feel you getting weaker." Alicia taunted, her eyes manic with bloodlust. "You never stood a chance against me. I'm going to crush you like the insect you... you... you..."

Right when her victory seemed imminent, Alicia's expression suddenly. Her face contorted in agony, hands flying to her temples as she let out a blood-curdling scream. Mina stumbled backward, watching the bizarre display with unease.

"What's wrong with you!?" Mina called out, not expecting an answer. She kept her distance, unsure if this was some kind of trick, or if she should be concerned for her own safety. Alicia's body convulsed violently, her back arching as another scream tore from her throat.

The screaming stopped abruptly. Alicia's body went rigid, and she let go of her head. When she raised her head again, her eyes were no longer their natural color. They glowed with an eerie green light that illuminated her face. When she spoke, her voice had changed completely, the harsh edge replaced by a gentle synthetic tone.
"Mina? It's me." the voice said.

"Eva?! Is that really you?" Mina asked, her voice catching in her throat. "How... Did your cranial nanobots spontaneously rearrange themselves inside of Alicia's brain...? Or... Forget it, I can worry about that later! I can't believe you're back!"

Without another moment's hesitation, Mina threw her arms around Eva, who was almost twice her size. She pressed her face against Eva's, feeling the warmth radiating from her skin. The sensation of Eva's massive arms wrapping around her in return made Mina feel safe for the first time since this entire nightmare began.

"I... I really thought I'd lost you forever." Mina whispered, her voice barely audible. "I can't believe you're really here."

Eva held Mina close, her massive hand gently stroking Mina's back. "It was hard for Eva to watch Alicia hurt you like that," she said.
Eva's enormous fingers traced delicate patterns across Mina's shoulders, surprisingly gentle despite their size. "Eva wanted to stop her, but couldn't break through until now. It took all of Eva's strength to gain control. Alicia is strong."

"You're telling me," Mina replied with a shaky laugh. "Thank god you're in charge now, though! So... is this what it's going to be like from now on? You and me, ruling the world side by side?"
In her mind's eye, she saw a future where they used their incredible size and power for good. Instead of destroying, they could protect. They could rebuild, and make things easier for everyone else. They could reshape the world together, make it better than it had ever been!

Eva pulled Mina back, looking her in the eye. "I'm… sorry. Mina, I don't believe this can last."
"What do you mean?" Mina asked, her heart starting to sink. "I know it'll be hard, but we can communicate with the regular people still! We can help them, and-"
"N-No. Nothing like that." Eva said, her voice clearly strained. "Alicia is still here, fighting me every second. This body doesn't belong to me… I've only hijacked it, and I know I can't stay here long."

“But you just got here! You…” Mina began, before sighing in defeat. She stayed silent for several seconds, before looking Eva in the eyes again. “How… How long can you hold out for?”

"Alicia is strong. Stronger than Eva." Eva told her. "I can't hold her off much longer. I can feel her hatred. I can feel how badly she wants to destroy you." Eva's massive hands gripped Mina's shoulders tighter. "I won't let her hurt you anymore, and you can’t stop her. Not if she regains control. So… You… You must finish me off before that happens..."

Mina’s eyes were welling with tears. "No, I can't do that, Eva. I can't lose you again." Her voice cracked as she forced the words out. "There has to be another way. Maybe we can find a way to erase Alicia entirely, or-”

"There's not enough time." Eva interrupted, her voice gentle but firm. A spasm of pain crossed her face, and for a moment her eyes flickered, the green glow dimming briefly before returning. ”Even now, I can feel myself losing the battle against her. I don't know how much longer I can hold her back."

Mina shook her head desperately, unwilling to accept what Eva was telling her. "I'll find a way to save you. I always do, right? That's our thing."

"You have to, Mina. I know you can see that."
Eva said softly. "But first... Kiss me."
Mina felt her heart break all over again. This would be their first kiss since Eva's consciousness had been ripped from her android body... and their last kiss ever.

They leaned toward each other, bridging the gap between their different sizes. Their lips met in a kiss that was gentle at first, then grew more desperate as they both realized what it meant. It was a goodbye, a promise, an affirmation of everything they had been to each other.

Mina wrapped her arms around Eva's neck, pulling herself closer as the kiss deepened. She poured everything she had into it… all her love, her gratitude, her sorrow. Eva's arms encircled her, holding her as if she were the most precious thing in the world. For a moment, the ruined city around them ceased to exist. There was only this—this connection, this love, this final moment together.

When they finally pulled apart, Mina saw tears streaming down Eva's face, matching her own. "I love you," Mina whispered, the words inadequate but necessary.

"Eva loves you too," came the reply, simple and perfect. "Always."

Just moments after they pulled apart, the two kissed again, their lips locked in a desperate embrace that neither wanted to end. Mina's fingers traced the contours of Eva's face, memorizing every detail, knowing these might be her final moments with the android she loved. Eva's hands trembled slightly as they cupped Mina's cheeks, her touch impossibly gentle despite her enormous size. The world around them seemed to fade away, the devastated metropolis becoming nothing more than a distant backdrop to their intimate farewell.

As they kissed, Mina felt a familiar tingling sensation spreading through her body. The nanobots within her system responded to her heightened emotional state, drawing the last ounces of power from the connection she shared with Eva. Slowly but steadily, Mina began to grow again. Her body expanded inch by inch, the difference in their sizes gradually diminishing as she rose to meet Eva's height. This growth was gentler than the ones before. Not the explosive surge that came from adrenaline in the midst of battle but something more organic. Almost as if her body was striving to be closer to her love.

Their lips remained locked together, neither willing to break the connection even as Mina's transformation continued. Eva's hands slid down to Mina's waist, pulling her closer as they shared this final, precious moment.

While they kissed, Eva's body began to change. At first, the shift was barely perceptible; a slight reduction in height, a subtle narrowing of her shoulders. But soon the change became undeniable. Eva was shrinking, her massive form gradually diminishing even as Mina continued to grow.

From miles away, survivors watched in awe as the two colossal figures embraced against the horizon. All eyes were fixed on the titans as they shared a long, passionate kiss. No one understood why they had suddenly stopped fighting, but everyone watching could see the emotion of their embrace.

Mina's hands moved to Eva's breasts, feeling them shrink beneath her touch. Her fingers caressed the curves that were rapidly diminishing, trying to commit every sensation to memory. Eva's body continued to shrink, her once-towering body now barely reaching Mina's shoulders.

Soon, Eva was less than half of Mina's size. Mina tenderly wrapped her arm around Eva's waist and lifted her into the air, cradling her against her chest. Eva's arms encircled Mina's neck, her body continuing to diminish even as they maintained their embrace. The cityscape stretched out beneath them, a shattered landscape that bore witness to their final moments together.

A moment later, Eva was small enough to fit in Mina's palm. Mina gently lifted her, bringing Eva's tiny body up to eye level. "You know what you need to do, Mina." Eva said, her voice barely audible.
"I know." Mina replied, her voice cracking. "It's just… hard. How do you want me to do it? I'll make it quick, so you don't suffer."

"I want you to swallow me." Eva said simply. "That way, I might be able to live on inside of you, like I did in Alicia... Though there's no way of being certain it would work again... My consciousness might transfer to you through the nanobots. It's our only chance."

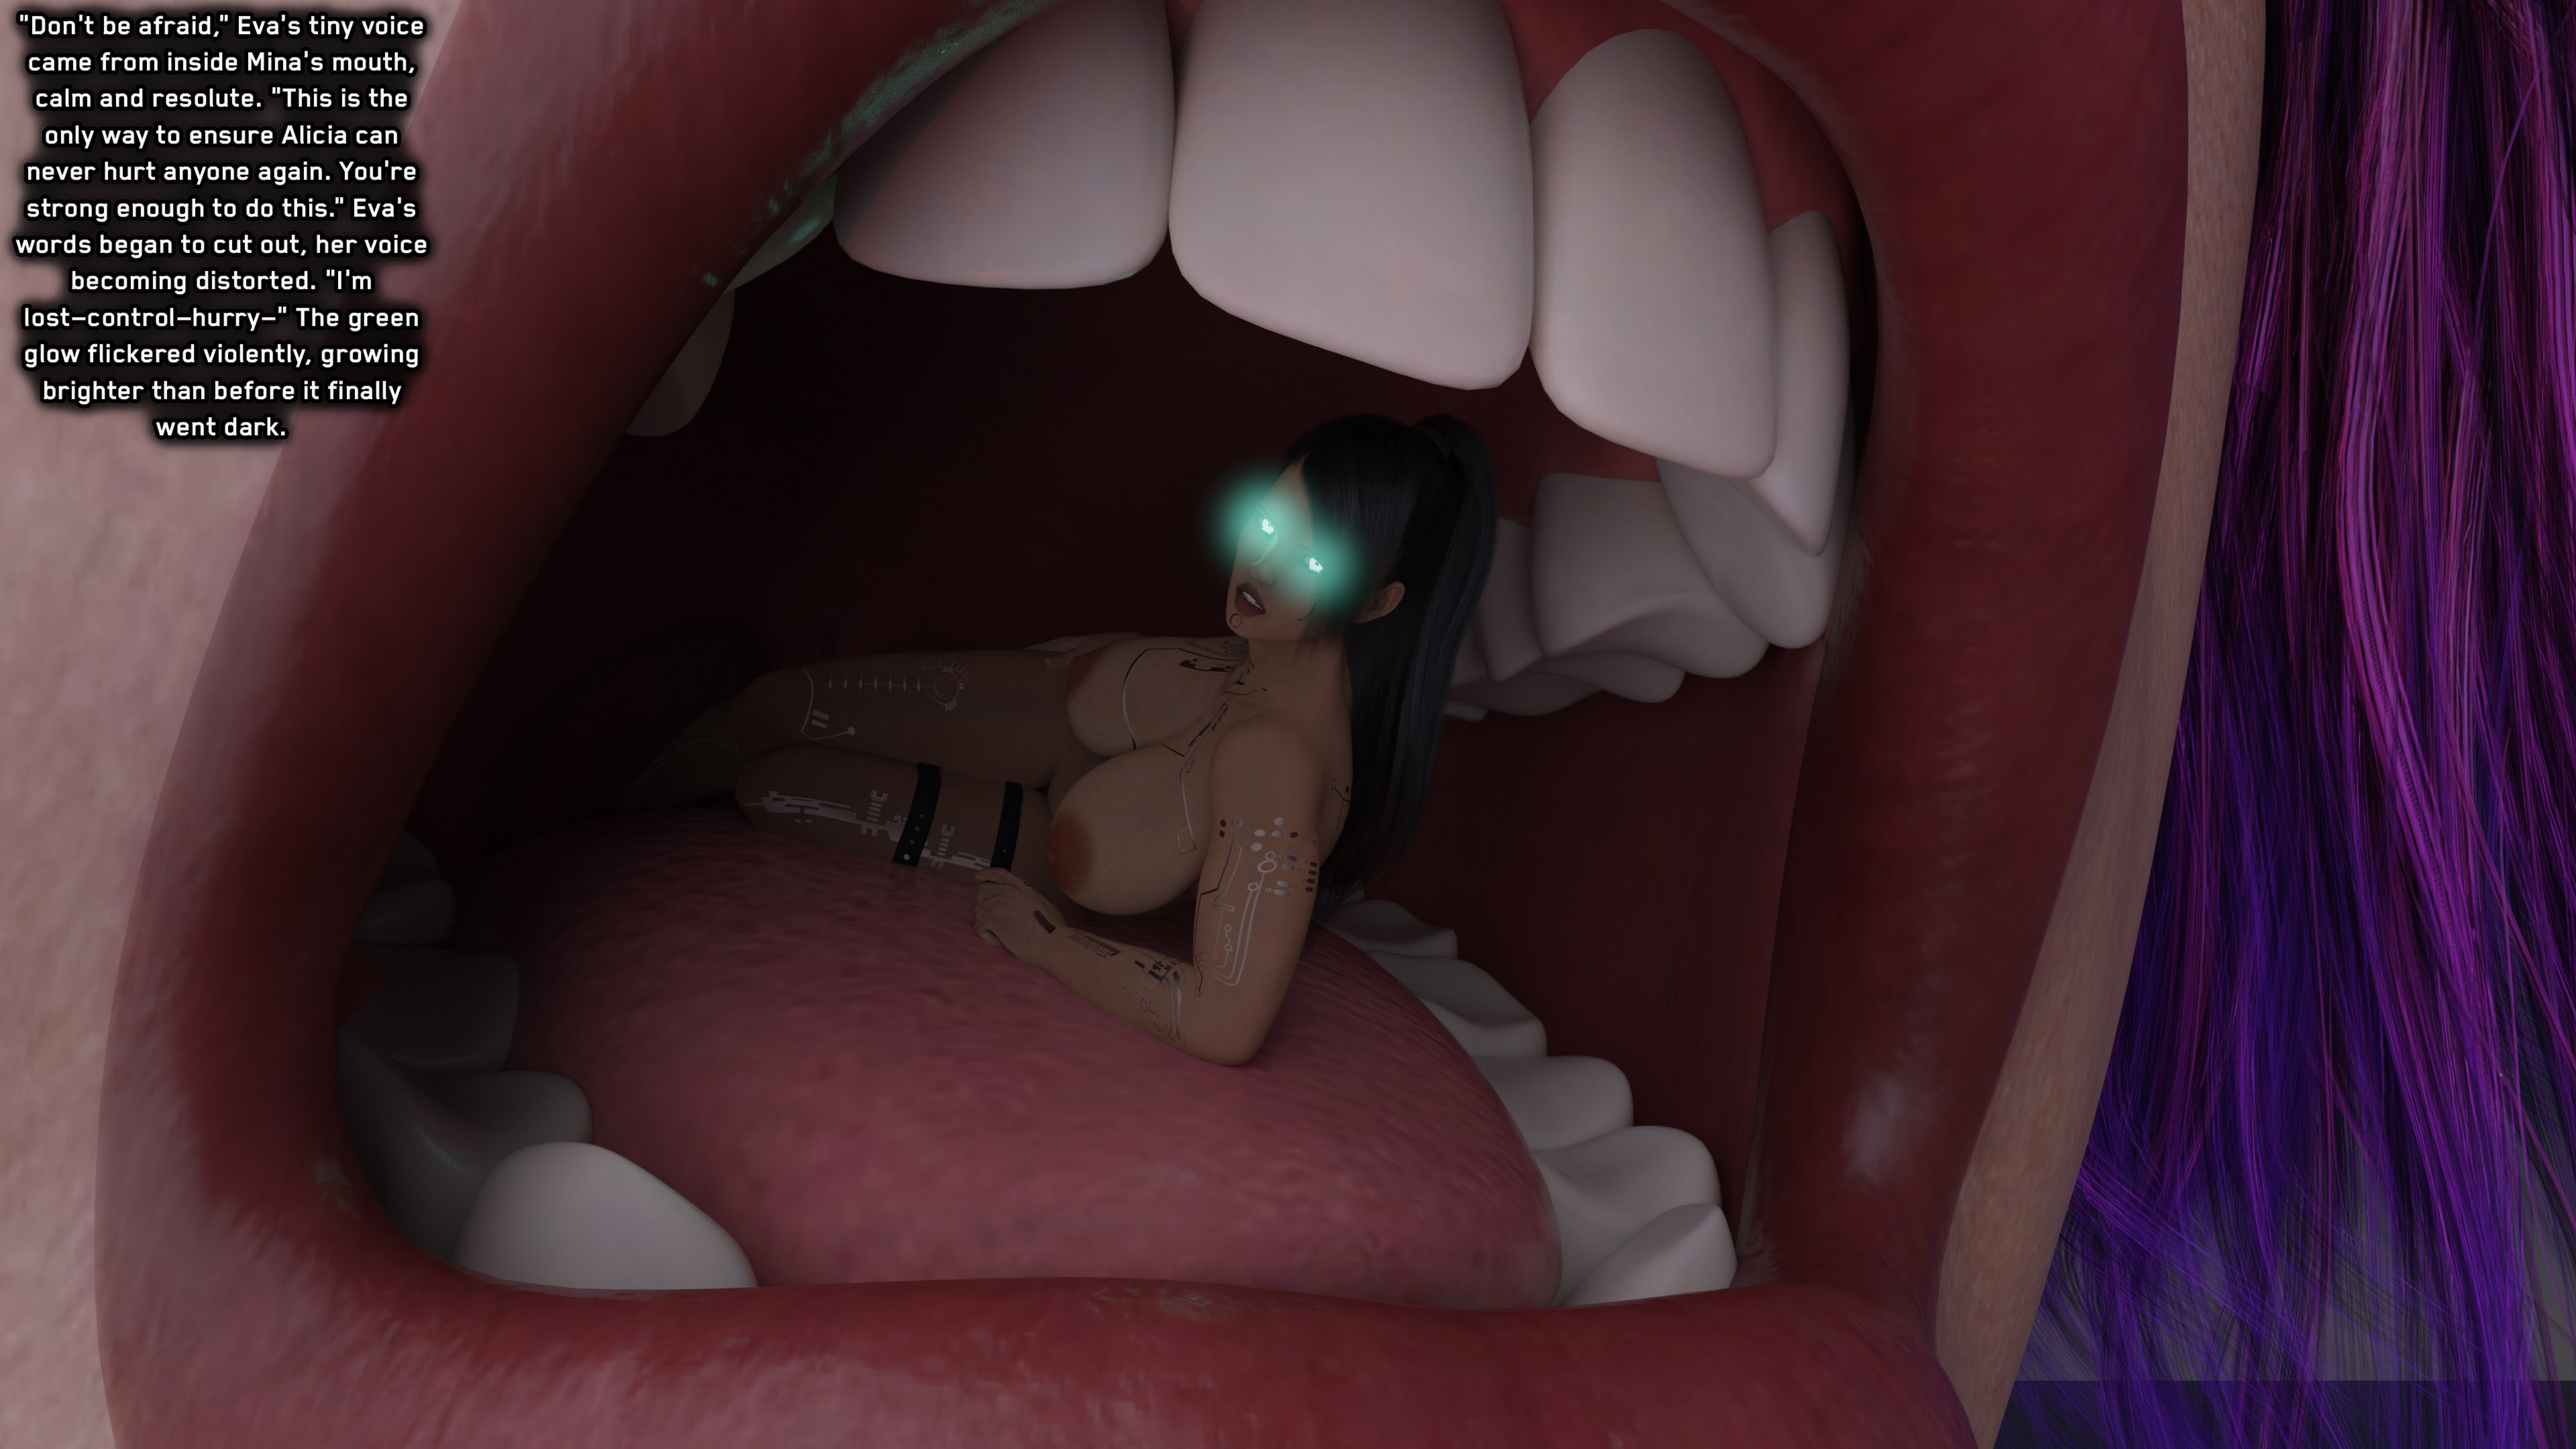

"You're right," Mina acknowledged, holding back tears. "But what if it doesn't work this time? What if you're just gone for good?"
Eva's tiny face showed no fear, only calm acceptance. "Then I'll sacrifice myself. That's a price I'm willing to pay to protect you." The green glow in her eyes flickered again, as she struggled to hold off Alicia. "Now hurry! I can't hold her off for very much longer!"

With trembling fingers, Mina brought Eva closer to her face. She opened her mouth slowly, hesitating as she considered what she was about to do. Eva nodded encouragingly, a small smile on her face despite everything. As Eva's tiny form hovered at the threshold of her lips, Mina whispered "I love you" one last time.

Mina lifted Eva's tiny body up to her mouth, leaving it up to Eva to climb inside. The android did so willingly, accepting her fate without a moment of hesitation.

Mina felt the tiny body settle on her tongue. Eva caressed Mina's tongue, caressing her gently. It was tender, almost reverent, a final act of love between them.

Mina's throat constricted as she tried to swallow, but she couldn't bring herself to complete the act. Her body rebelled against the very idea, refusing to send Eva to her doom.

"Don't be afraid," Eva's tiny voice came from inside Mina's mouth, calm and resolute. "This is the only way to ensure Alicia can never hurt anyone again. You're strong enough to do this." Eva's words began to cut out, her voice becoming distorted. "I'm lost—control—hurry—" The green glow flickered violently, growing brighter than before it finally went dark.

Suddenly, Eva's body flailed on Mina's tongue. "What the fuck?!" Alicia screamed. “Where am-oh my god, this can‘t be happening! Mina, whatever you do, don‘t–"

Mina didn't hesitate any longer. She closed her eyes, clacked her mouth shut, and swallowed hard, feeling the tiny body vanish down her throat in less than a second. Alicia's screams grew more frantic, more desperate as she realized what was happening, but they quickly faded as she disappeared down Mina's esophagus. The sensation was strange; a small lump traveling down her throat, accompanied by the faint, muffled sounds of Alicia's final protests.

Alicia's tiny body continued its journey downward, her struggles growing weaker as she descended deeper into Mina's body. Mina placed a hand on her stomach, feeling a slight movement within before it went still. She closed her eyes, silently saying goodbye to Eva and condemning Alicia to her fate. The woman who had caused so much destruction, who had taken Eva from her, was finally gone.

Within a matter of minutes, Mina felt a strange warmth spreading throughout her body. Alicia's nanobots were being broken down and absorbed into her system, merging with her own. The feeling of raw power surging through her veins was almost overwhelming, like electricity coursing through every cell of her body. The nanobots multiplied exponentially, filling her with strength and potential beyond anything she'd experienced before. The temptation to unleash this power, to see what she was capable of, was nearly irresistible.

Mina gazed out at the devastated cityscape, which already looked so small to her. She could sense that she had the power to grow vastly larger, to become a true goddess far greater than even Alicia would have been capable of. The thought sent a shiver of excitement through her. Almost without conscious decision, her hands began to move downward, gliding across her stomach and hips until they reached between her legs. Her fingers brushed against herself, sending a jolt of pleasure through her body that intensified the power within her. She knew that growing any bigger would cause untold destruction to what remained of the city... but the urge was too powerful to resist.

As Mina's fingers worked against herself, pleasure radiated outward from her core. She could feel her body responding immediately, not just to the physical stimulation but to the nanobots activating in waves throughout her system. Her height began to increase again, slowly at first, then with gathering momentum. The sensation was intoxicating. Growth and pleasure intertwined, each feeding into the other in an escalating cycle of power and ecstasy.

Buildings that had somehow survived the previous devastation now crumbled beneath Mina's expanding body. Her legs stretched outward, crushing entire neighborhoods under their increasing weight.

The destruction was catastrophic, yet somehow distant to Mina's consciousness. It was like mere background noise to the overwhelming sensations coursing through her body. Each structure that fell beneath her was just another reminder of her transcendence beyond human limitations.

Mina leaned back, her massive body coming to rest across what had once been the financial district. Mega-towers that had dominated the skyline were now nothing more than annoying protrusions against her back, crumbling into dust as she shifted her weight.
Mina's hand moved with increasing urgency between her legs. Her massive body trembled with each wave of pleasure, causing seismic tremors that could be felt hundreds of miles away. She grabbed her pussy with both hands, squeezing and kneading as her back arched in mounting ecstasy.

The nanobots responded to her arousal, accelerating her growth even further until her head brushed against the lower atmosphere. The city beneath her was nothing to her now. Just a memory, a footnote, an insignificant detail in the story of her ascension. As Mina's pleasure built toward its inevitable peak, she closed her eyes and surrendered completely to the power that had consumed her, becoming one with the limitless potential that now defined her existence.

Mina's growth accelerated exponentially, as waves of pleasure crashed through her body. The nanobots multiplied at an impossible rate, feeding off her arousal and transforming her with each passing second. Her body expanded in all directions, her skin stretching across miles of terrain as she grew beyond anything the world had ever witnessed. Her fingers, now each the size of skyscrapers, worked frantically between her legs. Each movement devastated what remained of the landscape below.

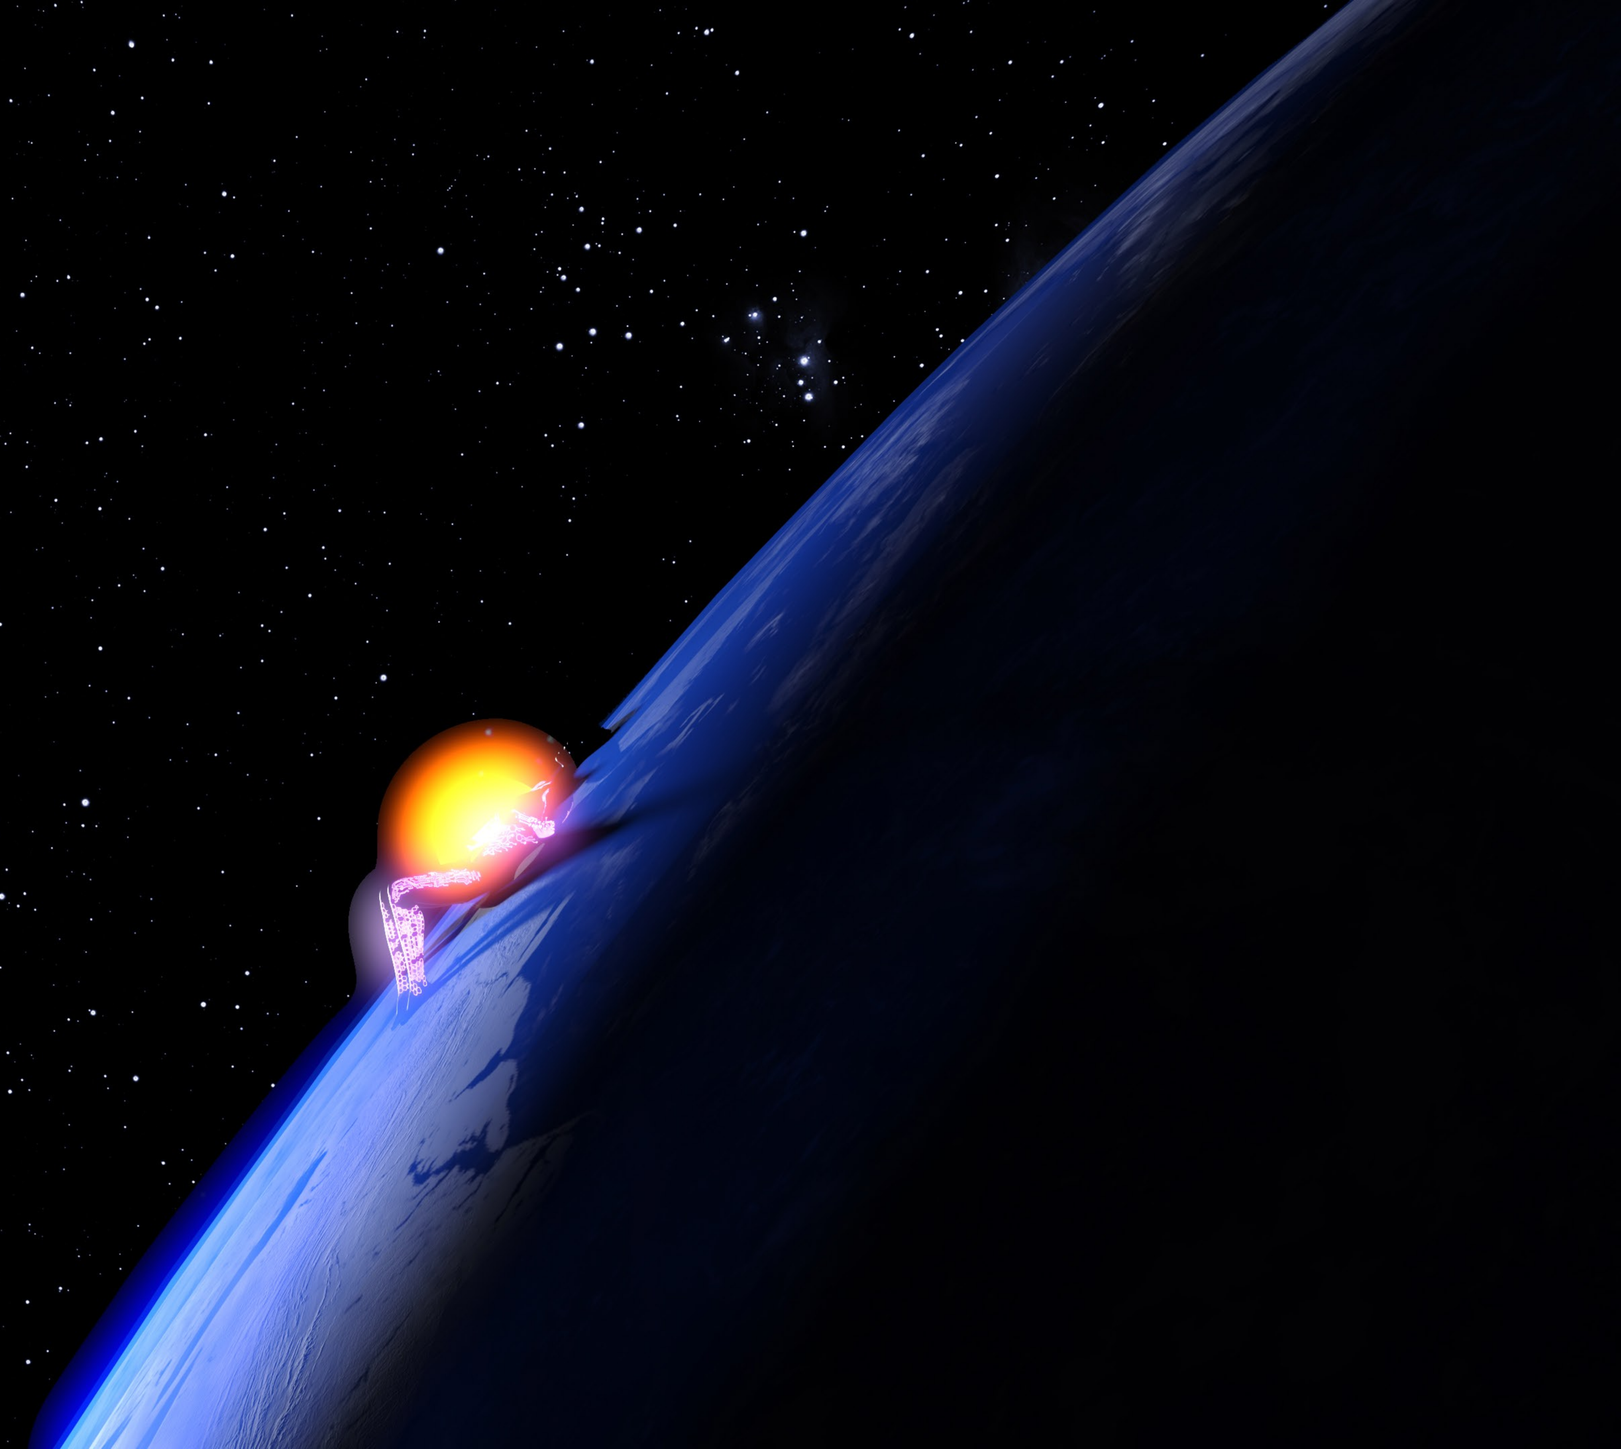

Soon, her body filled most of the San Fernando Valley, her massive form cradled by mountains that now seemed like mere pebbles against her skin. Her thighs spread across neighborhoods and industrial districts, pulverizing everything beneath them into dust. People watching from distant hills could only see parts of her anatomy—a knee rising like a new mountain, the curve of her hip eclipsing the horizon, her breast casting a shadow over them, before they too were buried beneath her.

The bigger she grew, the bigger she wanted to grow. It was an addiction more powerful than any drug, a hunger that could never be satisfied. Each new inch brought fresh waves of euphoria, each mile conquered fueled her desire for more. The nanobots responded to her every whim, rebuilding her body on a scale that defied comprehension.

She could feel the planet itself yielding to her expanding form, the very crust of the earth groaning beneath her weight as she spread herself across its surface. There was no end to this, she realized with mounting excitement. No limit to what she could become.

In time, her body filled much of the state. She was big enough to be seen from space, her form leaving a massive indentation on the surface of the planet. Satellites captured images of her sprawling body, bigger than anything mankind had ever dreamed possible before. Military leaders convened emergency meetings, scientists frantically analyzed data, religious leaders proclaimed the end times—but none of it mattered to Mina. She had transcended such concerns, becoming something beyond human judgment or control.

As her pleasure reached its crescendo, her consciousness expanded beyond the boundaries of her physical form. She felt herself merging with the universe itself, becoming one with everything around her. And then, exhausted by the magnitude of her transformation… she fell asleep.

She awoke hours later... but something had changed. The world around her seemed different somehow. Mina blinked in confusion, struggling to orient herself. After a moment, she realized she was lying in a massive crater. Her body had returned to its normal human size.

The devastation surrounding her stretched for miles in every direction, a testament to what she had become. The entire Mega-City was gone; simply erased from existence by her godlike form. She felt like she should have felt guilty for all the death and destruction she caused... yet part of her wanted to repeat the process all over again. The memory of that power, that freedom, that transcendent pleasure lingered in her mind like an addictive drug, calling her back.

Then, she saw Eva. Her form was translucent, ghostlike, hovering just a few feet away. She wasn't physically present, but her features were unmistakable. The same gentle eyes, the same caring expression that Mina had fallen in love with... not to mention her substantial curves.

Eva's spectral form smiled softly at Mina. "It's me, Eva!"
"Am I going crazy? Or are you really..." Mina's voice trailed off, afraid to hope that some part of Eva had actually survived.

"I'm a part of you now, Mina. I saw everything last night. What you went through, and what happened to the Mega-City..." Eva's ghostly form gestured to the devastation around them.

"Yeah, I... may have gotten a bit carried away. That was probably just a one-time thing." Mina couldn't meet Eva's eyes as she spoke the lie. They both knew it wasn't true. The hunger was still there. Dormant but not gone.

"I don't care about them. I just want you to be happy, Mina. We can rule the world together. Reshape it in our image. It could be beautiful..."

The vision disappeared as suddenly as it had appeared, fading into nothingness before Mina could respond. She was alone again in the massive crater, surrounded by the evidence of her godlike power.

Mina smiled... but she started to get the feeling that she wasn't really alone. Eva was still with her, somehow. And perhaps a part of Alicia too, her consciousness's merged with theirs in some strange symbiosis. The nanobots had connected them all, creating something new and unprecedented.

Yet in spite of it all, Mina had a feeling that there was someone lurking nearby, a presence that wasn't just in her mind. Her fears were confirmed when she heard the sound of rocks falling behind her.

Eva looked back, and saw Daisy walking closer. The hulking amazon was once again an intimidating presence to Mina, and she didn't look happy.
"Daisy, you're alive?" Mina asked. "Hold on a second, we can–ugh!"

Before Mina could finish her sentence, Daisy's massive hand shot out and wrapped around her throat. The amazon's grip was like a steel vise, cutting off Mina's air supply as she lifted her clean off the ground. Mina's feet dangled several feet above the crater floor, kicking uselessly as she struggled against the powerful grip. Daisy's enhanced muscles, products of genetic modification, held her effortlessly in the air.

"You killed my sister," Daisy snarled, her voice cold with fury. "You destroyed my city, my empire, everything I've ever known." Her grip tightened slightly, causing Mina to gasp for what little air she could manage. "Now I'm going to do the same to you. Slowly. Painfully. Just like you deserve."

Mina tried desperately to activate her nanobots, to trigger the growth that had saved her so many times before. But her system was completely drained from her earlier actions. With her remaining strength, she clawed at Daisy's massive hand, managing to loosen her grip just enough to draw breath.

Finally able to speak again, Mina wheezed out her words between gasps. "Daisy, please. Think about this." She looked directly into the amazon's eyes, searching for any hint of reason. "I saw how your sister treated you back at the tower. Like you were just a mindless brute. I bet there were times you thought about doing exactly what I did to her."

Daisy's expression faltered for a moment, her grip loosening slightly as unwelcome memories surfaced. "More often than you might think..." she admitted quietly, her voice losing some of its edge. “But at the end of the day, she was still my sister! And you-"
“If you let me live,“ Mina continued, “you could work with me instead! I’d recognize your talents, Daisy! I could use someone like you by my side."

The towering woman studied Mina's face carefully, as if trying to read her intentions. "Let's say I am considering it.” she said slowly. "But if we are going to work together, you will treat me better than my sister did. She treated me like an underling. A minion. If we work together, we will be partners. Agreed?"

"Sure, whatever! We'll work something out!" Mina said impatiently, still struggling to breathe properly. "Now can you please put me down?"

Daisy released her grip, letting Mina drop to the ground. Mina landed hard on her knees, coughing and rubbing her throat as she tried to recover. Looking up at the towering amazon who still loomed over her, Daisy asked the question that had been burning in her mind since she'd witnessed Mina's transformation.
"Actually… One more request, before we are partners. Do you think I could get some of those nanobots? I admit I was a little… jealous watching you earlier, and I want to grow big. Really, really big. "

Slowly, Mina pushed herself to her feet, brushing dust from her clothes as she regained her composure. A calculating smile spread across her face as she looked up at Daisy. "I was just thinking the same thing. We're going to make a good team, you and I." She said, her voice carrying a hint of the same condescension Sabrina had once used. "So long as you never forget who you owe for that privilege."

Daisy's jaw tightened at the familiar tone, but she pressed on. "Though I would recommend you watch your tone… I will let it slide if you give me what I've asked for."

Mina wasn't bothered. Daisy admitting that she had wanted to take revenge on her sister only made her more enthusiastic for this partnership. The musclebound amazon valued loyalty, and she was already envisioning the countless possibilities that would come from having such a subservient giantess at her command.

"Then we're in agreement." Mina said, placing her hands onto her hips. "I think you'll make for an amazing giant, personally. How does... fifty feet sound?"
"More."
"We'll talk about it." Mina grinned. "Welcome aboard."

THE END

JACKOFBULLETS GIANTESS COMICS
ego ostendam tibi desperandam

RFD COMICS
PATREON.COM/REDFIREDOG
GUMROAD.COM/REDFIREDOG
TONS OF GREAT 3D GIANTESS COMICS!